Indiana "Ham" Radio Operator Gives Us A Lesson In Worldwide Friendship

VIRTUALLY ALL of tall, soft-voiced Paul Hinkle's 20 years as a State Trooper have been confined to one Hoosier county — but he has friends in more than 200 nations throughout the world.

Raised in East Chicago, Paul was assigned to Lake County when he joined the State Police in 1938. Except for a three-year World War II stint as a flying Navy radio man in the Pacific, he's had the same beat ever since — prowling well over a half-million miles into every nook and cranny of the tight, rolling Calumet region of Indiana.

THIS SCARCELY makes for world-wide friendships and with a wife, Dorothy, and two children — Eddie, 15, and Mary, 8 — Paul's trooper pay permits no lugal gadding.

Nevertheless, Hinkle has traded hit-chat and correspondence with an Austrian archduke in Vienna, a French legionnaire in Laos, a Czech engineer in Outer Mongolia, an Australian flier in Hongkong, an English adventurer sailing round the world, and scientific and military people in Spitzbergen, the Arctic, and both poles.

WITH DOROTHY'S blessing, he has two girl friends in darkest Africa. He's gabbed with Tom Christian, descendant of the founty mutineers who dwells on remote, far-off Pitcairn Island.

In all, Paul has "met" more than 2,000 big and little people from all walks of life in 228 countries — and these fascinating, far-flung friendships cost him less than a buck a week, for postage and power.

Paul is an amateur radio operator — a "ham" with a top record

Christmas Volume Of Mail Same As Last Year

Fine Job Done At Post Office

According to Harold Fitterling, assistant postmaster, the volume of holiday mail this year was approximately the same as last year with an estimated 120,000 pieces (letters and greeting cards) handled in the ten days preceding Christmas.

The parcel post volume increased slightly over last year. Everything went smoothly and all mail was dispatched the same day with very minor exceptions.

TOMMYE GLAZE ENTERTAINS ARMED FORCES IN EUROPE DURING THE HOLIDAYS

The Culver Citizen was mighty happy to receive a beautiful Christmas greeting via air mail from Culver's wonderful Tommye Glaze, "Miss Indiana" of 1960. It was sent from Stuttgart, Germany, and wished all of her friends here a very Merry Christmas.

The golden-voiced singer is a member of the Miss Atlanta Show, a talented group of 18 students from all over the United States, which was selected to entertain our troops in Germany, France, and Italy during the holidays.

Tommye writes: "Hi! Not doing too much sightseeing, but am having fun in the snow — performing and eating German pastries. 'Miss North Carolina' is in the group and I have found her most charming and we have really gotten acquainted sharing our experiences in the 'Miss America' Pageant at Atlantic City last September."

TRI KAPPA PECANS still on sale at The Citizen's front counter. Please help the sorority raise money for charitable purposes.

Howard W. Sams, Summer Resident, Makes Magnificent Gift Of Books To Culver Public Library

Howard W. Sams, Indianapolis Publisher

Culver's Carnegie Library recently has received one of the most significant gifts in its history — a 12-volume set of Marquis biographical reference books, all handsomely bound, and contained in its own wooden shelf. Donor of the $200 collection is one of our most enthusiastic Lake Maxinkuckee summer residents, Howard Waldemar Sams, head of the 122-year-old Bobbs-Merrill book publishing firm of Indianapolis and the Hoesier State's most successful publisher in the fast-growing electronics field.

Attached to the Marquis Biographical Library shelf is an engraved gold plate which reads: IN MEMORY OF COL. ROBERT ROSSOW. Strange to say, Mr. Sams knew Colonel Rossow, who died April 11, 1960, only by reputation as a man who had added to the world fame of the Culver Military Academy through the years. The Colonel's community contributions were also notable and it was Mr. Sams' strong feeling that his good deeds should be acknowledged and recognized in a permanent manner.

The Marquis book shelf contains the current edition of "Who's Who in America"; three volumes of "Who Was Who in America" (listings of prominent deceased people from 1897 to 1960); "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry"; first edition of "Who's Who in the Midwest" and three other U. S. sections; and the new first edition of "Who's Who of American Women." Bound indices of all these volumes are provided by the publisher, Marquis-Who's Who, Inc. of Chicago.

She qualified for the national event by winning first place in the Indiana speed championships.

20 Below Zero Reported In Burr Oak

Lake Maxinkuckee Freezes Over

Last week, for the first time this season, Lake Maxinkuckee was completely frozen over during the bone-chilling cold wave which struck the Culver area and most of the country.

However many local residents reported far lower temperatures including a Burr Oak man who swears that his thermometer showed 20 below about 5 a.m. last Friday.

Many cars were frozen or stalled in the heavy snow which fell in the Culver area starting late Monday night and reaching a depth of about 7 inches by Wednesday morning.

"BUS" FRENCH IN TOWN FOR THE HOLIDAYS; TELLS NICKNAME SOURCE

Ora Connor, better known locally as "Bus" French, is spending the holidays in Culver, having arrived Dec. 15 on a 15-day leave from the Indiana State Soldiers' Home at Lafayette. He must be anticipating a busy social season during 1961 as he was seen last Friday coming out of the bank with eight new calendars under his arm.

Mr. French related to Culver friends how he came to get his unusual nickname. When he was a boy, "Buster Brown," was the most popular comic strip in the Sunday paper. He was such an ardent fan of the strip that he called every Monday morning at the drug store to "borrow" the paper. In due course the drug store owners and customers began calling him "Buster," which was shortened to "Bus" as time went on.

Miss Virginia Reed, a junior at Hoover College, Hanover, Ind., is spending the holidays with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Donald Reed, and brothers, Charles and Donald.

New State Office Building A Real Achievement

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 26 — "Consolidated state government in one centralized area is finally possible in Indiana," Governor Harold W. Handley said today in commenting on the prospective windup of his four-year administration.

"Until the new state office building was approved, on my request, by the 1959 Legislature, Indiana was conducting its government operations from more than 20 buildings scattered throughout Indianapolis.

"Maximum economy and real efficiency were impossible under such conditions, for they consumed many man-hours in liaison and necessitated much laborious transfer of documents and supplies.

"For more than half a century the Governors of Indiana have been lamenting the fact that the government had outgrown the State House, but until now nothing had actually been done about it.

Largest Of Kind In U.S.
"Preparing for the new office building — the largest of its kind in America — we made a complete inventory of all state property, from paper clips to highway bulldozers.

"We established one central registry for the titles of all state-owned automobiles, both passenger cars and trucks.

"We drafted detailed plans for operation of a motor pool, which will eliminate a number of automobiles now used by various state departments and thus save considerable of the taxpayers' money.

"These automobiles have been carefully assigned to departments for official use and in many cases were essential for communication between various offices. A motor pool will centralize maintenance as well as providing satisfactory service for all those actually needing their use. Such a motor pool is already in operation for the Attorney General's office.

Everything Is Centralized
"We planned for a centralized stock room, a centralized office for the processing of all printed and reproduced material, a central telephone system, and a central mailing room.

"We established a central data processing department and combined IBM operations so that a maximum potential is being realized from the machines.

"The sole purpose of this program is to increase efficiency and decrease the same operational methods that are necessary in successful private business.

"It would have been futile to put these plans into operation until the office building was ready. But now it has been completed — in record time — and it will be completely occupied by spring.

"We know that we are turning over a business-like operation to the new administration. We know that hereafter the basic house-keeping of the state government should cost less than before, and that operations can be expedited because all of these administrative departments are under one roof.

"The various elected officials, the Legislature, and the high courts will continue to occupy the State House. But the State House as well as the State Library and its files are now connected by tunnels with the Office Building, and the new Employment Security Building is close by.

"A Real Christmas Present"

"This new office building has been built at less cost than any present-day comparable structure. As I said when it was dedicated Dec. 20, it is a real Christmas present to the people of Indiana.

"No longer are we paying big rent to a number of landlords. We are buying our office building on time payments, just like many a Hoosier family has financed the purchase of its own home."

Governor Handley spent the holiday weekend with his family, including his parents and Mrs. Handley's mother, at the executive mansion.

More Superhighways Opened

Last Monday Governor Handley cut the ribbon to open formally 11 more miles of new interstate superhighway. The latest opening is on new Interstate 74 (U.S. 135) from the Illinois line to Covington and Veedersburg, bringing the total interstate mileage to 114 miles.

Thursday Governor Handley participated in signing of the contract for a bridge across White River on West 38th Street in Indianapolis. This project had been discussed for more than 40 years. It will be a joint construction by both the Indiana State Highway Department and the Marion County Commissioners.

Governor Handley pointed out that the 38th Street bridge will open up for suburban growth an entire new area in northwestern Marion County and adjoining counties and also will be of service to all state motorists as a bypass around downtown Indianapolis.

Also on Thursday Governor Handley participated in the annual Christmas gift party given by State House personnel for underprivileged children. Each child who came to the party received a toy and an article of clothing. The party is conducted each year under Salvation Army auspices.

County Schools Get Plenty From Railroad Taxes

HAMMOND — Marshall County school children received about $255,777 worth of education in 1959 by courtesy of Indiana's railroads.

Walter W. Weber, chairman of the Railroad Community Committee of the Calumet area, one of three Indiana arms of the Eastern Railroad Presidents' Conference, revealed that this proportion of approximately $443,444 paid the county in railroad property taxes went towards the support of public schools.

$6.12 Tax Rate
Weber revealed that the figures were an approximation due to the fact that the 1959 figures, or tax assessments, which were just paid in 1960, are based on an average tax rate of valuation which amounts to $6.12 per $100 for the amount of those taxes which go to the support of schools.

He pointed out that Indiana's railroads paid a total of approximately $19,621,896 in property taxes in 1959. "Of this total," Weber said, approximately $11,317,858 was distributed to public schools on a statewide basis."

An Unfair Tax Load

"Indiana's railroads consider it a privilege to make this contribution to the local community," he said. "However, taxwise, we feel we are paying more than our share."

He pointed out that highways, airports and airways, and waterways — all paid for by public tax funds — are provided for railroad competitors.

"At the same time," he explained, "railroads themselves are taxed for owning and maintaining their track right-of-ways, and for maintaining and renovating their depot and terminal facilities."

Christmas day guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Thomas and children were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Powers and daughter, Marjorie, and Mrs. Trula McKee, Vern McKee was an evening caller.

The transient display advertising rate of The Citizen is only 70 cents per column inch.

Culver Indians
Lose To Scrappy
Walkerton, 81-69

Play Bremen There
Friday, Jan. 6

By EARL D. MISHLER

The Culver Indians were defeated by the scrappy Walkerton Indians here last Tuesday night, 81 to 69. The loss evened up the season's mark at 4-4, with a two and a half week Christmas layoff facing the Indians next.

Coach Tom Benbrook's forces jumped out in front early, grabbing leads of 22-14 and 37-32 at the first and second quarter stops. But the peppy visitors, with only one six-footer on the floor, chopped up Culver's ineffective zone defense in the second half. Led by hard-driving Jerry Hostetter and sharp-shooting Jim Niemasik, Walkerton cut the Culver lead to 51-58 after three quarters.

Davis And Overmyer Score
Larry Davis and Lance Overmyer, who sparked the Indians to a comeback win over Rochester last week, led the scoring for Culver with 22 and 21 points, respectively. Niemasik and Hostetter, were high point men for Walkerton who scored 25 and 22, respectively.

The absence of Dillon, who found that his sprained foot was not ready for action, hurt the Indians, especially when Walkerton employed a full-court press in the second half. Gary probably will be ready to go after the Christmas vacation. It is obvious that Culver is the team to beat in next month's County Tourney, if all hands are healthy.

Papooses Win First Game
The Papooses chalked up win number one of the season by stomping Walkerton's B team, 47-34. Rick Ervin hit 16 points to lead the attack, while Steve Burch paced the losers with 12 markers.

Next on the Culver schedule is Bremen, there on Friday, Jan. 6.

Good Time of Year To Make Your Will

Less Than You Think!

By ROGER W. BABSON
 No. 1 U. S. Economist

Babson Park, Mass. — While Babson and I were in Europe last fall, three of our intimate friends passed away.

Two of these I knew had made no will despite my urgings.

One had promised he would do so "when he had time." He bequeathed the expense and felt it really was not necessary. Let me tell you those three cases.

Case No. 1 Interesting
 In this case, the man left a wife, three children, and several nieces and sisters who had been. The wife assumed she'd get all of her husband's estate and then will it to their children. But she did not. Since her husband left no will, she was only one-third; the remainder was divided equally among the children. Nothing was done for the deceased's brothers or sisters or cousins. This is should be.

He Left No Wife
 The second man left no wife — two children as well as brothers, sisters, and cousins. All of the estate went to his children outright, in equal proportions, or to their sisters or other relatives. One child 23 years of age had the money outright; since the other was a minor, his share was entrusted to the guardian appointed by the Court.

A Wife But No Children
 The third man left a wife but no children; he did have brothers, sisters and cousins. His estate exceeded $100,000. The wife will be given the $25,000 which she would automatically receive from an estate valued at $25,000 or over. In this case she also will get a second $25,000. The remainder will go to the man's brothers and sisters or their heirs who are now springing up in all directions.

The Oldest Legal Document
 Originally when a man died all his property went to the oldest son. He was supposed to take care of his mother and to secure work for any other children. Then land owners sometimes died without leaving any children. Anticipating this, the man left a written document outlining his wishes or "will" at his death. These wills were considered sacred by the Roman Courts, and their policy and purpose were adopted by the English Courts and carried to America.

Early Babson Family Records
 I have recently been seeking copies of early records of the 40 families who settled Cape Ann (which now comprises Gloucester and Rockport, Mass.).

The very earliest documents are the wills of these inhabitants around 1620-30.

The first Babson arrived in Salem from London after 60 days in a small sailing vessel. She was a widow named Isabel and she came to Cape Ann in 1637. She was very enterprising and — as there were no doctors — served as a midwife.

Also, since there were no lawyers, she helped the fathers make wills. Although these were written on scraps of paper — perhaps on birch bark — they were held very sacred and history still records their contents.

Cost Of Making A Will
 To enable your life's savings to go as you would like you should have your local lawyer make up your will. If it is simple, namely leaving all to your wife, he may not charge you more than $20. If it is more complicated, leaving property perhaps to your wife, in trust — allowing her the use of it and the income during her lifetime with provision for equal division among your children or their heirs — then your lawyer will charge more. He will charge according to the amount of his time you take.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

An Interesting Letter From An Original Culver Cadet

Chicago, Ill.

Editor, CITIZEN:

It was good to see you again at the recent annual dinner of the Indiana Society of Chicago and I appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending me the clipping relative to that event from the Dec. 7 issue of your newspaper.

I was pleased with your reference to me in your news article going back to 1894-95 when I was in the original corps of cadets at Culver Military Academy.

That was a long time ago; but the burning of the school building in February, 1895, is still vivid in my mind.

My best wishes for the Christmas season and the New Year.

FLETCHER M. DURBIN
 Editor's note: Original CMA Cadet Durbin is the son of the late Winfield T. Durbin of Anderson, Governor of Indiana from 1901 to 1905. He is the senior past president of the famed Indiana Society of Chicago, having served during the 1926-27 term.

Why Are The Public Library's Rest Rooms Locked?

Editor, CITIZEN:

I am burned up!

From my vantage point I watch several people each day make the long trek to the public library's rest rooms to obtain personal relief. They are both disappointed and shaken up to find the men's and women's toilet doors locked along the north side of the building.

Recently I watched a very elderly man from Delong make the long journey from the Easter-day Funeral Home, apparently guided by his grandson across the busy street, only to find that he couldn't be admitted. Worst of all it was his wife's funeral he was attending!

As a taxpayer I think that something should be done about this situation.

tion of estates where there is no will are subject to change. The cases cited are based upon the laws in effect in Massachusetts, as of Jan. 1, 1957. When the time comes for settling your estate, these laws may be quite different.

The best way to assure distribution of your property exactly as you wish is to have your will drawn now by your lawyer.

Remember Churches and Hospitals

This also enables you to make some donations to your local church and hospital, which everyone should do.

To provide for the carrying out of your wishes, your will should name an Executor in whose efficiency, stability, and responsibility you have confidence.

A HANDY MAIL SLOT in The Citizen's front office door welcomes your news items for next week's paper 24 hours a day.

Sic Semper Subsidies

Families in the Canadian province of Newfoundland generally are large ones. Large families, with many children to send to school, have to buy a lot of textbooks.

To relieve the expense on parents, the Newfoundland government had been paying 50 per cent of the cost of the books. Last June it decided to increase the subsidy to 90 per cent. The decision caused a near panic when school opened last fall.

What happened was that thousands of school children began demanding new textbooks instead of digging out thumb-nail-ed books of other years. A shortage developed, and there were cases of youngsters obtaining new books and selling old sets at "black market" prices.

"Because we tried to be generous, we got rooked," Education Minister G. A. Frecker said.

This is an old story with subsidies. Only the places, people, and commodities change.

When the U. S. Congress opens January 3, there will be many proposals for subsidies of many types for many groups.

At this Christmas season it would be well to reflect that Congress isn't Santa Claus — and that whenever subsidies are involved, most grown-ups act like children.

The effectiveness of reliance on God's power will be illustrated in Christian Science services this Sunday.

David's trust in God alone in his victory over Goliath is featured in one of the Scriptural accounts to be read. The Lesson-Sermon entitled "God" includes this passage from I Samuel (17: 45): "Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied."

This citation will be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is no power apart from God. Omnipotence has all-power, and to acknowledge a n y other power is to dishonor God" (228:25-27).

The Golden Text is from Deuteronomy (6:4): "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord."

COSTLY CLEANUP — In a fall cleanup around his home in Kentland, Arthur Kenney, decided it was time to get rid of a bird nest that had been built in the apparatus that raises and lowers an awning. He rolled up a piece of paper, lit it with a match and set fire to the nest. The nest burned and so did the awning.

All The Livelong Day

Henry Suburban reaches out at 7 o'clock of a wintry morning to turn off the alarm clock (price: $5; tax, 50c). He pushes down the electric blanket (price: $28; tax, 84c), climbs sleepily out of bed. He walks across the bedroom floor of his house (price: $12,000; annual property tax, $209) and switches on the electricity, lighting a bulb (price: 33c; tax, 2c).

To music from a bedroom radio (price: $30; tax, $1.80), Henry shaves with his electric razor (see above). As a radio newscaster reports that Henry's state is preparing to increase income taxes and impose a general sales tax on everything anyone buys, Henry slaps a handful of bay rum (price: $1.30; tax, 13c) across his jowls.

He dresses quickly, hurriedly fastening cuff links (price:
$5; tax, 50c) and tie clasp (price: $3; tax, 30c), puts on his Swiss wrist watch (price: $60; tax, $6), and rushes down stairs. Tucked under one arm is a leather briefcase (price: $25; tax, $2.50) which carries papers from his real estate office, including one deed (property valued at $3,000; stamp tax, $3.30).

In the kitchen he's just in time to snatch two slices of bread (at least 151 hidden taxes) from the electric toaster (price:
$16; tax, 48c), lift his coffee from the gas stove (price: $190; tax, $5.70), and grab a glass of fruit juice from the refrigerator (price: $300; tax, $9).

A glance out of the window shows it's begun to snow, so he calls to his wife (marriage license: $2) to telephone (monthly telephone bill: $12; tax, $1.20) for a taxi. Too many other people want taxis on a snowy morning, so Henry gets out his own car (price: $2,500; total taxes $518) and drives (operator's license: $3) to the railroad station.

Henry relaxes at the station with a cigarette (price per pack: 13c; tax, 15c), lit by a match (tax: 2c per 1,000). Aboard the train, he settles down to a hand of bridge with three cronies, using of course, a deck of cards (price: 40c; tax, 13c).

In the city on his way to the office, Henry stops to buy a roll of camera film (price: 40c; tax, 2c) that he promised his son (registration of birth: $1), and the lipstick (price: $1; tax, 10c) he promised his wife. Because there are friends coming to Henry's house in the evening, he buys a bottle of whiskey (price: $3.40; tax, $2.10).

Arriving eventually at the office, Henry sighs (no tax) and settles to a day's work (annual income: $7,500; Federal and state income tax, $986). If he works hard for the rest of his life, he will be able to provide the government with a handsome slice of inheritance tax. And if he dies in a state that is fiscally tolerant, he can take comfort in the thought that his casket — provided it costs less than $100 — will be exempt from any sales tax.

LIVE SPOOK — A Hendricks County woman, Mrs. Cleo Buis of Stilesville, didn't know what she was letting herself in for when she gave her grand nephews, Wallace and Rodney Watts, permission to use a shed in the rear of her home for a Sunday School class party. The boys planned a ghost walk and among other properties they hung a life-sized cardboard skeleton in the shed. They also told their aunt they intended to stuff a dummy man and hang the effigy from a rafter. When Mrs. Buis went to the shed to inspect the party layout she was startled out of her wits when she stumbled over a real live man. It was a hobo who had taken up lodging for the night in the shed. After explaining the man went on his way leaving Mrs. Buis exclaiming, "That's the reallest ghost I ever saw."

"Hoosier At Large"

of distant contacts.

ENCOURAGED BY HIS dad, a railroad telegrapher now retired, and by a cousin, Ernest Thornhill, who operated radios on Great Lakes ships, Paul built his first "rig" in 1928 — a three-tube receiver and five-watt transmitter.

At 13, he got the first "ham" license issued in East Chicago. Before finishing high school, he earned WAS (worked all states) and WAC (worked all continents) cards from the American Radio Relay League.

RADIO REMAINED Hinkle's hobby after he married Dorothy Wells in 1940, and his very amiable, good-humored wife learned early to tolerate it.

"One night, while still a dewy bride, I made a special rice pudding for dessert," Dorothy chuckled. "Paul was trying for some distant contact. He quit long enough to gulp supper — but not the dessert. His rig was in the sunroom then and I kept yapping at him to come and eat the pudding." She paused, grinning. "Finally, without saying a word, he came to the table, took the dish, dumped it firmly into the garbage container, and went back to his set."

"AND," LAUGHED PAUL, "we've gotten along swell ever since!"

After War II, Paul acquired his present long-range rig — a rotating beam antenna, 12-tube receiver and self-built, 400-watt transmitter.

With it he soon got a Century Club certificate — given to hams who make confirmed contacts in 100 countries.

Then he sought the hardest ham award — a WAZ (worked all zones) card.

TO WIN A WAZ card, a ham must work at least one station in each of 49 world zones — including several remote areas where radios are rare.

By mid-1957, Paul had QSL (confirmation) cards from all but Zone 23 — Outer Mongolia, where there was only one "ham," a Czech engineer who used a portable, 20-watt rig.

"He wasn't on the air often," Hinkle said. "It took me eight months to catch him working another station. When he finished, I crossed my fingers and called. He answered . . . and six months later I got his QSL card . . . and then my WAZ card."

At the time, only 662 WAZ cards had been awarded — and the U.S. alone has about 50,000 hams.

AS A TROOPER, PAUL works both day and night shifts which allows spare time at his rig around the clock — ideal for transcending the world's time zones.

"Usually I tinker an hour or so after going off duty," he said. "For me, it's a perfect way to unwind and relax. And you meet such interesting people . . ."

Oddly enough, Paul's son has scant interest in radio, but his eight-year-old Mary is eagerly learning code.

"Eddie likes boats and the outdoors — like his mother," Paul laughed, "Dorothy dotes on camping and we take many family trips.

When they sally forth, Paul tucks a portable rig into their camping trailer. When they reach the woods, Dorothy and Eddie go fishing and Paul and Mary fiddle with radio dials.

THERE'S A SERIOUS side to this quiet, sincere trooper's hobby, too. Hams everywhere do much to promote fellowship and understanding. Paul has conversed with a dozen or more Russian hams . . . and countless others behind the Iron Curtain. To them he sends a QSL card that pictures a world map and says simply: "Worldwide Friendship W9ABB . . . Paul Hinkle, 102 W. Second St., Hobart, Indiana, U.S.A."

Worldwide Friendship . . . how badly it's needed! Not only during the Christmas holidays but during every day of the year.

ANNOUNCING
NEW IDEA Flail-Type Spreader

*Patented

SPREADS MANURE EVENLY... EVEN IF IT'S FROZEN!

WEATHER'S NO PROBLEM WITH THIS 130 BU. FLAIL SPREADER

THE SECRETS IN THE FLAILS. Undershot action throws manure down and back for an unusually even, 80-90" wide pattern, regardless of cross wind. Flails are powered through a Warner bevel gear box and roller chain drive.

SHREDS FINE, SPREADS EVEN. See that pattern? The NEW IDEA flail spreader handles frozen manure or sloppy manure without build-up in sub-zero weather. Easy-to-reach lever gives 5 conveyor speeds, plus neutral.

■ NEW IDEA proudly announces an all-new flail-type spreader which does an excellent even-spreading job in sub-zero weather, or on shirtsleeve days. A large steel hood covers the flails for maximum safety and keeps flying manure low where the wind cannot carry it. We tested it on our torture track and tested it on farms in sub-zero weather to prove its ability to spread sloppy manure without build-up, as well as spread frozen manure.

The NEW IDEA Flail Spreader has a

130 bushel capacity, and a low 53 $\frac{3}{4}$ " profile for easy loading with barn cleaner or hydraulic loader. It has a water-repellent Penta-treated box, full-length steel flares, and many other long life features. Heavy-duty conveyor is standard; extra heavy is optional. Only NEW IDEA offers this years-ahead spreader and dares to back it up with a full-year guarantee the same as on all NEW IDEA spreaders. See it at your NEW IDEA dealer's—\$195 down on the NEW IDEA Finance Plan buys it!

You'll need to feed some hay if there's a snow cover on the ground. However, don't feed more than cattle will clean up. This increases your costs. Records of Indiana beef cow owners show a ration consisting entirely of premium quality legume hay would cost about $31 per head for a wintering period of five months. When only enough hay was fed to meet minimum nutritional requirements, wintering costs were about $26 or a savings of $5 a head.

If cows cannot get sufficient protein when there's a snow cover on the ground, feed some protein. The owner of these cows has spread protein cubes on the ground with the hay being fed. Once the hay is cleaned up it's easy for the cows to pick up the protein cubes.

Making complete use of crop residues can be a big help in stretching feed supplies. Besides, the cattle will pick up what little grain was left in the field. If you're interested in getting satisfactory gains on this type of feed you'll need to also provide some protein, though. Several companies now have protein blocks available that work well for cattle grazing stalk fields. Generally you can figure the cattle will consume about one pound of protein daily.

you can REDUCE BEEF COW WINTERING COSTS

A study of beef cow owners' records in this part of the country shows returns may vary as much as $100 per cow. There are many reasons for this but one of them is costs in wintering the herd. Farmer records show this cost can vary from as low as $25 a cow to as much as $75, depending on the type of wintering rations used.

Many Midwest farmers feed more and better feeds to their beef cow herds during winter than is really necessary. You must meet the minimum nutritional requirements in order to produce a profitable calf crop and maintain good cow potential for future calf crops. However, this can often be done by using more low quality forage crops and crop residues.

Grain is not required in the wintering ration of beef cows that produce feeder calves. A study of over 5,000 calves from commercial cow herds in Missouri indicates no significant increase in daily gains, weaning weights or percentage of calf crop by feeding grain in the beef cow wintering ration. In fact, breeders have found that if cows are too fat they have more calving trouble than thinner cows. When grain is fed it will only mean an increase in wintering costs.

Just what are the minimum nutritional requirements of a brood cow? The following table will give you an idea of the requirements and how these can be supplied.

Meeting A Beef Cow's Daily Food Requirements

Daily Requirements To Winter A 1,100-lb. Cow	Contents of Various Rations, Daily
	15 lbs. good alfalfa hay daily	18 lbs. straw + 2 lbs. molasses + 1/2 lb. alfalfa + 1/2 lb. protein	5 lbs. hay + 30 lbs. corn silage
Dry matter, lbs.	18.0	13.5	19.0
TDN, lbs.	9.0	7.6	9.0
Dig. Protein, lbs.	0.8	1.5	0.3
Carotene, mg.	55	123	57.2
			215

A full maintenance ration requires 0.8 pound of digestible protein and nine pounds of total digestible nutrients for an 1,100-pound cow. If these requirements are met, you'll not have to worry much about dry matter requirements. Cows will browse on dry grass, if weather is open, and fill requirements.

All rations in the table are adequate to meet the requirements of the beef cow and keep her in fairly good shape. In extremely open weather you may want to cut back a little on the daily supplemental feed as cattle will be picking up some feed from pastures and stalk fields.

One problem you may run into when trying to stretch winter feed supplies is vitamin A deficiency. It can cause cows to abort. Vitamin A is supplied through carotene contained in grain and roughage. If you're feeding a roughage extremely low in carotene content, such as straw, deficiencies can occur quite easily. Best safeguard is to feed some alfalfa hay or alfalfa cubes. It can make quite a difference in your calf crop percentage next spring.

Crop residues offer a good opportunity to stretch stored feed supplies. But if you're grazing cattle on corn stalk fields or even wheat stubble you'll want to provide some extra protein. Tests in South Dakota indicate that feeding one pound of 40% protein cubes to cattle on winter ranges will carry them through winter in reasonably good shape. In these tests no supplemental feed, other than protein, was fed except when snow cover prevented grazing. Based on this you should be able to carry a cow four months at a cost of about $5 a head for supplemental feed.

If there's a full cover on the ground and you have to use stored feed, ground corn cobs can be used to help cut costs. In Iowa experiments an all-silage ration was compared with one in which ground corn cobs made up 60% of the dry matter. Cows were fed about 11 pounds of cobs and 22 pounds of silage, plus 1.6 pounds of soybean meal, salt and mineral. With this ration there was a saving of about 30 pounds of silage daily and wintering costs were reduced about $5 per head.

These cows are being fed hay in a sheltered area. Hills, thickets and other natural protection help you cut wintering costs. While still subject to some of the elements, protection from the wind helps these cattle retain body heat which would otherwise be lost by radiation. As a result, cattle maintain body weight on less feed.

Self-feeding is a tremendous labor saver in livestock choring. However, it is not the best way to save or stretch feed supplies. You'll most likely have less waste with hand feeding. If you must self-feed, however, there are several ways you can keep waste to a minimum. Here an electric wire is being used in the bunker silo to keep cattle from trampling too much silage underfoot. In this particular case waste might be reduced a little more by lowering the wire about four inches.

VENTILATION for highest profits

For profitable meat, milk and egg production, animals need plenty of fresh air. In fact, adequate supplies of fresh air can be more important than feed. For example, researchers have calculated that, on the average, cattle that eat 50 pounds of feed and drink 100 pounds of water a day need 200 pounds of fresh air. Laying hens, on the other hand, need as much as ten times more air as feed to maintain production.

Tests have shown that a properly ventilated laying house in this part of the country can result in hens laying about two extra eggs per month during the winter. You can also expect about a 5% increase in milk production through proper ventilation of the dairy barn. Granted, you don't normally measure air flow through your buildings in terms of pounds per day per animal. But this does point out how you may profit from doing some figuring on this subject.

Not only will proper ventilation result in better livestock production but it can also mean a longer building life. Livestock give off moisture in breathing. This must be removed from the building or it will condense on walls and ceilings and speed up decay. In poorly ventilated buildings you may occasionally notice frost or ice on the bottom side of the roof. This is a result of not providing sufficient ventilation to move out moisture given off by the animals. Do not overlook such danger signs.

Just how much moisture do animals breathe out during a 24-hour day? Well, on the average, you can figure 30 dairy cows will produce about two barrels of water every 24 hours. A hundred hens will breathe about 2½ gallons of water into the air each day. This water must be removed to prevent management problems, to keep the birds healthy and happy.

Moisture removal becomes more difficult as temperatures decline. For instance air at 30 degrees will absorb only about half as much moisture as air at 40 to 45 degrees. For most efficient operation it's generally best if you can maintain building temperature at about this latter level. This doesn't necessarily mean supplemental heat has to be added. With sufficient insulation in the walls and ceiling, animal heat will tend to maintain the building temperature at near the desired level.

Rate of air exchange needed varies, depending on weather conditions. For instance, for farrowing houses in the summer, an air movement of 150 cubic feet per minute per sow is often recommended. In the winter, however, 20 to 45 cubic feet of air per minute per sow and litter should be sufficient. Make sure the fans you use can be controlled to give this variation in air movement.

Contrary to popular opinion, fan blade size has little to do with its capacity to move air. When buying ventilating fans, you'll note that each is given two ratings—one is the free delivery rate while the other is based on delivery under ½ inch static pressure. Use the latter figure in selecting the fan. If you know your air movement needs, you can easily determine the best size of fan for the job you have to perform. Another point, make certain the fan motor is sealed, has permanently lubricated bearings and built-in overload protection.

If you're not thoroughly acquainted with ventilation principles, you had best rely on the advice of ventilation engineers. Additional information may be obtained from your county agent. While he probably won't give you specific engineering advice, he can suggest reputable sources of assistance. Also, the state agricultural college may be able to send you bulletins and circulars that can be helpful in answering many of your ventilating questions.

HOW ONE EXTRA WEANER MAKES ALL THE OTHERS COST LESS

You make the biggest headway in weaning more pigs at less cost per pig when you creep-feed them with a well-fortified feed containing Aureomycin

Always use a good starter. It is the most important swine feed you buy. It determines future profits. Besides being palatable and well-fortified, it should be packed with antibiotic power.

Early and continuous feeding of this kind of starter feed is the only proved way hog producers have found to bring full litters through the most critical period—and to turn out more husky weaners. Pigs need this kind of feed, need it to be free of scouring and "unseen" diseases, need it to stand up under stress.

One extra weaner saved reduces the cost of all the other weaners—pays the feeding costs for the entire litter!

How Aureomycin reduces cost per pig

Most hog producers know that AUREOMYCIN® is a "must" in any pig starter feed. And they know it must be there in sufficient quantity. Your feed manufacturer or feed dealer knows this too, and is prepared to serve you with a starter feed containing 100 grams of AUREOMYCIN.

AUREOMYCIN does the best job of fighting not just a few, but the widest variety of disease organisms—and, in turn, the best job of permitting pigs to reach full growth potential and most efficient use of feed.

When you give a starter feed containing AUREOMYCIN, you provide extra protection against scouring, stress and disease. Your pigs grow fast and uniformly. You save those extra weaners.

For best results, continue feeding a starter past vaccination (at 6 to 7 weeks) for hog cholera and erysipelas. AUREOMYCIN guards against vaccination reaction, keeps pigs vigorous.

See your feed manufacturer

Talk to your feed man. Let him advise you on a breeding-to-market program for swine that will pay off for you. American Cyanamid Company, Agricultural Division, New York 20, N. Y. *AUREOMYCIN is American Cyanamid Company's trademark for chlortetracycline.

Handling, moving, weaning, vaccination—AUREOMYCIN minimizes reactions from these stresses.

Starter pigs have little trouble with scours and "unseen" diseases when fed AUREOMYCIN. You save and wean more pigs.

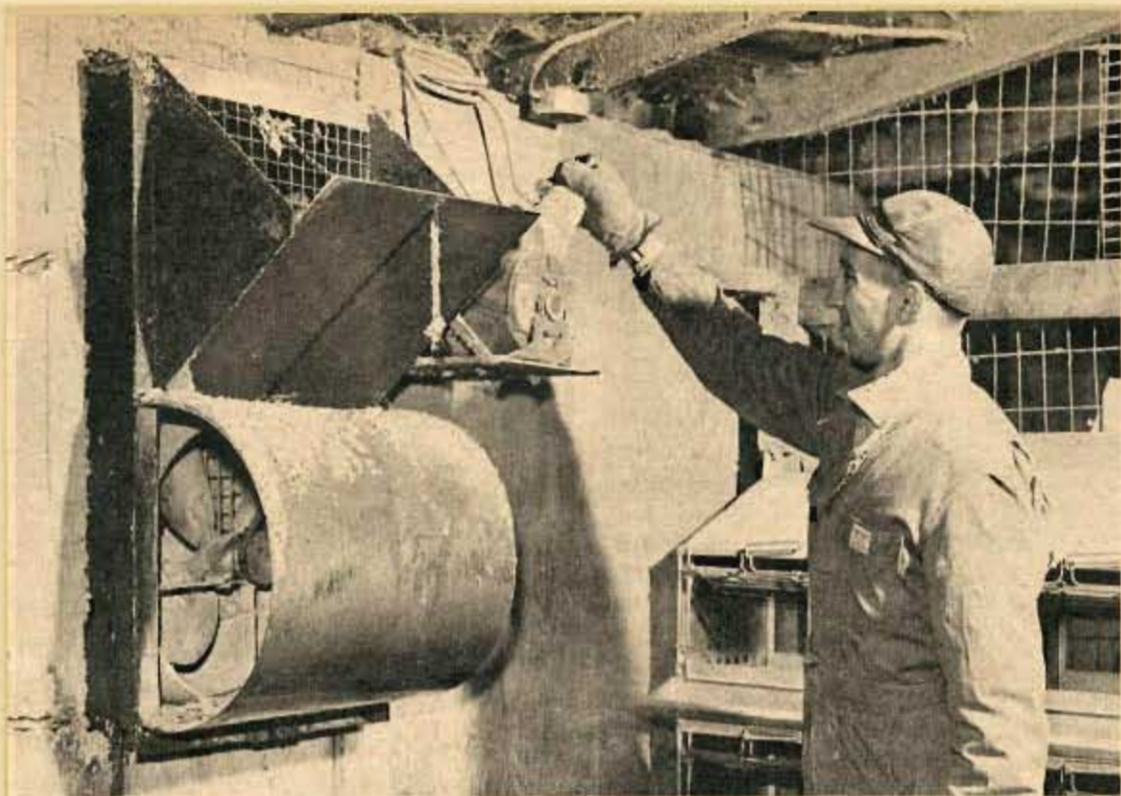

These two men are looking over a new central farrowing house. There have been a number of central houses built around the country during the last two or three years. This trend back to central farrowing is being made possible by a better understanding of the ventilation needs of this type of building. Note the central air duct at the top of this picture. This is a pressurized ventilation system, designed to meet the needs of sows farrowing in these quarters during all types of weather. Good ventilation can eliminate excess moisture, reduce disease and prevent many other problems which have been so common in the past.

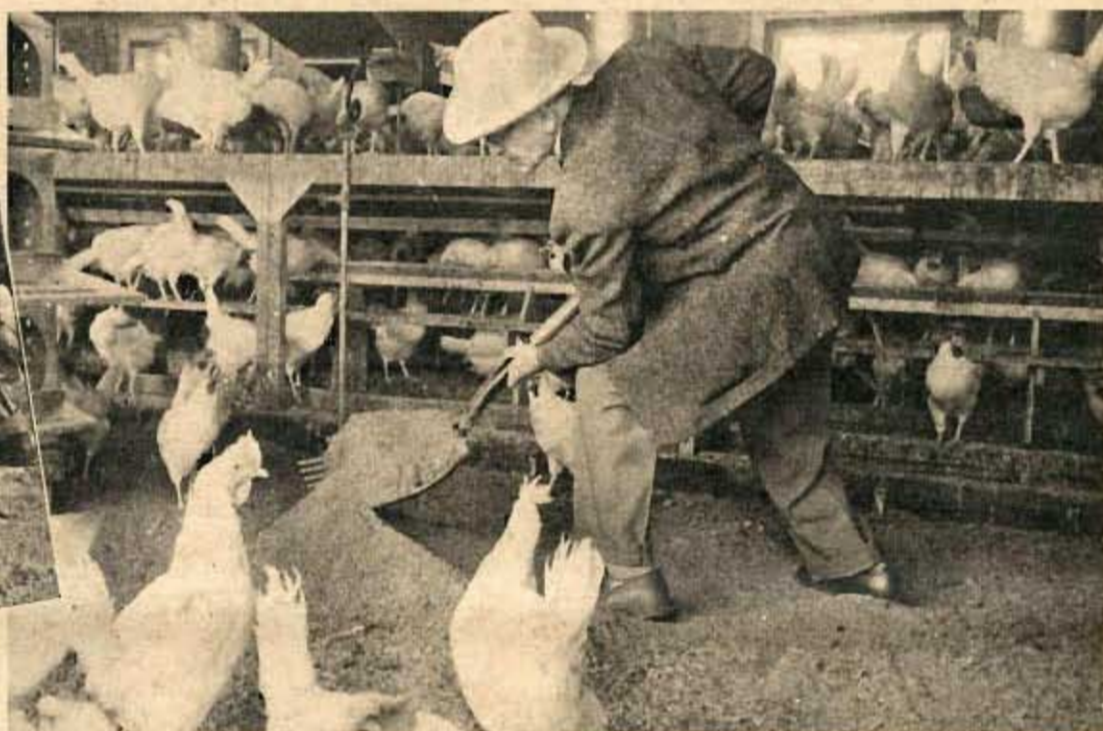

Without some forced ventilation this stanchion dairy barn would be like a steam cabinet during winter. This particular dairyman uses a combination of natural and forced ventilation. Air enters the barn through partially opened windows along each side and is exhausted through ceiling fans above the center alleyway. Proper ventilation can often result in an additional two pounds of milk daily from cows that normally milk 40 pounds.

IN FORMULA FEEDS

Here's a ventilation system that works well for this Indiana poultryman. When installing exhaust fans, always make certain they are in the wall away from prevailing winds. Otherwise, outside wind pressures will greatly reduce the efficiency of your ventilation system. Keep the fan motor dusted off and belts in proper adjustment. This can save you several dollars in needless repair bills.

A thermostat is an important part of the ventilating system, as is being demonstrated here. Air flow requirements will vary as weather conditions change. You can provide for these varying requirements by setting the thermostats to cut fans off as temperatures drop. In buying a thermostat, make certain it is a heavy duty unit. Buy only a farm type thermostat that's dust-proof.

These two pictures show how adequate ventilation in the laying house can produce more desirable conditions for profitable egg production. The photo at left shows how litter can become wet and crusted when there is insufficient ventilation. Studies have shown this is one of the major reasons for dirty eggs. The photo at right was taken in a laying house that was properly ventilated. Notice how the litter is dry and fine. Birds in this house can be expected to perform much more profitably than when the house is damp and foul smelling.

Don't overlook the need for adequate ventilation in dairy calf quarters. In fact, ventilation management can be more critical here than in other livestock buildings. Young animals have little resistance to stress. When pens become damp, disease problems increase. Also, you'll want to be careful in controlling air flow. If using some natural ventilation, as shown, make certain there are no drafts.

Ventilation is an important aspect of producing milk in comfortable surroundings. This is the milk room of the Sprecher Brothers dairy operation in south central Wisconsin. The fan shown just above Merlin Sprecher does a good job in removing excess moisture from the milk room. Merlin and his brother Loren both agree that adequate ventilation is an important part of profitable milk production.
