Peace With West, Continue War Against Russia Was German Aim

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following articles conclude the special series of reprinted articles from The Chicago Tribune which relate the experiences of Gen. Delmar T. Spivey (ret.), superintendent of Culver Military Academy, on a special mission as prisoner-of-war emissary during the latter stages of World War II. The Citizen thanks The Chicago Tribune for granting special permission to reprint the copyrighted series.

Installment 6

Lt. Gen. Gottlob Berger, the German in charge of all prisoners of war, came right to the point with the two Americans sitting before him.

It was the second secret session in which Berger invited Brig. Gen. Arthur W. Vanaman and Col. Delmar Spivey to his headquarters during early April, 1945.

Gives His Account

Spivey, superintendent of Culver Military Academy, gives this account:

"Gen. Berger was sure in his own mind that Hitler was insane and that the only salvation for Germany and for the defeat of Russia was for Hitler to be eliminated and to have people like himself take over control of the German Reich.

"He proposed that we should take codes from him back to the American forces (he called Gen. Eisenhower by name), and that communications be established whereby American forces could contact the S. S. by radio.

Had It Worked Out

"Negotiations would follow rapidly which would lead to a peace with the western allies but not with Russia. Berger had it all worked out in his own mind and was sure of success if we would join in."

Vanaman and Spivey discussed the proposal and agreed that if anything could be done to shorten the war it was worth the risk.

The two Americans agreed to try, but made it clear that they could only deliver the messages, not guarantee any reaction on the part of the United States government, Spivey said.

Agrees with Limits

"Berger agreed that we would not be in any position to do such a thing and that all he wanted us to do was to take his messages and deliver them to the proper authorities.

"The German radios would be listening for any messages which our forces would broadcast as a result of the code we were to take out," Spivey asserted.

"In turn, we received assurances from Berger that he had given instructions concerning safeguarding the English and American prisoners of war, delivery of the Red Cross food, and no further movement of the P. O. W. s.

"Nerve Wracking Evening"

Vanaman and Spivey returned to their quarters and fell asleep.

"It had been one of the most nerve wracking, exciting evenings in our lives," Spivey said. "Our interpreter told us at the time he had never heard anything like it in his life. He assured us that Berger was a great man and would keep his word."

The following afternoon the two Americans were taken to S. S. headquarters and briefed by Walter Schellenberg, a civilian in charge of intelligence for Heinrich Himmler, the German Gestapo chief.

Vanaman went into Schellenberg's office first while Spivey waited across the hall.

Drinks, Feels Better

"I was left across the hall in an office with a tremendous bottle of schnapps," Spivey recounted. "I think I took several drinks as big as I have ever swallowed since or before, and I felt better immediately.

Spivey was called into Schellenberg's office where he met a tall, slender, blond German with sev-

Ronald Mackey Was Also German Prisoner At Stalag

Ronald Mackey, Culver mail carrier for Route 2, was also an American prisoner of war in Stalag Luft III, Sagan, Germany, the same prison camp which has been described in The Citizen in the experiences of Gen. Delmar T. Spivey.

Mr. Mackey served in the 15th Air Force from March 1943 to May 1946 and was a prisoner of war from April 1944 until May 1945.

eral saber cuts on his face. He was Maj. Heinz Lange. He was to escort Spivey and Vanaman to the Swiss border.

Schellenberg arranged for the necessary papers and codes. Passes signed by Gen. Berger instructed all Germans to give Spivey and Vanaman safe conduct.

Early the following morning the men set out. Lt. Col. Otto Werther was driver of the small staff car. Spivey and Vanaman were jammed in the back seat under their bags, two suitcases belonging to Maj. Lange, and one bag belonging to Werther.

Highway Is Empty

The German car moved out of Berlin and headed south toward Leipzig. The autobahn was empty of traffic. The Germans feared strafing by allied fighter planes and did not travel on open roads unless it was necessary.

"Our driver kept dozing off as we sped down the autobahn at about 80 miles an hour," Spivey said. "The poor fellow had not had any sleep for the last 48 hours. He was about 50 years old and a fish vendor by occupation.

"Every time he would fall asleep I would kick him violently with my free foot and he would wake up. The major became angry at me and I was ordered to stop the kicking."

The driver fell asleep several times and swerved off the road. Finally, he tumbled down a 75-foot embankment and into a pine forest.

Bounces Off Boulder

"The car hit a boulder, about 20 feet in diameter, bounced off the boulder, and came to a halt against a pine tree. No one was hurt," Spivey said.

Werther got out and pried the fenders off the wheels with a piece of wood, changed one smashed wheel and was ready to go. He drove along the embankment and worked his way up to the autobahn.

During the afternoon, fighter planes swooped down on the highway to attack a convoy of trucks ahead of the car.

"Two of them came directly over us, firing at the trucks. Their empty shell cases and links fell on our car. Werther made a dash

Ann Gregory Osborn, a senior at Stanford University, was presented one of three annual Lloyd W. Dinkelspiel Awards at Stanford's 74th Commencement on Sunday, June 13, where she graduated with great distinction and received her A.B. degree in Psychology.

The awards were established in 1960 by the family and friends of the late Lloyd Dinkelspiel, prominent San Francisco attorney and onetime president of the University's Board of Trustees.

The awards go to a faculty member "who has made the most distinctive contribution to the development and enrichment of undergraduate education" and to two graduating seniors "who combine good academic standing with effective contribution to undergraduate student life." Each of the seniors received a check for $350 and the faculty member was presented a check for $3500.

She managed a perfectly balanced Stanford undergraduate career of leadership and superior academic performance, with membership in Phi Beta Kappa, active participation in the student legislature and other activities, and an excellent record in women's intramural sports.

She won a National Science Foundation summer research grant as a sophomore in her major field, psychology, and has been awarded a Woodrow Wilson fellowship for graduate study and a teaching career.

Miss Osborn served as president of Cap and Gown, women's honorary society, and was a member of the dean's list during her four years at Stanford.

Betty Jane Zechiel and Stanley Reinholt
Speak Wedding Vows In Burr Oak Church Ceremony

MRS. STANLEY REINHOLT

In a double ring ceremony at seven-thirty o'clock Saturday evening, June 5, at the Burr Oak Church of God, Miss Betty Jane Zechiel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ferris Zechiel, Route 1, Culver, became the bride of Stanley Reinholt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stayton, Route 4, Rochester. Rev. Warren Sorenson, pastor of the church, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with an arch with wreaths of pink carnations and white snapdragons and tiny lights with candelabra on either side. The pews were marked with candles and bows and there were candles in the windows.

Paul White, organist, played the nuptial music and accompanied Mrs. Edward Davis of South Bend who sang, "Always," "I Love You Truly," and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of white silk organza over taffeta fashioned with a molded bodice, and portrait neckline traced with Peau P'anza lace re-embroidered with tiny pearls, and with elbow length sleeves. The controlled skirt fell into a full chapel train and was highlighted by back panel of lace. Miniature medallions of the lace appeared on the side and back of the skirt. Her elbow length veil fell from a headpiece made of a white rose and pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations and stephanotis. Her jewelry was a diamond necklace, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Diane Claussen of Oregon, Ill., cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Larry Zechiel, Route 3, Rochester, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Brent Gochenour, Rural Route, Argos. Miss Claussen wore a floor length dress of pink chiffon over taffeta styled with embroidered bodice with empire waist accented with ribbon. The skirt was gathered in the back and featured a large ribbon bow. Her pink nose veil was attached to a matching headpiece. Identical dresses were worn by the bridesmaids and all three attendants carried bouquets of pink carnations.

Jack Reinholt, Route 4, Rochester was his brother's best man. Ushers were Don Reinholt of Knox and Ron Reinholt of Leiters Ford, brothers of the bridegroom; Larry Zechiel, Route 3, Rochester, brother of the bride; and Norman Witt of Francesville.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Zechiel wore a dress of pastel blue lace with white accessories and a white orchid corsage. Mrs. Stayton, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dress of pink lace with a touch of green with which she wore white accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Following the wedding a reception for approximately 200 guests was held in the social rooms of the church. The table, which was decorated with candles and flowers, featured a four-tier wedding cake surrounded by white roses with a small heart shaped cake on either side and in front. The cake was topped with a heart shaped arch under which were white wedding bells. Serving were Mrs. John Drang and Mrs. Norman Witt.

The young couple left for a wedding trip to the Wisconsin Dells after which they will be at home at Route 1, Culver.

Mrs. Reinholt graduated from Culver High School and Vogue Beauty College and is owner and operator of the Go-Gay Beauty Salon in Leiters Ford. Her husband graduated from Aubbeenaubee Township High School and attended Butler University, Indianapolis. He is employed at the Spencer Plumbing and Heating Company in Culver.

FOR BETTER VIEWING

As the travel season gains momentum and millions of families take to the highways, we should pause and consider how we may assist in retaining the natural beauty of the American countryside.

The President called a "White House Conference on Natural Beauty" in Washington. A program was suggested to bring about "citizen action and public education to stop the increasing ugliness of the American environment."

One of the major blights on the landscape is litter. Litterbugs cost Americans a billion dollars a year, according to Keep America Beautiful, Inc., the national anti-litter organization.

Taxpayers foot half this bill, through the cost of cleaning up streets, highways, beaches, parks and other public areas, while the other half is paid by business, industry and individuals in the form of losses and expenses attributable to litter.

"Property values decline in a littered neighborhood, and littered highways drive away tourists," Allen H. Seed, Jr., KAB's executive vice president stated. "Litter is not only an aesthetic offense and a menace to health and safety, but is also bad for business."

The prevention of litter to Keep America Beautiful should be the objective of all thinking Americans. One of the best ways to participate is to have a supply of litterbags handy — and use them.

Women's Guild Meets

The regular meeting of the Women's Guild of Grace United Church of Christ was held Thursday evening in the church social rooms. Mrs. Oscar Wesson, president, opened the meeting with a poem titled, "Trees."

It was announced that a church school picnic will be held at noon Sunday, June 20, at the American Legion Home, with the regular morning worship service being held at 10:30 a.m. at the Legion home.

Mrs. Edward Easterday, program chairman, read a part of the 95th Psalm for the opening. The theme of the program was "New Nations." After the group singing of "In The Service of the King," Mrs. Easterday read Philippians 2:3-11 following this with a short meditation. A movie titled, "Ghandi," depicting the life in India, was shown.

During the social hour, refreshment tables were set with place mats and napkins showing the new nations.

Fertilize your bluegrass at least twice a year, recommends Dr. W. H. Daniel, Purdue University turf specialist. It takes extra nitrogen to make dense turf.

Bluegrass, the specialist explains, produces three major leaf crops a year — in the spring, after seed formation and in the fall. Fertilizing at these times, with irrigation if needed, assures bluegrass rejuvenation and maximum vigor, Daniel says.

In addition to fertilization, the specialist recommends mowing bluegrass high. This favors survival during drouth by promoting a deeper root system. It also enables the grass to escape severe damage from disease, particularly leafspot. The shading and competition also greatly reduce infestation of dandelions and crabgrass.

Daniel cautions, however, that crabgrass seedlings in wet weather may survive in the turf and contaminate rather readily. Crabgrass is often called water grass, he says, because its germination, survival and competition are favored by rain, wetness and excess irrigation.

The specialist lists nine chemicals which are available in the marketplace for crabgrass prevention by homeowners: Dacthal, Tupersan, Betasan, Chlordane, Bandane, Benefin, Trifluralin, Zytan and Calcium arsenate.

Some materials have a carry-over so less needs to be used the following year.

Most of the nine chemicals, Daniel says, are best applied before crabgrass germination. However, several will stop young crabgrass, so material applied in May can prevent later germination.

Many of these chemicals are formulated with fertilizers, as well as insecticides for multiple purpose. Uniform application is most desirable; therefore, split application, applying half in each direction, is often recommended.

Buying a carpet? One with dense pile gives longest wear, say Purdue University home furnishings specialists. Rows of pile should be close together so that you see more pile than stitches of backing.

WORLD'S FAIR WONDERS

IN ONE wonderful square mile of fun and entertainment, the New York World's Fair has gathered hundreds of once-in-a-lifetime attractions to see and to enjoy. Here are just a few of the exhibits—some new for 1965, and many that have already thrilled millions of Fair-goers.

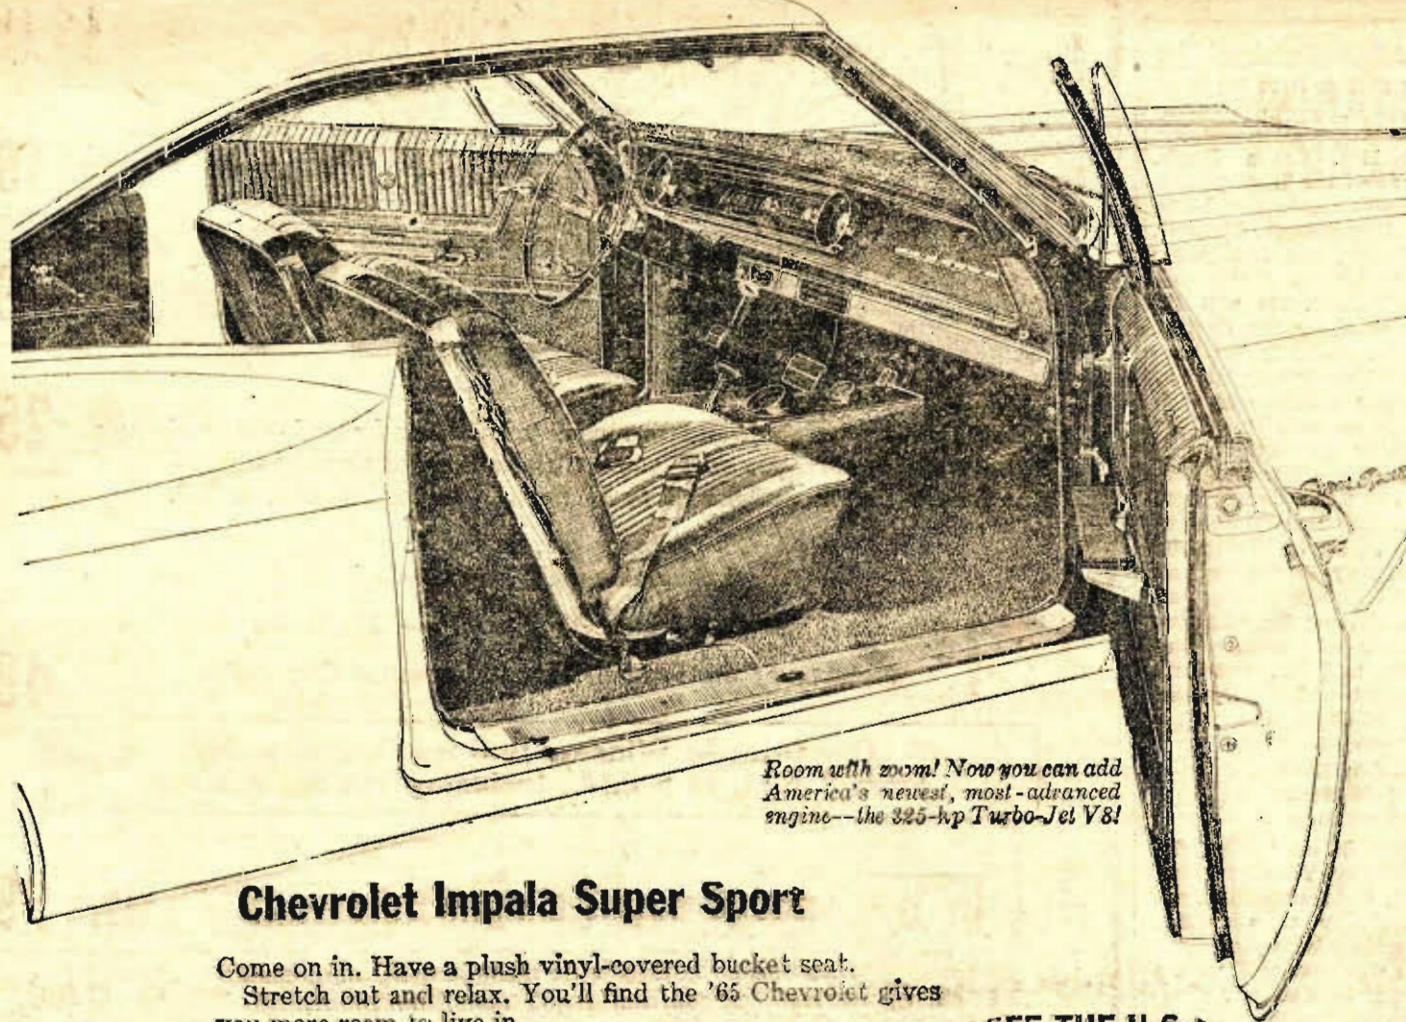

THE TRIBUTE to Sir Winston Churchill at the World's Fair Pavilion is an inspiring exhibit of Churchill memorabilia. The U.S. Federal Pavilion has a special exhibit paying tribute to 13 of the Nation's past presidents. Michelangelo's magnificent Pieta continues to be awe-inspiring at the Vatican Pavilion and each evening at nine the fountain and fireworks at the Fountain of the Planets attract crowds.

AS IN 1964, the AMF Monorail remains as one of the Fair's most magnetic attractions. Gliding silently and smoothly 40-feet above ground, it offers riders a panoramic view of the Fair and an excellent vantage point from which to take pictures—all while riding in air-conditioned comfort. The new theme this year is "around and around she goes" with Monorail passengers allowed as many rides as they wish for one admission. As an added bonus, the Monorail station is packed with exciting games and contests of skill. Free prizes, too! Fun for all!

War Prisoner

for the nearest woods. The general and I and the two Germans began piling brush on the auto. Seek "Deepest Hole"

"The planes roared by for another pass and we scrambled for the deepest hole we could find," Spivey said.

They remained overnight in Erlangen, a village about 15 miles from Nuremberg. The Americans dined at an inn and Spivey recalled how surprised he was at the cordiality of the Germans. They talked about food and old German customs and ignored the war.

"We passed thru Nuremberg the following day and headed down toward a bottleneck which was fast closing," Spivey explained. "The Americans and the Russians were not more than 50 miles apart and we could see where shells had splattered across the road."

They arrived in Munich and went to Gestapo headquarters to make final preparations for the border crossing. They were issued civilian clothing.

Gets Bloody Coat
Gen. Vanaman was handed a long, gray overcoat with a patch over the left breast and blood stains on the inside and on the back. He also was given a ski cap.

"I was given a green felt Tyrolean fedora with a red feather boldly sticking in the band," Spivey said. "It was one size too small for me. My overcoat was a beautiful thing and it evidently had belonged to a well groomed person at one time. It was too small and I had difficulty buttoning it."

By the next day they reached Lindau on Lake Constance. The lake is on the German-Swiss border. They went on to Meersburg and took a ferry to Staad near Konstanz.

They remained in a hotel while the major awaited further instruction from Berlin. Three days passed and nothing happened. The major could not get thru to Berlin.

"Another 10 days went by with no word. The general and I just stared each day across the five miles of lake to Switzerland. We seriously considered escaping but feared that such an action would have an adverse effect on our fellow prisoners of war," Spivey said.

"April 16, 1945. Major Lange told us he had completely lost contact with Berlin and was in a quandry whether to liquidate us or let us go."

Installation 7
The snow-covered Alps of Switzerland were so close, harboring twin messages of freedom and frustration for Brig. Gen. Arthur W. Vanaman and Col. Delmar T. Spivey.

The Americans, prisoners of the Germans, could see the freedom they had been promised, but they did not know when it would come.

Spivey had been a P. O. W. for 20 months. He wanted desperately to cross the border. Gen. Vanaman was ill from the pressure of recent events.

They still had in their possession the important messages from the rebel Germans who wanted to negotiate a ceasefire with the western allies and continue the war against Russia.

A Soldier at 14
"While awaiting word from Berlin on our fates, Maj. Heinz Lange, our escort, brought a youngster of 14 to our hotel room to dine with us," Spivey said.

"He was a German soldier. "When he was introduced he acknowledged the general's salutation with the very finest Nazi salute and he stood rigidly at attention until told to sit down. "The boy had been indoctrinated to the point where he wanted to fight for his fuhrer. So with a hearty clap on his back from his father and with many tears from his mother's eyes he had departed to the front where he was promptly hit by a .50 caliber machine gun bullet.

"He was a rabid Nazi," Spivey continued. "I thought that there would never be any hope for this boy. He boasted of how he could stop any American tank with an anti-tank weapon and was anxious to get back to the front."

Gives Him Chocolate
"After lunch we took him to the ferry and he and I sat on the back seat. I felt sorry for him and offered him a piece of chocolate from my pocket.

"Tears came to his eyes and he accepted it, saying it was the first piece of chocolate he had seen in six years.

"He put his head on my shoulder and fell asleep. I thought of my own 12-year-old son and contrasted the two. I thanked God mine was in the United States."

The next day, April 22, 1945, they were taken to the border town of Horst near Bergenz and were driven into the courtyard of a small inn and taken upstairs to a large room and locked inside. Spivey recalled.

Turned Over to Civilian
"We were turned over to a civilian chief of the district. His name was Hans-Wilhelm Eggen. Maj. Lange left immediately to join his comrades in the mountains for a last stand," Spivey said.

"Hundreds of refugees, most of them Japanese diplomatic officials, including Ambassador Hiroshi Oshima, were milling around in the courtyard. They wanted to get out of Germany."

After a night's sleep, Eggen drew up a black, custom-built auto to the inn. It had a radio transmitter and receiver built into the trunk. He told Vanaman and Spivey that arrangements were being made on the Swiss side for their reception.

At 11 a.m., Eggen led the Americans down the back stairs of the inn to the car.

"We entered the car with our coat collars rolled up. Eggen gave each of us a huge cigar and told us to relax and look nonchalant. I looked over at the general and his face was drawn and worried. I am sure mine was even worse. The cigar was making me dizzy," Spivey said.

"We drove directly to the border. A small river about 200 yards wide separated Germany from Switzerland. All the guards stood rigidly at attention when we approached."

Eggen stopped the car at the bridge and got out to make some telephone calls. Spivey sat uneasily smoking his cigar.

The German returned to the car. The driver started the engine and slowly drove across the bridge and onto Swiss soil.

"Swiss officers were waiting for us. They asked if this were the general and colonel they were to meet and, when they were told yes, they broke out into a big laugh," Spivey said.

"I suppose they had never seen anyone looking any more disheveled than we were."

Taken to Zurich
From the border the two were taken to Zurich to meet with the American consul. They were given a fine hotel room, food, and drink.

The consul dispatched to Washington the coded message given them by the Germans for Washington. He asked that the news of the liberation be kept secret until the ex-prisoners reached America.

They were taken to Berne and later across the French border to Dijon where a special plane was waiting to take them to Paris.

In Paris, American intelligence officers took charge and put them on another plane for Rheims, which was the headquarters of Gen. Carl Spaatz.

Vanaman was flown to America the next day to deliver his messages. Spivey remained in Rheims.

In Washington, Vanaman went directly to the war department with the German proposal.

Nothing Is Done
"It was the decision of the war department at this time that nothing would be done about the offer nor would the coded message be used," Spivey said. "Germany was so nearly whipped that it would be useless to make any attempt to have one faction surrender."

Later they learned that Heinrich Himmler, the Gestapo chief, had tried to reach an agreement thru Count Folke Bernadotte of neutral Sweden. It also failed.

In the ensuing years, Spivey continued to gather information. He learned that Lt. Gen. Gottlob Berger, the head of the rebel German group, kept his promise of protecting and feeding the American prisoners in the last months of the war.

Furthermore, Spivey got an explanation of why he and Vanaman spent so many weeks in February and March, 1945, waiting in Berlin for the repatriation.

"Hitler was angered by the American bombing of Dresden, which he had declared an open city. In retaliation he ordered Berger to kill the American air prisoners of war. Berger ignored this order and in the confusion of the final weeks, Hitler never checked to see if his instructions had been carried out."

Helps Many to Freedom
"In addition, Berger personally conducted several hundred diplomatic prisoners of the Germans across the Swiss border to freedom. The prisoners included French, British, American, and Polish officials," Spivey explained.

Berger was sentenced to 25 years in prison by the Nuremberg war tribunal. He was given a full pardon after six years. Vanaman, Spivey and others testified in his behalf, both at the trial and before the clemency board.

Berger is now 78. His health has deteriorated. He works as a clerk in Gerstetten in southwestern Germany.

Dr. Hellmut Haubold, the doctor who conducted the medical conferences that set up the procedure to care for the American prisoners of war, is a well-known specialist in Munich and occasionally gets to America.

Wilhelm Stranghoner, who as "Popeye the sergeant" helped the American prisoners, lives in Herford in Westfalen.

English Captain Invited
All have been invited to be honored when the prisoners of war of Stalag Luft III gather for a 20-year reunion in Dayton, O., April 23 and 24.

Another invited guest is H. M. "Wings" Day, retired group captain in the Royal Air Force and one of the few survivors of the "great escape" of March, 1944.

Spivey is in charge of getting the guests here and is seeking funds from his former associates to finance the trip. Emmett Dedmon, executive editor of the Chicago Sun-Times, is publicity chairman. He was a prisoner in the camp.

There will be a show of old prisoner of war uniforms, a display of war souvenirs, and, of course, hours of talk.

"I do not know the motive of Gen. Berger for helping the prisoners of war," Spivey said. "It may have been in hopes of saving himself or it may have been that he was moved by humanitarian reasons."

"The point is that he did act and it undoubtedly saved the lives of thousands of American air officers."

Rare Coffeenut Tree Grows In J. Kittle Yard

(Editor's Note: The following article from Tubby Toms' column in a recent issue of the Indianapolis News contains interesting information concerning a rare tree which grows in the yard of summer residents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sloane Kittle, 874 East Shore Drive, Culver.)

By Tubby Toms
"Without any semblance of malice, a reader of this column had its author sitting on carpet tacks for a full day not long ago.

The situation concerned this letter from Mrs. John Sloane Kittle of Indianapolis.

"I am mailing to you a small box in which I am enclosing something I think will, at least, be of interest to you," she writes. "You are a 'nut' on nut trees, as I am. About 25 years ago, when we built our new cottage on Lake Maxinkuckee, the man who built the house went out in the weeds not too far from Culver and got three small trees, planting them in our yard there. Two of them did not live.

"But one did. It's huge now and so prolific with these seed pods, which I know the neighbors hate. No one can say what the tree is and I don't know. It's a beautiful shade tree, very symmetrical. So I thought of you, after seeing that burl you showed me one time of the old, dying oak tree, and thought maybe you'd like to plant these seeds and try your luck.

"Also, if you have any idea what the tree is, do let me know. It never has any blooms that I can see, though I'm not up there in early spring."

The letter came a day before the package. In the interim I really worried about the situation, fear that it was the seeds from some exotic tree with which I might be unfamiliar. But I maintained one hope, bolstered by a prayer, that it was from a tree known variously as the Kentucky coffeetree, the coffeenut, coffee-bean, nickertree and stumpree.

My prayer was answered! It was the seed pod from the Kentucky coffeetree. Its unusual double-compound leaf structure causes it to be confused often with both the black locust and the honey locust, but the dark gray bark, tinged with red, and deeply fissured between the small scales, provides fair identification.

How did it get that strange name, coffeenut? When the first settlers reached this country, they noted the tree and, seeing that the seeds enclosed in the purse-shaped pods resembled coffee, brewed a breakfast drink and halfway liked it. In the Civil War, when genuine coffee was scarce and the price prohibitive, many Hoosiers used the beans as a substitute for coffee, for better or for worse.

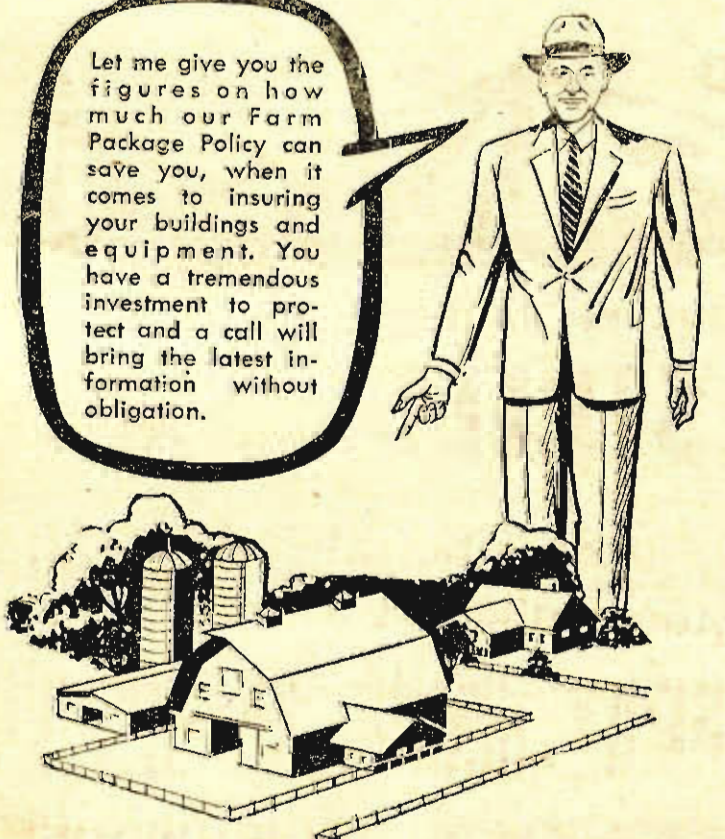

The tree is widely distributed through most of the Eastern United States, though no longer abundant, because of its earlier use for fence posts. It has been transplanted successfully in Europe, too. The wood takes on a fine polish and was used by the settlers in making cabins, fences, furniture and tools. Because of its durability, the wood was favored for old-fashioned, kite-shaped coffins.

Yet, today, the tree is recognized by few. Charles C. Deam, late state forester, recalled having driven 3 miles by horse and buggy to identify a coffeenut tree no one in the community could recognize."

June 8, 1965
Arequipa, Peru

Editor, THE CITIZEN:

The prospect of a twelve-hour ride on a propeller plane did not fill me with much enthusiasm, but it turned out to be less gruesome than I anticipated.

The DC-6 of Aerolineas Peruanas took off from Miami June 4 with many South Americans, ten U.S. law students, and me. The American boys were headed for Concepcion, Chile, to spend the summer. Full of confidence they invited me for a coke when we landed in Bogota, Colombia. Shocked at their inability to communicate, they whipped out their Spanish books, and we had Spanish class all the way to Lima, Peru.

A short while after taking off from Bogota we were eating dinner when the plane began to bump around quite a bit. The pilot announced that we all should fasten our seat belts, get a good hold on our dinner trays, and look out the windows. We were flying through a spectacular Andean electric storm, and the lightning flashes were awesome.

Landing at Lima at 3 a.m. I went through customs rather groggily. I picked up my smallest bag, and suddenly there was flowered Kleenex everywhere — the customs inspector hadn't closed the suitcase. If one wants to be the center of all attention, this is recommended.

My hotel, the Savoy was located just a few blocks from the Plaza de Armas, the heart of Lima. I slept until early afternoon on Saturday and then, with map in hand, went exploring. There are many new buildings, but Lima hasn't changed a great deal since 1959 when I spent a year there.

My "family" and some other Peruvian friends entertained me. It was wonderful to see people I'd known five years ago and find we still could remember many things in common.

Yesterday morning I spent trying to arrange a trip to LaPaz. Since flying is relatively expensive, I decided to go on land. The choice then was between bus or colectivo to Arequipa, here in southern Peru. A colectivo is just a car that takes five passengers between cities. It is more expensive than a bus, but has the advantage of being faster. So, for U.S. $9.00 I came to Arequipa in a colectivo with five Peruvians. The 600 mile plus trip took us 15 hours, including our stop for dinner in Ica.

We left Lima at 2 p.m. yesterday afternoon. For a while the road followed the coastline, and I saw many lovely beaches. The coast of Peru is dry as a bone — it hasn't rained there in anyone's lifetime. Except for irrigated patches, it is a desert, with enormous sand dunes and the foothills of the Andes coming right down to the Pacific. In the irrigated sections there are large cotton haciendas and vineyards. The workers had great mounds of fluffy cotton piled by the roadside. Little boys were playing and jumping in the piles — it looked like fun!

After about eight hours I was having trouble figuring out what to do with my legs — the middle seat in the front of a car doesn't afford many possibilities for a tall person. So I smoked, squirmed, and got number and number. When we began to climb the mountains I gritted my teeth and crossed my fingers. The driver was excellent, but the road was a little unnerving. The driver was trying to make good time and we whizzed around curves, zoomed by landslides, swerved around rocks that had fallen from above, and, in general, had quite a ride.

We pulled into Arequipa at 5 a.m. this morning. The colectivo dumped me and my luggage on the hotel doorstep — I could barely move. Needless to say, at that hour the welcoming committee is not on duty, and the door was locked. Summoning up some energy, I rang the bell, knocked, beat on, and kicked the door and made enough noise to waken everyone. Finally, a sleepy man let me in and gave me a room. He was polite above and beyond (much beyond) what I would have been had someone wakened me with all that noise at 5 a.m.!

It was so cold (no heating systems in Peru) that, in addition to flannel pajamas, I wore wool socks and a wool sweater. The altitude here is over 7,000 feet above sea level, and the nights are cold.

Today, however, it was warm and sunny. Arequipa is Peru's second city and is located in a valley surrounded by three snow-capped volcanoes. When I was here five years ago, Arequipa had just suffered a terrible earthquake and was a shambles. Everything is rebuilt now, and it's a beautiful city. Called the "white city" because most buildings are made of greyish-white volcanic stone, about 200,000 people live here. The snow-covered volcanoes are visible from any part of the city and are especially lovely when they frame the bell towers of the cathedral.

Tomorrow morning at 6:30 I leave on the train for Puno, Peru. From Puno I'll take an overnight trip on one of Lake Titicaca's two steamers. This is a fun trip, because every thing is so quaint. The steamers were shipped from England in 1910 to the Peruvian coast, disassembled, put on llama trains and taken up to the lake which, at 14,000 feet above sea level, is the highest navigable lake in the world. The staterooms have two bunks, velvet plush couches, and a washstand. If there are two people in the stateroom, and one wants to open a suitcase, the other must go out in the hall. They are very small staterooms! On my previous trip across it was so cold that we just slept in our clothes. I'm hoping that a few renovations — such as the heating system — have been made.

After disembarking in Guaqui, Bolivia, Thursday morning, I'll take another train to LaPaz, arriving around noon.

I plan to spend about two weeks in LaPaz with a friend who is finishing her Peace Corps service. Towards the end of June we are going to head for Argentina and Paraguay.

CYNTHIA ALLEN

June 15, 1965

Editor, The CITIZEN:

Well it happened, again! It seems you can't go for a drive without wondering if you will make it home.

The episode of which I write was last Saturday at the corner of Rt. 10 and new Rt. 17. We were coming from the west on Rt. 10. The directional on our car was on and we were ready to make a right turn onto Rt. 17. A fellow in a station wagon turned onto Rt. 10 right in front of us. We had to use our brakes to miss him — he never saw the stop sign. To make matters worse another car was coming from the east on Rt. 10 and really had to use his brakes to just miss the station wagon.

"The 'guilty' driver slowed for this 10 second 'game' and laughed as he drove on while everyone else was at a loss for words and breath.

Isn't there some way to make the corner safer — a flasher unit or a four way stop? This is not our first near miss and I know several other persons who have had near misses too.

How long do we have to wait? Does someone have to die before something is done.

Jehovah's Witnesses
Three-Day Assembly
Held At Decatur

The climax of the three-day assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses conducted at Decatur in the Youth and Community Center was reached Sunday when district supervisor, Walter R. Wissman of New York City, addressed an audience of 915 on the subject "The Moral Breakdown — What Can Be Done About It?" Many Plymouth residents were in attendance with delegates from over 18 cities in north-central Indiana.

Stanley Spangler, presiding minister of the Plymouth congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, reported that Wissman in his keynote address stated, "In the world today there are many nations, many races, many languages, many customs and cultures - yet one common thing is shared by all - a moral breakdown of shocking proportions." Mr. Wissman continued by saying, "One cannot evade the issue. The earth-wide moral breakdown includes everybody. You may wish it were not happening, but it is. One reason why no one can evade this problem is that each individual is daily faced with decisions that have to do with morality. Some of these are traffic laws, speaking the truth or lying when it will be to one's advantage, purchases, business practices, faithful to one's mate and living in harmony with the religious faith they profess."

Mr. Wissman concluded by saying, "It requires study to learn the principles of righteousness, otherwise one may do what is wrong. As evidenced by the moral breakdown, men cannot provide this sound guide for himself, but his creator can and does. Every righteous character mentioned in the Bible has been led by God's true wisdom, including Jesus Christ. There is a Bible principle or one of God's laws that applies to every problem we may face in this morally sick world."

With export markets already making significant impact on Indiana agriculture, a Purdue University agricultural economist has projected for the next five years effects of marked changes in overseas sales.

Dr. Gordon A. MacEachern describes three different export levels and their probable effects on Hoosier agriculture. His projections assume a continuation of general conditions — overall economic growth of three to four per cent annually, no let up in the cold war, a two per cent domestic utilization of farm products — prevailing since 1955.

If farm exports in 1970 decline to $3.5 billion a year, a more than 10 per cent reduction in net income of farm operators would result, compared to 1963. This might result from rather stringent conditions negotiated by the European Common Market, cutbacks in the Food for Peace program and foreign economic assistance, lower price supports and reduced export assistance for feed and food grains.

A continuation of export levels during fiscal 1963-64 of around $6 billion would mean a slight increase in Indiana commodity exports as a result of expected changes in the composition of exports. Under these conditions, gross income from farming would rise 19 per cent over 1963 and net income would increase 12 per cent. This contemplates slightly higher feed grain exports to Western Europe and Japan.

A projected 10 per cent annual increase in farm exports to 1970, described by MacEachern as "rather optimistic," would mean:

An almost 40 per cent increase in total gross farm income and a 22 per cent increase in net income.

The economist points out that this could result from continued access to European markets through successful negotiations for freer trade with Common Market countries and continued high demand for feed grains and vegetable oils.

Continued expansion of exports in diet deficient areas through an expanded Food for Peace program and growing national economies in developing countries would also be positive factors. Higher export levels might also be reached through increased exports to Communist bloc countries.

MacEachern notes that "the export conditions likely to exist by 1970 will be influenced by economic and political decisions, such as trade negotiations, made in 1965."

REGISTERED HOLSTEIN IN NEWMAN HERD RECEIVES EXCELLENT RATING

Culver Lieu General Cupid 397-5352, a Registered Holstein cow in the herd of John A. Newman & Sons, Newman Holstein Farms, Culver, has been officially classified "Excellent" — the highest designation attainable in the type classification program of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

This highly select designation is applied only to animals scoring 90 or more of the 100 points representing theoretical perfection in body conformation.

Of over 74,000 Registered Holsteins officially classified for type last year, only 735 were rated "Excellent".

The Newman Holstein moved into the "Excellent" bracket for the first time during a recent classification of the herd by Clyde Wilson, Rushville, Pa. — an official inspector on the staff of the national Holstein organization.

She scored 90 points. Animals scored "Excellent" in previous programs are not included in this listing.

The Classification Program — in continuous operation since 1929 — provides a universally-recognized method of comparing the conformation of living animals with that of the True-Type Holstein cow or bull. Participation is currently at an all-time high level.

NEW WORLD OF SCIENCE

Life Could Exist on Mars Say Scientists

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (CFN)—At a laboratory here in Tarrytown, a group of scientists are coordinating existing knowledge of the planets with biological experiments to determine if life is possible in outerspace.

With only earthly life and environment to deal with, the scientists have developed a working laboratory which has reproduced the content, temperature and pressure of the Martian atmosphere. It is called Mars Simulator II (MSII).

Mars is like a depleted earth. It is dry and flat. Its atmosphere is extremely thin — about one fortieth of the earth's sea level. Its air contains little oxygen and its temperature ranges from 60 to 70 degrees down to a deep freeze.

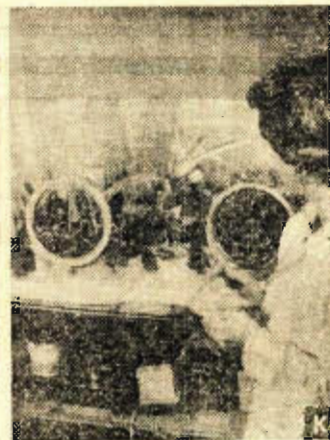

Experimental results with seeds in the MSII chamber demonstrated successful germination. Of 250 varieties, some 50 required no oxygen for sprouting.

Trials with air grown plants in MSII revealed that some survived for almost a year. Conifers—pines and cedars—showed a high survival capability in the MSII.

Moss and humidity are commonly associated. Yet moss and fungi can actually reproduce under conditions of less moisture and oxygen than Mars appears to have.

Reviewing the experiments performed by the Union Carbide scientists, one can fairly conclude that plant life is possible in the Martian atmosphere.

A strange relationship between low atmospheric oxygen and freezing temperatures was revealed in the experiments. Seedlings grown in a reduced oxygen level were able to survive in low temperatures that would normally kill them.

What about animal life? The cold resistance—low oxygen principle applied here also. Neither freezing nor low oxygen can be tolerated by the mealworm—a larval form of the beetle. But together they permit survival.

A turtle was placed in an atmosphere with an air pressure one tenth of sea level and low oxygen. Its behavior remained normal.

What may be the result from these Union Carbide experiments? First, we may be near the solution to the eternal query: "Is there life on the other planets?" Secondly, we may learn more about the origin of our solar system, of our earth and, possibly, of life itself.

LET'S BARBECUE CHICKEN!

Hoosiers who plan outings this summer will find that a chicken barbecue is ideal for get togethers of all sizes, advises Purdue Extension Poultryman David D. Jackson.

Barbecued chicken is prepared in the same way for 20, 200, or 2,000 and requirements for success are easy and simple.

If the group is doing a barbecue for the first time, or just learning, Jackson recommends having an experienced person supervise.

For those who do not wish to do the barbecuing, there are civic and poultry groups throughout the state who have the equipment and experience to handle large groups at a reasonable cost.

First requirement for a chicken barbecue is a grill and pit. According to Jackson, one of the best and most economical pits for average size groups is made by splitting a 55-gallon oil drum length-wise and attaching legs that can be removed so that the pit can be easily hauled from place to place — even in a trunk of a car. Concrete or cinder block pits are also satisfactory and can be outfitted with wire grills making it possible for two men to turn a large number of chicken halves at one time.

Young fryers of about two to two and a half pounds dressed weight are ideal for barbecuing and are in plentiful supply this spring. They should be cooked slowly over a charcoal ember fire and basted constantly with barbecue sauce each time they are turned. The sauce is what gives the chicken its personality.

For more information on how to prepare barbecued chicken, see your county Extension agent or send a postcard to Agricultural Publications, AES, Building, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind. 47907. Ask for Extension Circular 434, "Hoosier Barbecued Chicken." It is free to Indiana residents.

"Is the universe, including Man, evolved by Atomic Force?" will be the subject of the Bible Lesson to be heard at Christian Science services throughout the world on Sunday.
 Scriptural passages will include this verse from Isaiah: "I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight." The concluding Bible citation is from Revelation: "And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new."

The theme will be taken up further in readings from the Christian Science textbook: "The true theory of the universe, including man, is not in material history but in spiritual development. . . . Spiritual evolution alone is worthy of the exercise of divine power" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, pp. 547,135).

Monterey

Mrs. Charles H. Brucker Jr.
 Phone 542-2764
 Miss Avis Risk of Roachdale, the Monterey High School Home Ec teacher, left June 11 to go to New York City where she will join the All American Band, U.S.A., as a chaperone for a 29-day tour of seven European countries, England, France, Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Italy, and Belgium. The band consists of 110 members accompanied by 40 chaperones. Miss Risk's nephew is a member of the band. Three other women from Roachdale are also going as chaperones.

Mrs. Ruth L. Overmyer, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Kline, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Brucker Jr., Barbara Ann, and Charlotte Ruth and Jayme Carroll were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Overmyer at Logansport.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbyn D. Maynard and son, Richard, Route 2, Culver, entertained at dinner Sunday evening in their home for Mrs. Margaret McDonald and daughters, Karen and Sharon, of Burr Oak, and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stuten and son, Joey, of Plymouth.

Thomas Marshall of St. Louis, Mo., spent the weekend with his mother, Mrs. Lottie Marshall.

It is no accident that men, the world over, have built clocks into the steeples of their churches:
 Reduce life to its simplest components and what have you? TIME and GOD.
 Time marks the beginning of life. It measures the growth of our bodies. It provides opportunity for our work and play. It reveals to us our human limitations. And then, one day, Time leaves us behind. . . .
 But God is the origin of life. He measures the growth of our souls. He provides our strength and forgives our weakness. He reveals to us His limitless Love. And, never deigning to leave us behind, God beckons us on — even beyond the circle of time.
 A parable then: the clock in the steeple!
 Man finds material security and temporal happiness as he learns to respect Time.
 Man finds spiritual security and eternal happiness as he learns to love God!

PURDUE NEEDS TWIN HEIFER CALVES

Purdue University's animal sciences department is searching for identical twin heifer calves to be used in nutritional research.

Indiana cattlemen having identical twin heifer calves with at least half beef breeding may find a market for them at the University. They should be less than a year old and weigh between 300 and 500 pounds.

"Identical" refers to calves of the same sex, body size, shape and color patterns. Their general behavior should be the same, but they need not be purebred.

Purchases of the calves is restricted to Indiana, according to W. H. Smith of Purdue's animal sciences department. Interested Hoosier cattlemen should notify Smith, whose office is in Lilly Hall of Life Sciences, and whose telephone number is 92-4839.
