FOOLS GOLD

What appears to be a golden opportunity often turns out to be nothing but a mirage—it just won't stand the acid test.

SPORTS CORNER

IT IS HERE AGAIN! It doesn't seem possible, but football is back in the news as the season unofficially gets underway this week end and will saturate the TV sports scene from now until the end of January. Whenever the first of August rolls around, you can plan on the oblong ball flying around. This Friday is the All Star game in Chicago and with that the exhibition season opens for the two pro leagues and the high schools are just a smidge behind as practice for these boys start on August 15.

SOME VERY controversial and talented names have been grabbing the share of the headlines for some time anyway in football as Joe Namath and O. J. Simpson both have had their share of the headlines. Namath's case is familiar to all sports fans as is the money battle between Simpson and the Buffalo Bills team. If anyone seriously doubted that "Broadway Joe" would quit football when he turned on the tears a couple of months ago, they were as far out as he is. He wasn't about to let this lucrative career go by and anyone in their right mind knew it. His image of being so innocent about this matter should rate him an academy award.

THEN THERE IS SIMPSON. O. J. is as highly touted football player as has come out of college in many years and deservedly so. His record at Southern California was something else as he possesses everything a good runner needs . . . speed, savvy and plenty of power plus a lot of durability. However, O. J. isn't going to go in pro ball and set everyone on his ear this year or any other. A good runner is essential in football, but still the name of the game is pass and running basically complements the passing game to make a better all round offense.

THE ASKING PRICE OF Simpson is something else too. For an untried rookie, his demands are getting rather ridiculous. We would have to stand behind Mr. Wilson in his battle of the dollars and let his decisions be final. The worth of one man is not as great as the worth of a third of the team and he wants about the same money as that. The big dollar came in the game when the two rival leagues were fighting for talent, but now with a common draft, the salaries are still big to new talent, but not as big as O. J. would like.

WE WOULD LIKE TO SEE O. J. make it and make it big but it is still the place of the boss to remain boss. Requests for some things are just getting out of line and in case O. J. and LeRoy Keyes aren't aware of it, the All Star game will go on without them and so will the pro season. Talent is great, but the talent should do the bargaining not the mouth that has never tested the talent in his new world of football hey are entering.

THE ALL STAR GAME Friday should be another case of the pros winning fairly handily if they are physically ready and mentally up for the game. Putting all this new talent together for just a few weeks is quite a thing, but making them a polished football team in this time is something else. The All Stars have all the credentials but pro experience. It still is a wonderful spectacle and one that football fans look forward to each year. Come Friday night, both teams will show up and both want to win, but whether the Jets will put this game above a overall season or not remains to be seen. Any pro team that looks exceptionally sharp at All Star time, usually runs out of gas before the end of the regular season. A season of 18, 19 or 20 weeks is a long time in this sport.

DESPITE THE FACT THAT football will be here on a sound basis, the first year of the divisional play in baseball is just getting to the interesting point. Two of the four divisions are still really anybody's race, a third looks sewed up and the fourth is just waiting for a stumble by the leading team. In the National league, the western division is something else with five of the six team still well in a race. The eastern division has found the Cubs on top all year, but the Mets and even the slow starting Cardinals can't be counted out at this time as two full months remain.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE is quite different, Baltimore got off to such a great start and simply haven't shown any signs of folding. They are so far ahead of Detroit and Boston it doesn't seem hardly possible that either team could catch them. However, the other division looks like a two team race. Minnesota and Oakland have been dogging each other for the entire season and it shows no signs of letting up now. Both have sound ball clubs and are hungry for that title. The edge by many would go to Minnesota, but you can't overlook that hustling young Oakland team

GOLDIE KEY CLUB

The members were reminded that the club picnic is to be August 31.

PROFESSOR MORSE'S GADGET: 125 YEARS YOUNG

It all began in 1844, when Samuel F. B. Morse tapped out his now famous first public telegram: "What Hath God Wrought!"

For the first time, the barriers of time and space were overcome. Today, a century and a quarter after that historic event, the world's largest and most modern record communication company, Western Union, celebrates its 125th anniversary.

Glancing back, the company, once thought of only in terms of telegraphy, has broadened not only its services, but continually updates its blank. Because people often respond to color quite strongly, the colors of the new blank were not decided upon lightly. After much testing, the choices were to brighten the familiar "telegraph yellow" and use an earthy brown.

The other innovations are not so easily seen by the public. In fact, Western Union has ment of Defense. It's called "Autodin" for Automatic Digital Network. This network,

One of Western Union's computer centers.

AUTODIN, the world's largest automatic digital data network, so expanded its services that the word "telegraph" no longer adequately describes its business today. The hand operated Morse key, which dominated world communications for the better part of a century, gave way to the teleprinter in the 1920's, which tripled the speed of sending messages. And now, new high speed printing methods in addition to computers are being used.

One example of the way computers have revolutionized the communications industry is a system which Western Union designed for the U.S. Depart-largest of its kind in the world, uses computers in nine relay centers and sends and receives millions of messages a year in the form of punched cards or tape, magnetic computer tape, high-speed printer or conventional messages.

Business, too, requires private communication systems for its own use. Telex, Broadband Exchange Service and Info-Corn are three of the names of these sophisticated Communications Systems.

Actually, more than 60 billion words are now being transmitted annually over all Western Union systems . . . and Professor Morse's gadget started it all.
Get the message?

techniques as well. One example of the company's new innovations, which customers can view, was the recent introduction of a new telegraph

What's In A Name?

What's in a name? Webster defines a name as the title by which any person or thing is known or designated. The origin of names can come from many sources, but whatever it may be, the person or thing in question usually lives with this the rest of their time.

Along with names goes reputations . . . usually determined by the person, persons or other characteristics of the object in mind. Association of reputations with names is a natural and one that doesn't change easily.

This is not only true of individuals or animals, but towns and cities as well. Names can have instant effects of people such as: Nixon, one thinks of our president; Washington, reflects our nation's capital; Bob Hope, immediately everyone thinks of the great accomplishments and entertainment provided by this individual; and so on down the line. Also in this category can fall the opinions on the other side of the fence. Mention Hitler and thoughts of it will come as people recall the World War II and the strong dictator who was responsible for much death and suffering; John Dillinger or Al Capone, and one thinks of the gangsters and crime that they were responsible for; mention a snake and people cringe from the thought or skunk and you can almost renew that unpleasant odor they emit.

The same is true with cities and towns. Mention Chicago and mixed emotions come into your mind, maybe the play of the Cubs or White Sox, or maybe the riots and trouble the past couple of years. Say Detroit or Newark and the riots of two years ago leave a bad taste in your mouth. Mention the Wisconsin Dells and one thinks of beauty, rest and pleasure; or Grand Canyon and thoughts are of beautiful captivating splendor. It goes on and on, name and reputations go hand in hand.

Now what happens if some one mentions Walkerton, or

North Liberty? Do you think of a nice home town you are proud of or does some degrading thought come to your mind of coldness and unfriendliness among the people? Are you ashamed of the name of your hometown? If so, you are probably a good part of the reason.

Smalltown USA, is a different way of life. A person picks the location of their home for a couple of reasons . . . one is the attraction of the spot and the other is convenience to employment. Many people live in small towns such as ours and commute daily to larger areas for their work. And yet, something has made them choose the spot they live in. Maybe family ties are here, or maybe a person has just become fond of such a spot and desires to stay at that location.

Anyone living in a small town must have some appreciation for the town or they would leave. But, if questioned about the same, would they give a favorable comment and recommendation? This decision by the individuals involved make the reputation of the town. Every place has advantages and disadvantages, but would you exploit the advantages you like or enlarge on the disadvantages you don't care for. Your choice can be an important factor in the reputation your town has.

A town is no better than its people. If a core of good, community minded individuals work for the betterment of a town, it is going to have good chances for that good reputation, but those that say and feel they want nothing to do with the town or let someone else do it, are the determinant that can hurt a town.

Civic pride, whether it be your home town or Chicago or New York, is an important thing for you to have. It will make your life easier and your town better. Look at the good side and give your hometown a boost, you will be glad you did.

This is one of the best seasons for perch fishing that has ever known. It is no trick at all to bring home a string of 50 or 60.

A seven and one-half pound girl arrived at the home of Walter Listenberger on July 20. Sunday was certainly a big day for Culver. A circus train passed through town, two airplanes flew over, and there was a County K. P. picnic.

Len Crabb and his auto truck have been in service of the C. U. Telephone Company for eight weeks, engaged in the rebuilding of telephone lines as far west as

Col William Hoynes of Notre Dame and C. T. Mattingly of Plymouth, two of the trustees having charge of the erection of the Pottawattomie Indian monument, (Col. A. F. CULVER COLUMN

I have heard many people remark that the "Citizen" needs a column . . . any kind of column. So I have decided to become one of a growing list of would-be writers.

My first problem was what to name this little effort. I was tempted to call it "Culver Chicken" because it will probably lay an egg and I toyed around with "Son of Comments." Until I can come up with something dashing it will just be called "Column." At any rate . . . here we go.

According to the latest bridge gossip someone in Culver has decided that our teenagers are just too noisy and has complained to the authorities about it. As far as I can tell the "noise" has been within reason and the kids have not been out of line. All adults are not like that, kids, so be patient and for heavens sake don't burp when you pass his house!

Did you notice that one of the three-way stop signs on Slate Street has been removed? This means that the town marshal now has an extra stop sign and we can only guess where he will plant it. Actually he has to have some fun since the Lake Patrol car is in town so much of the time. Last week I saw the rookie patrolman chasing a car through town just like a policeman. It looks to me as though he can't find his way back to the Lake

— C C —
CORN ROAST HIGHLIGHTS: Saturday night saw Joe McCarthy in his annual job of dishing up the corn. We judge that the corn roast was a huge success if all those grinning faces with butter dripping from their chins is any indication

Mary Radawski was in charge of the helium tank and as tiny as she is some folks figured she would go up with the balloons.

— C C —
When the streets in Culver finally get oiled, not only will the dust be kept down but think of the savings on gasoline. You'll then be able to slam on the brakes and slide home.

— C C —
With all this rain I haven't heard anyone complain about a flooded basement. The members of the town board evidently have solved the problem of surface drainage.

— C C —
If Earl Eckman keeps enlarging his gladiol display, look for Culver to become the Glad Center of Indiana.

— C C —
The search for someone to paint diagonal lines on Main Street for diagonal parking is getting critical. If any of you can paint horizontal or vertical lines, you can be re-trained.

Voice Of The People

Dear Sir,
It was a rather exciting parade during the Maxinkuckee Regatta week end, however it was very unfortunate that the Culver Community High School Band was not dressed in their new uniforms. Their music was enjoyable, but their lack of attire, made it appear that the parade was treated as only a rehearsal. Since the community contributed considerable money for new uniforms, it certainly seemed a shame and disappointment to the public. Who made the decision not to wear their uniforms and why? Didn't this event seem important? It seemed to be an error in judgment.

THERE are three certain pieces, which if put in just the right places, will make a picture of a donkey. The other six pieces if placed in the right places will make a picture of a goat. If you would use all the nine pieces at one time I don't know what it would make; try and see.

SUDDEN INFANT DEATH

Somewhere in the nation a young child dies — suddenly, quietly, unaccountably. It happens about 10,000 times each year. This tragic phenomenon, so well known to physicians that it has been given the medical term, "sudden infant death," leaves an inevitable trail of grief and self-accusation behind it.

"What did we do wrong?" "What did we leave undone?" agonized parents ask themselves. They conclude that the infant suffocated in its bedclothes, choked on throat secretions or regurgitated food, or fell victim to undetected illness. The sorrow of bereavement is compounded by a lifelong burden of guilt.

Researchers have investigated the problem for years, but so far have found only tentative answers. One of those advanced most recently was voiced by Dr. Abraham B. Bergman, a professor of pediatrics at the University of Washington. His explanation, while it offers no immediate solution to the problem, absolves parents from guilty complicity through ignorance or neglect.

Dr. Bergman traces the cause of crib deaths not to accident but to infection by a so far unidentified virus which, he believes, acts on the nervous system to cause a respiratory spasm which cuts off the child's air supply. In a study of 118 sudden infant deaths otherwise unexplained, he and two associates found viral agents in 34 percent, compared to 8 percent in children who had died of other causes.

There is no way of predicting or preventing such occurrences, Dr. Bergman emphasized, and he urged physicians to assure parents in cases of sudden infant death that they were in no way at fault. "It is bad enough for a parent to lose a child," he commented, "without having to go through life fearing he killed it." Meanwhile research goes on in the hope of achieving a definitive answer to the problem.

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be heard this Sunday in all Christian Science churches. Included in the sermon is the statement: "And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing."
A correlative passage from the denominational textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, comments: "To love one's neighbor as one's self, is a divine idea; but this idea can never be seen, felt, nor understood through the physical senses."

KNOW YOUR INDIANA LAW
By John J. Dillon
Attorney at Law
(This is a public service article explaining in general terms a provision of Indiana law. Individuals who wish to determine the effect of any law upon their private legal affairs should consult a private attorney.)
BETWEEN REASSESSMENTS
If you fail to exercise your right to appeal your real property assessment at the general reassessment time, then you have one further remedy.
In the case of individual pieces of real property, there is only one statutory method for securing a reassessment of such during the six-year interim, and this is by petition filed with the State Board of Tax Commissioners on or before March 31, in any year, other than a year in which a periodical reassessment of real property first becomes effective. Both the State Board of Tax Commissioners and courts have been reluctant in the past to require such an interim reassessment except on account of very unusual circumstances, usually resulting from some isolated change in condition which has occurred subsequent to the last periodical reassessment, which change substantially affects the valuation of such property. This reluctance doubtless stems from the belief that the property owner has his chance initially to complain about his assessed value and to show that it was not proper; if this opportunity was ignored or if the assessed value was finally determined after having been reviewed as previously indicated, to thereafter reduce such value would probably distort the uniformity of assessed valuations throughout the county, unless some substantial change to a piece of real property has occurred after the reassessment, thereby reducing the actual value of all property.

After the assessed values of all real properties have been settled by the reassessment, the reduction in assessed valuation of any real property during the six-year interim can only result in increasing the tax burden imposed upon those real property owners who do not ask or receive any such reduction. For such interim reductions in assessed values to be granted without sound justification would be unfair to other real property owners and, if granted in any great number, would completely destroy the uniformity of assessment and the equality of sharing of the tax burden by real property owners. Uniformity and equality are the cornerstones of the entire reassessment program. You should be required to pay no more or not less than your neighbors.

INVENTED COMPUTER HELPS INVENT PAST
MAN now is using the computer to help "invent" the past to find out more about how man became man. University of Chicago evolutionary biologists, using the computer, are compiling information that reveals how parts of the body in both man and animals may have changed and evolved. One conclusion the biologists have reached is that the common ancestor of man and the African ape was a tree dweller, rather than a knuckle walker like today's chimpanzee and gorilla.
A GRAPEFRUIT - SIZED atomic battery that was launched in 1961 on a navigational satellite has begun its ninth year of orbiting the earth. The compact radioisotope thermoelectric generator already has operated three years beyond its five-year design life. Developed by the Atomic Energy Commission, the generator is supplementing the power from solar cells on the Navy's oldest operating navigational satellite. In eight years of space travel the satellite has circled the earth 40,530 times, and traveled more than a billion

RUNWAY GROOVING, designed to help prevent the hydroplaning of an aircraft by increasing the drainage of surface water, may enhance braking effectiveness of airplanes on wet runways, the Federal Aviation Administration says. Nine months of tests at Washington's National Airport indicate grooving reduces the slippery-when-wet characteristic caused by deposits of rubber from the aircraft tires. Grooving also may improve the capability of braking systems by reducing the number of braking cycles applied.
