Looking Bright Again.

There is a growing feeling that the tide of our commercial fortunes has turned and that the ebb which set in three or four years ago has brought us to a low water mark from which we shall see a flow of steady prosperity. There are pleasant tidings of industrial establishments being started on full time, of others which have been long silent resounding with the busy hum of activity. Wholesale houses are sending out their travelers and conditional orders are being set in execution. One can hear a great sign of national relief go up that the tremendous tension of the past few months is over, and there is a very distinct quickening of the national pulse and a general spirit of expectancy of good times to come.

How far these hopes are justified, how early will be their fulfillment, we do not undertake to say; but we wish to remind our readers that if the good times are to be permanent they must come in a natural way, and not as the result of any artificial and therefore evanescent stimulus. There is a tendency in the press to push the thing along faster than is natural or expedient. The boy must learn to walk before he can run. The credit of the country has been prostrated even to the point of death, and we must not expect that it will recover its full strength and virility in a day. Indeed, the past commercial history of the country shows that recovery is very slow; and it takes very little to give the patient a serious relapse. If we refer back to a period of which the present is strongly suggestive—the year 1873—it was not until the year 1880 that the country had fully recovered from its depression; and while we do not for a moment suppose that prosperity will be so belated in the present case, we do not believe that we are going to move at a bound from the one extreme to the other. Nor would it be desirable. "Boom times" are in some respects very bad times. Better a steady, legitimate growth than a hasty, artificial prompted, hot-house sprouting.

The nation has been learning valuable lessons during the last few years of depression, and we shall do well to make the present hour of restored confidence a starting point for a fresh growth in wealth and power whose motto shall be "make haste slowly."

Communicated.

MR. EDITOR: It strikes the undersigned that it would be a good idea for the authorities to take steps to prohibit all youngsters under 18 years of age from promenading up and down the streets after a certain time in the evening. After what has transpired during the past two years by the way of outrageous depredations, it strikes us that something should be done to suppress the same. We know that all the boys of our village are not vicious, but it behooves us to look after all the boys in order to control those with bad habits. I hear it rumored that the authorities intend to frame an ordinance prohibiting the boys being upon the streets after a certain hour. Now in case they do this they should also in connection with said ordinance, make the license for selling cigarettes, $100. Cigarette smoking has become a fixed habit with some of our boys, which is slowly and surely undermining their constitution, and in a short time will make them physical wrecks. This is a serious matter and should receive prompt attention, as this vice is sending more of our boys to insane asylums and an early grave than all the other agencies combined. The records of the past year will bear me out in this. A CITIZEN.

Thanksgiving.

Thursday was Thanksgiving, and we think the citizens as a whole who comprise this great nation, have a whole lot, individually and collectively to be thankful for. While millions of human beings in India are actually at starvation point, God has blessed America with abundant crops, hence there is no need of anybody starving. We sometimes think that we have a hard lot, but when compared with the deprivations people of other countries endure, with their wars, and where christians are butchered because they are christians, leads us to believe that we are living in a garden of Eden all the year round. The citizens of Culver City observed the day in the usual manner by feasting, etc. A large concourse of citizens attended services at the M. E. church and listened to an excellent sermon. The songs of praise by the choir were pathetic and very appropriate.

Soothing, and not irritating, strengthening, and not weakening, small but effective—such are the qualities of DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. Culver City Drug Store.

SHOULD BE SENT TO THE PEN.

The Low-Lived Scoundrel or Scoundrels That Commit Beastly Depredations

By Besmearing and Throwing Filthy Substances Upon Store Fronts.

For the past eighteen months some scoundrel or a set of scoundrels, whose incarnate nature is lower than the brute creation of the lowest possible type, has been prowling the streets after decent people have retired and besmeared store fronts with human filth. This beastly performance has been perpetrated time and again until forbearance has ceased to be a virtue, and every effort will be put forth to bring these filthy warts upon society to justice. Not satisfied with disfiguring store fronts, these low-lived beings broke into the public school building between Friday night and Sunday morning and left their ghastly marks all over the building, and not content with this, broke out several window lights. The foul brutes will be captured yet, and it should be the especial business of the authorities to see that they receive their just desserts no matter who they are or where they come from. It does not seem possible that Culver City has a citizen within its borders who would stoop to such low, contemptible practices, and we sincerely hope that such will prove the case.

Free Trade Is Dead.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me space in your valuable paper for the following:

The victory for Protection won November 3d, is not the result of a sudden whim, or of blind reliance or unsubstantial claims, or from any desire to see what the party of Protection will do, but it is the result of deliberate conviction based on experience. All that this great mystery means, we have not yet had time to appreciate, but something of its meaning we know and all the people of the country know. As to the past, it means that the American people have grown tired of keeping foreigners at work while American workmen sit in idleness. It means that they have grown tired of letting the foreign producer have the American market as a free gift. It means that they have grown tired of a national deficit; that they have grown tired of bond issues. It means that they have grown tired of closed workshops and silent machinery. It means that they have grown tired of business stagnation and industrial depression. It means that they have grown tired of hard times. It means that they have grown tired of Free-Trade and all its train of evils. It means that they have seen the folly and the hollowness of all the Free-trade rant about "Tariff Taxation;" that they have found out "free raw materials" is a snare and a delusion; that they have learned that "the markets of the world" is only a catch word to deceive the unthinking and the unwary. It means that they have learned the value of our home market. It means that they have learned that the prosperity of the American people depends on the employment of American labor. It means that they have come to believe with William McKinley, that nothing from abroad can be cheap to the American people, which means idleness among ourselves. It means that they have learned that "a revenue tariff levels down" and that "a Protective Tariff levels up."

As to the future, it means business, it means confidence. It means an end to idle capital and idle workmen. It means the American market for the American producer. It means work for American labor. It means better wages. It means prosperity for American homes. It means that the American system of Protection to American industries, the system which has never yet failed to bring prosperity and which never will fail to do so, is to be the permanent policy of the American people. E. G.

The Setting of Milk.

A very large share of the milk skimmed for private butter making in Indiana, is set in cans or crocks and the cream skimmed from the surface.

Milk may be set for cream in various kinds of vessels and under different conditions. The poorest method is to set in shallow tin pans or crocks on pantry shelves or in a cellar. Milk thus set is exposed to a greater air contact than when set otherwise, and so is more liable to be affected by injurious odors, by diseases transmitted through the atmosphere, and by heat and cold. Milk so set will oftentimes rapidly sour, or in very cold weather may freeze. If it sours badly in the summer, when skimmed, curds will be likely to get in the cream and remain more or less in the butter, after churning, forming white spots, thereby seriously injuring the quality of the butter. Or, if the milk or cream freezes, an inferior grade of butter will be made from it.

If cream is to be secured by setting milk, the best way will be to set the milk in round tin cans, about 18 inches deep and 8 inches in diameter. If the can is placed in ice water or cold spring water, to the height of the milk in the can, the conditions for cream separation will be greatly improved, especially if inside of a refrigerator or a creamer. This method helps to keep the milk at a uniform temperature and enables the cream to rise to best advantage. Such cans as these, open at the top, are commonly known as "shot gun" cans, and may be bought of dairy supply houses or can be made by any good tinner.

These deep cans are skimmed in one of two ways—either by a conical skimmer from the surface or by means of a faucet or valve at the bottom of the can, where the skim-milk is drawn off. In experiments at the Indiana station, in comparing these two methods of skimming, where the milk was skimmed from above, there was an average loss about twice as great as in that skimmed by drawing off from below. During 15 days in February the average loss from surface skimming was 0.34 per cent., while that skimmed from below showed a loss of but 0.17 per cent.

It is important that milk should be set only in tin vessels of good quality. The cheap tin sold on five and ten cent counters, is so thin a wash, that it is readily corroded to the under metal, which gives a ruinous flavor to the milk if it sours in the vessel at all. Where used for holding milk, the tin should be of XXX grade. This is more durable, stiffer and less affected by the acid in sour milk.

In general, persons striving to make a fine quality of butter, should have a cabinet creamer. In this the milk may be kept to best advantage and properly protected from objectionable odors and dirt.—Purdue University Agricultural Experiment Station.

Every citizen should consider himself a committee of one, whose business is to agitate the liberal support of the only factor that can "herald" to the world every week, that Culver City is still one of the progressive towns and ranks as one of the leading commercial centers of the county. Did you ever stop to think what a factor for good a newspaper is in a town? Do you know that a town of any size without one is classed as no good and its citizens 20 years behind the times. Hence, be liberal with your home paper and we will feel more encouraged to give you a better paper in the future than in the past.

Grist Mill.

It is a positive fact that there is no better locality in this section of the universe than at Culver City to establish a first-class grist mill, say of about 40 barrel capacity per day. We believe if proper steps were taken such an industry could be secured. The farmers for miles around would come here to mill instead of going to Plymouth, Argos, Lites Ford or Kewanna. This would naturally draw trade to our city and it would be a desirable market for wheat and other grain. Let the matter be agitated. Organize an improvement association, whose business will be to look after the interests of the place and its development.

SHE TOOK HIM.

The Reason Why, Likewise Her Opinion of Him.

The woman at the gate of the mountain farmhouse was an unusual type of mountain woman, in that she was enormously large of frame and had the flesh to match it, so that she must have weighed 200 pounds at the least. She was good looking, too, albeit her hair was inclined to be red, and there was a snap in her eye and in her voice that boded ill for the person provoking her. She told me I could get my dinner in half an hour, and by that time her husband, a man not half her size and almost young enough to be her son, joined us and sat at the foot of the table. After the meal she hustled the man out on the farm again as if she had him hired, and I sat down in the shade to smoke a pipe before riding on.

"My husband wanted to smoke around the house," she said, "but I wouldn't let him."

"I beg your pardon," I responded, taking my pipe out of my mouth.

"Keep right on," she said, disappearing in the house and coming out again in a minute with a clay pipe. "I wouldn't keer to have a fillin uv yer store terbacker myself. I git kinder tired uv long green."

As she filled and lit her pipe she went on:

"Hit looks kinder funny, mebbe," she said, "to see me smokin an not let Jim smoke, but he ain't gotter bit uv control over himself, an thar's no tellin how lazy he'd git ef I let him set round smokin all the time. Smokin is powerful lazyin ef you've ever noticed."

I confessed to the soothing qualities of the weed and branched out on the subject of her husband.

"Is he your first?" I inquired mildly.

"Well, no," she laughed. "I'd be plum ashamed uv myself ef I couldn't do no better'n that the first one. He's my third, an I needn't say nothin for favers."

He Informed the Bishop.

A well known bishop, who takes a prominent interest in everything affecting the working classes, wishing to judge for himself what a journey in a workman's carriage was like took a ticket and joined the miscellaneous crowd which fills these trains on the Great Eastern railway.

After a most undignified struggle for a seat, he found himself jammed in between a navy, smoking a strong black pipe, on his right, and an artist in house painting, smelling strongly of his craft and carefully balancing a can of green paint, on his left hand. The good bishop, apprehensive for the safe balance of this can and nauseated by the very unpleasant odors arising, was also very much shocked by the bad language which garnished the conversation of his neighbors.

After a particularly strong expression from the navy, the bishop, touching him gently, inquired:

"My good man, please tell me where you learn the language you have just made use of."

The navy replied, with a suspicion of pride in his tone:

"Learn it, guv'nor? You can't learn it. It's a gift."—London Correspondence.

Birds Which Are Scavengers.

The sea gull is doubly the benefactor of man. It not only follows the plow on farms near the seacoast in order to eat the freshly turned grubs, but it scours the surface of the sea near the shore and frequents harbors to seize on floating garbage, dead fish or other putrefying morsels.

The services of these birds have saved many a seaport town and village, round which they hover, from plague and pestilence.

Yet every year they are massacred by thousands for idle and cowardly sport or for the sake of their wings to be used in millinery.

Their eggs are plundered wholesale for museums and to fill the shop windows of naturalists. One man boasted a year ago that he had killed 4,000 kittiwake gulls in a single season with his own gun, and an order was given and executed from one London house for 10,000 pairs of wings. At this rate gulls must soon disappear altogether.

The carrion crow, the raven and others which follow their example more or less confer an immense boon on mankind.

Sparrows clear the gutters and places which they inhabit from a vast quantity of scattered fragments. Though too small to be seen, these unsavory morsels would soon become dangerous to human life and health.—London Tit-Bits.

THE PLIMSOLL MARK.

A Device That Has Saved Hundreds of Lives and Much Property.

If you ever walk around the water front of a large commercial city and look closely at the big ocean steamships and sailing ships moored along the wharfs, you will notice that many of them have a white circle and a lot of white lines marked on their sides, close to the water, almost as if some bad boy had been chalking a picture there of a griddle cake and a griddle, but when you find that hundreds of ships are marked just the same way, these painted light colors having the marks in black, you know that those marks really mean something of importance in connection with the ships in which you see them. If you could notice more closely, you could soon discover that all the ships belonging to Great Britain, even the magnificent passenger steamers, like the Lucania and Teutonic, were marked with those queer signs, and that ships of no other nation had them. If you were to ask some sailor what the mark meant, he would tell you briefly that it is the Plimsoll mark, and you would be no wiser than before—in fact, he probably would not know much more than that bare fact himself.

That ugly mark, however, is the safeguard to hundreds of vessels on the stormy ocean and to thousands of lives and to millions of dollars' worth of freight. It has only been in use about 20 years, only properly used for the last 10 years, and is still adopted by only one great seafaring nation in all the world.

Twenty-five years ago it was no uncommon thing for ships to go out to sea laden with valuable cargo and hopeful human beings never to be seen or heard of again. People on shore, even the owners of the cargoes and relatives of the passengers, would take it as something they must be prepared to expect on account of the dangers of the ocean. Finally one man determined to make a study of the subject and see if such terrible tragedies were really unavoidable. He was an inflexible Englishman named Plimsoll, and a member of parliament. He spent day after day along the docks watching ships loading and unloading, coming in and going out. He talked with shipowners, captains and sailors. He saw ships sent to sea with leaky bottoms, rotten spars and worn-out rigging, with rusty boilers and rattletrap engines. He saw them loaded until even in the still waters of the harbor their upper decks were down to the water's edge, and this overloading seemed to be the worst and most frequent fault.

Then he went back to parliament and introduced a bill to put a mark on the sides of ships to show how deeply they could with safety be loaded. The mark suggested was a circle with a horizontal line through its center. When this horizontal line was down to the water's edge, no more freight was to be put into a vessel. She was to be considered loaded. Immediately Mr. Plimsoll brought down upon himself the wrath of shipowners, while everybody else laughed at his cranky idea but he was not going to be downed. He published a book telling all he had learned about the criminal overloading of vessels and their wretched condition when sent to sea.

At last he got a vague sort of an act passed, giving the board of trade power to survey ships going to sea and to stop those which seemed to be unseaworthy. This was in 1873, and during the first nine months of the act 286 vessels were surveyed and 256 of them found unseaworthy. At least one in every ten was found to be so dangerously overloaded as to be in almost a sinking condition before leaving the dock. Of course this opened the eyes of the board of trade and of parliament, and Plimsoll's mark became an established feature on British seagoing ships, but its establishment was fought against by shipowners inch by inch. It was nicknamed the "pancake" and ridiculed and treated with contempt in every way. Some shipowners put the mark on their smokestacks in defiance and derision. Plimsoll held to his idea, however, even getting himself suspended from the house of commons one day for being too blunt and violent in his plain talk upon the subject. The result was the merchant shipping act of 1876, making the Plimsoll mark compulsory on all British seagoing vessels and requiring its position to be fixed, not by the shipowners, but by the board of trade.—Lieutenant John M. Ellicott, U. S. N., in St. Nicholas.

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

Some Reading That Will Prove Interesting to Young Mothers. How to Guard Against the Disease.

Croup is a terror to young mothers and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains nothing injurious. Culver City Drug Store. 1 feb
