A car load of choice brick has arrived from Converse for the new Evangelical church. Smith & Co. will lay the brick, and are experts at the business.

Justice of the Peace, I. C. Brook, united in marriage at his residence three miles north-east of Culver, last Monday afternoon, Mr. Omer A. Southall of Fulton county and Miss Minnie I. Rhodes of Culver.

Mr. H. M. Speyer returned from New York City Wednesday evening. He reports that his brother Jacob and family are in good health, and that his mother Mrs. Margaret Speyer, will remain in New York the balance of the summer. While in New York he promenade the deck of the man of war, St. Louis, and other death-dealing crafts. He also combined business with pleasure and bought a magnificent line of dry goods and novelties.

For sometime past Young & Keen, proprietors of the novelty works in Culver have been compelled to send their heavy work in iron and steel repairing away owing to the fact that they did not have a lathe large enough to do the work. But we are pleased to chronicle that these gentlemen have overcome this difficulty, and have placed a new lathe in their establishment large enough to accomplish all kinds of work in their line. It is a beauty, and the boys invite one and all to call and inspect this machine. Young & Keen are mechanics of rare ability in iron and wood work line, and this fact has built them up a lucrative business.

Monday evening about 6:30 o'clock while the south bound through freight train on the Vandalia was on its way about a quarter of a mile from the Lakeville station, a brakebeam on a car fell and caught along on the ties. Several cars were derailed and when the train got onto the 60 foot bridge over the ditch that drains into the lake the beam caught between the stringers and spread the bridge so that it fell precipitating 11 cars into the ditch piled in a heap. Fortunately none of the train crew were injured. The tracks were cleared for the resume of traffic as soon as possible. Trains used the B. & O., Wabash and Three I track, so that all stations were made as usual until the wreck was cleared away and the bridge rebuilt.

Card of Thanks.

We, G. A. R. Veterans of this vicinity hereby extend our sincere thanks to those who so kindly assisted us in the services of decorating the graves of our fallen comrades, especially to the singers and orator of the day who would not take pay for their services. Hoping that we may all live to enjoy many more similar occasions, we are yours truly,
THE VETERANS.

Work on the new barracks is going on rapidly. The foundation is about completed.

Three competitive drills were held in each company this week, and the winners of those will be entitled to enter the competitive drill for a gold medal next Wednesday.

A spelling contest for a gold medal was held last week. Announcement of winner next week.

The cavalry squad is progressing rapidly in its preparations for commencement.

A new band stand has been erected in the riding hall.

The Morgan Park base ball team from Chicago has cancelled its game with our boys next Saturday. They were undoubtedly afraid to come, as our team has defeated every Chicago team they have played.

Last Tuesday, Decoration Day, the Englewood High School team, from Chicago, met our boys upon the diamond. They put up a good game, but had to go down before the invincibles from Culver to the tune of 4 to 2. Mackenzie struck out fourteen men. Bigwood did fine playing, making a good catch after a long run, and bringing in the winning run, by a neat single, after two men were out, and then clinching it a few minutes later by crossing the plate himself. Proctor was unable to finish the game on account of sickness, and Canfield took his place. Barring a little squabble over a decision, the game was a neat one.

BIG FIRE AT KEWANNA.

Fair View Stock Barn Burns with Great Loss.

Thursday afternoon parties from Logansport gave a test with a celebrated Obenchain Chemical Engine and smothered a raging fire in less than 30 seconds. The test was a fair and impartial one and proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that two of these engines would be a wonderful fire protection for Culver; which needs such a protection in a most deplorable manner. We understand that a petition is being circulated giving the resident real estate owners an opportunity to sign their signatures in favor of purchasing these engines. Now, how any one can hesitate when he knows he is liable to be burned out at any time, and knows that Culver has no protection against fire whatever, is a mystery we are unable to solve.

The question is advanced that these engines cannot throw a chemical stream over, or upon top of a high building, hence are no good, but the writer saw the machine throw a stream 60 feet, and also saw a million dollar fire once, where the town had two engines that cost $8,000. It was conceded that if the department had had a light chemical engine which could have reached the fire instantly the million dollars' worth of property could have been saved. At Kewanna, this Friday evening, the Fair View stock barn burned, with great loss to Henderson Brothers. One of these chemical engines could have put out that fire when discovered. We appeal to you, to consider this matter carefully. You have an opportunity to secure a protection for the small sum of $20. Do not be foolish and let this opportunity slip through your fingers. Monterey has one of these engines and the town clerk, Frank Bushle, says that it saved his town a $10,000 fire a short time ago, as a barn burned and with the chemical engine half the town was saved, as the wind was blowing hard. You all know Frank and he will back up these statements. It is getting a fire subdued right from the start is what these engines are for and they fill the bill.

Winona Assembly opens this year in July.

As the north bound train upon the Vandalia was near Bruce Lake station Tuesday evening, some miscreant shot through the window, barely missing conductor Murray who had charge of the train. The glass was badly shattered.

T. H. Wilson and family of Logansport are now occupants of their handsome cottage upon the east side of the lake.

Luke Burket, who has been working for Austin Drukemiller, three miles northeast from Culver, was struck by lightning last Monday. He had taken refuge from the rain in an old barn on the Garver place. The south-west corner of the barn was badly demolished. When found about half an hour afterwards he was unconscious. His hat showed several holes, and the sweat band was torn into fragments. He was conveyed to Mr. Drukemiller's home and Dr. Wiseman summoned. At last accounts he was slowly recovering.

HABIT.

Habit is the involuntary tendency, acquired by their frequent repetition, to perform certain actions, or to do easily, naturally, and with growing certainty, that which we do often. A habit is a fixed and established custom, a kind of second nature. Habit in a child is, at first, like a spider's web; if neglected, it becomes a thread of twine; next, a cord of rope, and finally, a cable; then who can break it?

Habits may be likened unto rulers, either kind or cruel, according as they are good or bad. O, the tyranny, the despotism of a bad habit! Coleridge, one of the subtlest intellects and finest poets of the time, battled for twenty years before he could emancipate himself from his tyrant, opium. He went in a voluntary imprisonment; he hired a man to watch him day and night, and keep him by force from tasting this destructive drug; he formed resolution after resolution. Yet, to no effect. During all the best years of his life he wasted his substance and his health, neglected his family, and lived degraded and accursed, simply because he had not the resolution and determination to abstain. He would even lay plans to cheat the very man whom he had paid to keep the drug from him, and bribe the jailor to whom he had voluntarily surrendered himself. Terrible! terrible! is the despotism of a bad habit! The case of Coleridge may be an extreme one, but there are many who are as truly the slaves of a perverted appetite as he. Their despot may be opium, tobacco, drink, or worse, but they are so completely under the dominion of their master, that nothing short of a moral war of independence, which will task all their own strength, and all they could borrow from others, would be sufficient to deliver them.

Very few people form habits of wrong-doing deliberately or wilfully; they glide into them by degrees and almost unconsciously, and before they are aware of danger the habits are confirmed, and require resolute and persistent effort to effect a change. "Resist beginning," was a maxim of the ancients, and should be preserved as a landmark in our day. A few illustrations will suffice to show how easy it is to drift into bad habits. A man fell asleep in his boat on the Niagara river. During his slumber the boat broke loose from her moorings, and he awoke to find himself going down the rapids directly towards the cataract. In vain he shrieked for help, and tried to row against the current. He drifted on, till his light craft upset, he was borne rapidly to the falls, went over and disappeared forever. During a great battle on sea, one of the magnificent floating batteries broke from anchorage and began to drift directly into the hottest of the enemy's fire. The crew vainly strove to check its progress or divert it from its path. Every minute it drifted nearer, and the most superhuman efforts failed to prevent its drifting with its crew to inevitable death.

A ship was wrecked at sea. The passengers and crew took refuge on a raft, the boats having been broken in the attempt to launch them. For days and weeks they drifted about, without sail or oar to aid them. At last their provisions failed; and then the water. Still they drifted about, vainly hoping for sight of land. They received no help, but drifted on, until the last trace was lost forever.

So it is in life. The intemperate man, who thinks he, at least, will never die a drunkard, whatever his neighbor may do, only wakes to find himself drifting down the cataract, and all hope gone. All the undisciplined drift about on the sea of life, till, at last, they drift away into darkness and death. Drift not hopelessly into utter ruin. Stem the tide.

Evil habits must be conquered, or they will conquer and destroy peace and happiness. "Vice us habits are so great a stain upon human nature," said Cicero, "and are so odious in themselves, that every person actuated by right reason would avoid them, though they were sure that they would always be concealed both from God and man, and had no future punishment fixed upon them." When evil habits are opposed, they resist you strongest at the first attack, but at each successive assault the resistance becomes weaker, until finally victory is yours.

A habit is a man's best friend or worst enemy. It can exalt him to the highest pinnacle of virtue, honor and happiness, or sink him to the lowest depths of vice, shame and misery. We may form habits of honesty or dishonesty; truth or falsehood; industry or idleness; kindness or cruelty; and politeness or impoliteness. In short there is not an act of the body or mind to which we may not be chained down by this despotic power.

The force of habit may be made plain by a few examples. Perhaps you have heard the story of the man who bought the eagle. Having no cage to put him in, the man tied the eagle to a stake by means of a long rope. The eagle kept walking round and round the stake at the rope's end. After a while, the owner released the bird, but instead of going away, it kept right on walking the well-beaten path.

The force of habit is illustrated by a counselor, renowned for the art of pleading, who had a trick of rubbing his spectacle case while addressing a jury. An attorney thought this action unbecoming, and, accordingly, watched for an opportunity, and stole away the spectacle case. For the first time in his life, the counselor's tongue faltered; he became confused and embarrassed; he stammered and blundered, and was about to sit down, self-defeated, when the attorney restored the spectacle case. Straightway, with the first touch of the familiar talisman, the mind recovered its self-possession, the memory its clearness, and the tongue its fluency; and, as again and again the lawyer fondly rubbed his spectacle case, argument after argument came forth. And the jury, to whom a few moments before, the case seemed hopeless, were now convinced of its justice. Such is the force of habit.

There is great necessity for the greatest care and watchfulness against any evil habit, for the character is always weakest at that point at which it has once given way. It is, indeed, scarcely possible to over-estimate the importance of training the young to virtuous habits. In them, they are the easiest formed, and when formed, they last for life. Like letters cut on the bark of a tree, they grow and widen with age. "Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it." As it is difficult to break away from an evil habit, even so, good habit strengthens with age, character becomes formed, and any turning into a new path becomes more and more difficult. It is, indeed, very difficult to uproot an old evil habit. Try to reform an habitually drunken person, and in a large majority of cases, you will fail, for the habit has so wound itself in and through the life, till it has virtually become a part of it. Little does the mother, who allows her sons to have a little "social game" of cards in the home when they are young, think that they will be professional gamblers, little does she think that any disobedience on their part will lead to anything evil. Perhaps the young man who takes the first glass never has the least idea that he will ever be the habitual drunkard in the gutter. But, by and by, the despot has him bound, and he is unable to break the chains.

It is a great point for young men to begin well, for it is in the beginning of life, that that system of conduct is adopted, which soon assumes the force of habit. Begin well, and the habit of doing well soon becomes as easy the habit of doing otherwise. "Well begun is half ended" says the proverb, "and a good beginning is half the battle." Many promising young men have injured themselves by a first false step in the beginning of life, while others of much less promising talents, have succeeded, simply by beginning well and going onward. The good practical beginning is, to a certain extent, an assurance of prosperity. There is many a poor creature, now going through life, miserable to himself and a cause of sorrow to others, who might have succeeded, if, instead of merely making resolutions of well doing if he had actually gone to work and made a good beginning.

Remember kind friends, the sowing and the harvest time.

Sow a thought, you reap an act; sow an act, you reap a habit; sow a habit, you reap a character; sow a character, you reap a destiny. HETTIE GRUBB.

will make me poor buying shoes for them!" Did you ever say that? Then it was because you had failed to connect with the right kind of shoes. No strain is so hard on a shoe as the wear given by a healthy, romping boy or girl. Manufacturers have studied the matter for years, and the best results of this study is found in the line of solid, tough leather shoes we have now in stock. There are two solid soles on these shoes; they have sole leather tips; they have an extra stay sewed up the back and the uppers are made of strongest kangaroo calf. There's more wear in these shoes than in any others we know of.

Decoration Day.

As usual, Decoration Day was observed in Union township characteristic of a patriotic people. In order to take part in the exercises elsewhere, Popular Grove citizens held their exercises Monday afternoon. Comrade Jacob Myers was officer of the day and had marshalled his hosts in a handsome grove where a stage had been erected and seats prepared in order to make the people comfortable. About two o'clock p. m. the services opened with a patriotic song by the choir, at the conclusion of which, the orator of the day, Mr. Kelley of Knox, commenced his address, but owing to a sudden and terrific thunder storm, the people had to seek shelter in the school house where the orator finished his speech, which was a grand and patriotic eulogy upon the lives and deeds of the living and dead heroes. The choir furnished par excellence vocal music, and we wish to remark right here that the Poplar Grove community has some "sweet singers." At the close of the services the old veterans, Womens' Relief Corps, I. O. O. F. of Maxenkuckee, school children and citizens, marched to the cemetery and properly decorated the graves of comrades and friends.

BURR OAK.

On Tuesday forenoon, decoration services were properly observed at Burr Oak. An appropriate oration was delivered by a gentleman from Knox, and the services were attended by a large and patriotic concourse of citizens.

AT CULVER.

On Tuesday at 1 o'clock the citizens of Union township began to arrive at Culver, and although there was great disappointment because the Culver military academy was unable to take part, or even a band to furnish music, officer of the day, Jacob Myers, formed the old veterans in line, Womens' Relief Corps and members of the K. of P. Lodge and marched to the Reformed church where a large audience heard banker McCormick deliver one of the best orations ever heard in Culver. After the services at the church, imposing ceremonies were held at the cemetery and the graves of comrades and friends fittingly decorated with beautiful flowers. All in all it was a success, everything considered.

A smooth swindle has been worked on the merchants of a neighboring village. A stranger appeared at each store where tobacco and cigars were sold, and under the guise of being a revenue inspector, claimed that the stamps on the boxes were some of the counterfeit lot manufactured in Philadelphia. He claimed he was authorized to take up the boxes, cigars and all. The merchants objected, but the stranger showed newspapers containing accounts of cigars being confiscated on account of bogus stamps and the merchants gave up the goods. Later the merchants found out they had been taken in.—Ex.

A rural editor describes May as being a month "when the mule with the sore shoulder flinches in the furrow and the cow bellers for her imprisoned offspring; when the butter giveth its color in the churn and the red ants riot among the milk crocks, when the hired man eats two pounds of bacon, nine soda biscuits, 17 young onions and drinks a gallon of butter-milk for supper and then goes to bed and dreams of his girl and heaven.

MR. EDITOR.—In behalf of the Maxinkuckee Association which I have the honor of representing, I desire to take exceptions to your recent item, entitled "Tax Assessor" in which you imply that the cottage owners are asking for more than they are justly entitled to, as it refers to the adjustment of taxes.

We are in position to prove that the property along the lake front has never been assessed equally, although the conditions where discriminations have been made are identical. In many instances nothing but a fence dividing the property which has been assessed at $25.00 and $1000.00 per acre respectively. In other words, farmland—possibly but recently tilled, when disposed of for the purpose of erecting a dwelling thereon, immediately increases in value with the assessor, about 400 per cent, as shown by the example cited.

This injustice, in connection with the fact that the cottage owners around the lake annually pay about $3000.00 into the the county treasury, aggregating about $30,000.00 for the past ten years, for which we have up to this time received absolutely nothing, not even protection to our property, certainly entitles us to a respectful hearing by the proper authorities, and which we propose having.

We are obliged at a great expense to employ a patrolman, to prevent our cottages from being robbed and vandalism being perpetrated which certainly does not look well for the boasted protection to which we are entitled to by virtue of the taxes which we pay.

Our Association has been organized for the purpose of promoting the interest of Lake Maxinkuckee and whatever we undertake is in this direction only and we would be pleased to have you shape your comments accordingly, believing that our interests in this respect are identical. Yours truly, OTTO STECHHAN, President of Max. Association.

A FOLLOWER OF MEASLES.—In many instances a persistent cough follows an attack of measles. In speaking of this Mr. Walter B. Beel, editor of the Elkin (N. C.) Times, says: "Three weeks ago I had an attack of measles which left me with a bad cough. I took several doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the cough has entirely disappeared. I considered Chamberlain's medicine the best on the market." For sale by T. E. Slattery, 461m

HABIT.

Habit is the involuntary tendency, acquired by their frequent repetition, to perform certain actions, or to do easily, naturally, and with growing certainty, that which we do often. A habit is a fixed and established custom, a kind of second nature. Habit in a child is, at first, like a spider's web; if neglected, it becomes a thread of twine; next, a cord of rope, and finally, a cable; then who can break it?

Habits may be likened unto rulers, either kind or cruel, according as they are good or bad. O, the tyranny, the despotism of a bad habit! Coleridge, one of the subtlest intellects and finest poets of the time, battled for twenty years before he could emancipate himself from his tyrant, opium. He went in a voluntary imprisonment; he hired a man to watch him day and night, and keep him by force from tasting this destructive drug; he formed resolution after resolution. Yet, to no effect. During all the best years of his life he wasted his substance and his health, neglected his family, and lived degraded and accursed, simply because he had not the resolution and determination to abstain. He would even lay plans to cheat the very man whom he had paid to keep the drug from him, and bribe the jailor to whom he had voluntarily surrendered himself. Terrible! terrible! is the despotism of a bad habit! The case of Coleridge may be an extreme one, but there are many who are as truly the slaves of a perverted appetite as he. Their despot may be opium, tobacco, drink, or worse, but they are so completely under the dominion of their master, that nothing short of a moral war of independence, which will task all their own strength, and all they could borrow from others, would be sufficient to deliver them.

Very few people form habits of wrong-doing deliberately or wilfully; they glide into them by degrees and almost unconsciously, and before they are aware of danger the habits are confirmed, and require resolute and persistent effort to effect a change. "Resist beginning," was a maxim of the ancients, and should be preserved as a landmark in our day.

A few illustrations will suffice to show how easy it is to drift into bad habits. A man fell asleep in his boat on the Niagara river. During his slumber the boat broke loose from her moorings, and he awoke to find himself going down the rapids directly towards the cataract. In vain he shrieked for help, and tried to row against the current. He drifted on, till his light craft upset, he was borne rapidly to the falls, went over and disappeared forever. During a great battle on sea, one of the magnificent floating batteries broke from anchorage and began to drift directly into the hottest of the enemy's fire. The crew vainly strove to check its progress or divert it from its path. Every minute it drifted nearer, and the most superhuman efforts failed to prevent its drifting with its crew to inevitable death.

A ship was wrecked at sea. The passengers and crew took refuge on a raft, the boats having been broken in the attempt to launch them. For days and weeks they drifted about, without sail or oar to aid them. At last their provisions failed; and then the water. Still they drifted about, vainly hoping for sight of land. They received no help, but drifted on, until the last trace was lost forever.

So it is in life. The intemperate man, who thinks he, at least, will never die a drunkard, whatever his neighbor may do, only wakes to find himself drifting down the cataract, and all hope gone. All the undisciplined drift about on the sea of life, till, at last, they drift away into darkness and death. Drift not hopelessly into utter ruin. Stem the tide.

Evil habits must be conquered, or they will conquer and destroy peace and happiness. "Vice us habits are so great a stain upon human nature," said Cicero, "and are so odious in themselves, that every person actuated by right reason would avoid them, though they were sure that they would always be concealed both from God and man, and had no future punishment fixed upon them." When evil habits are opposed, they resist you strongest at the first attack, but at each successive assault the resistance becomes weaker, until finally victory is yours.

A habit is a man's best friend or worst enemy. It can exalt him to the highest pinnacle of virtue, honor and happiness, or sink him to the lowest depths of vice, shame and misery. We may form habits of honesty or dishonesty; truth or falsehood; industry or idleness; kindness or cruelty; and politeness or impoliteness. In short there is not an act of the body or mind to which we may not be chained down by this despotic power.

The force of habit may be made plain by a few examples. Perhaps you have heard the story of the man who bought the eagle. Having no cage to put him in, the man tied the eagle to a stake by means of a long rope. The eagle kept walking round and round the stake at the rope's end. After a while, the owner released the bird, but instead of going away, it kept right on walking the well-beaten path.

The force of habit is illustrated by a counselor, renowned for the art of pleading, who had a trick of rubbing his spectacle case while addressing a jury. An attorney thought this action unbecoming, and, accordingly, watched for an opportunity, and stole away the spectacle case. For the first time in his life, the counselor's tongue faltered; he became confused and embarrassed; he stammered and blundered, and was about to sit down, self-defeated, when the attorney restored the spectacle case. Straightway, with the first touch of the familiar talisman, the mind recovered its self-possession, the memory its clearness, and the tongue its fluency; and, as again and again the lawyer fondly rubbed his spectacle case, argument after argument came forth. And the jury, to whom a few moments before, the case seemed hopeless, were now convinced of its justice. Such is the force of habit.

There is great necessity for the greatest care and watchfulness against any evil habit, for the character is always weakest at that point at which it has once given way. It is, indeed, scarcely possible to over-estimate the importance of training the young to virtuous habits. In them, they are the easiest formed, and when formed, they last for life. Like letters cut on the bark of a tree, they grow and widen with age. "Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it." "As it is difficult to break away from an evil habit, even so, good habit strengthens with age, character becomes formed, and any turning into a new path becomes more and more difficult. It is, indeed, very difficult to uproot an old evil habit.

Try to reform a habitually drunken person, and in a large majority of cases, you will fail, for the habit has so wound itself in and through the life, till it has virtually become a part of it. Little does the mother, who allows her sons to have a little "social game" of cards in the home when they are young, think that they will be professional gamblers, little does she think that any disobedience on their part will lead to anything evil. Perhaps the young man who takes the first glass never has the least idea that he will ever be the habitual drunkard in the gutter. But, by and by, the despot has him bound, and he is unable to break the chains.

It is a great point for young men to begin well, for it is in the beginning of life, that that system of conduct is adopted, which soon assumes the force of habit. Begin well, and the habit of doing well soon becomes as easy the habit of doing otherwise. "Well begun is half ended" says the proverb, "and a good beginning is half the battle." Many promising young men have injured themselves by a first false step in the beginning of life, while others of much less promising talents, have succeeded, simply by beginning well and going onward. The good practical beginning is, to a certain extent, an assurance of prosperity. There is many a poor creature, now going through life, miserable to himself and a cause of sorrow to others, who might have succeeded, if, instead of merely making resolutions of well doing if he had actually gone to work and made a good beginning.

Remember kind friends, the sowing and the harvest time.

Sow a thought, you reap an act; sow an act, you reap a habit; sow a habit, you reap a character; sow a character, you reap a destiny.

"Those Children
will make me poor buying shoes for them?" Did you ever say that? Then it was because you had failed to connect with the right kind of shoes. No strain is so hard on a shoe as the wear given by a healthy, romping boy or girl. Manufacturers have studied the matter for years, and the best results of this study is found in the line of solid, tough leather shoes we have now in stock. There are two solid soles on these shoes; they have sole leather tips; they have an extra stay sewed up the back and the uppers are made of strongest kangaroo calf. There's more wear in these shoes than in any others we know of.

Decoration Day.

As usual Decoration Day was observed in Union township characteristic of a patriotic people. In order to take part in the exercises elsewhere, Popular Grove citizens held their exercises Monday afternoon. Comrade Jacob Myers was officer of the day and had marshalled his hosts in a handsome grove where a stage had been erected and seats prepared in order to make the people comfortable. About two o'clock p. m. the services opened with a patriotic song by the choir, at the conclusion of which, the orator of the day, Mr. Kelley of Knox, commenced his address, but owing to a sudden and terrific thunder storm, the people had to seek shelter in the school house where the orator finished his speech, which was a grand and patriotic eulogy upon the lives and deeds of the living and dead heroes. The choir furnished par excellence vocal music, and we wish to remark right here that the Poplar Grove community has some "sweet singers." At the close of the services the old veterans, Womens' Relief Corps, I. O. O. F. of Maxinkuckee, school children and citizens, marched to the cemetery and properly decorated the graves of comrades and friends.

BURR OAK.

On Tuesday forenoon, decoration services were properly observed at Burr Oak. An appropriate oration was delivered by a gentleman from Knox, and the services were attended by a large and patriotic concourse of citizens.

AT CULVER.

On Tuesday at 1 o'clock the citizens of Union township began to arrive at Culver, and although there was great disappointment because the Culver military academy was unable to take part, or even a band to furnish music, officer of the day, Jacob Myers, formed the old veterans in line, Womens' Relief Corps and members of the K. of P. Lodge and marched to the Reformed church where a large audience heard banker McCormick deliver a beautiful sermon after the services at the church. After the services at the church, the funeral services were held at the cemetery and the graves of comrades and friends fittingly decorated with beautiful flowers. All in all it was a success, everything considered.

A smooth swindle has been worked on the merchants of a neighboring village. A stranger appeared at each store where tobacco and cigars were sold, and under the guise of being a revenue inspector, claimed that the stamps on the boxes were some of the counterfeit lot manufactured in Philadelphia. He claimed he was authorized to take up the boxes, cigars and all. The merchants objected, but the stranger showed newspapers containing accounts of cigars being confiscated on account of bogus stamps and the merchants gave up the goods. Later the merchants found out they had been taken in.—Ex.

A rural editor describes May as being a month "when the mule with the sore shoulder flinches in the furrow and the cow bellers for her imprisoned offspring; when the butter giveth its color in the churn and the red ants riot among the milk crocks, when the hired man eats two pounds of bacon, nine soda biscuits, 17 young onions and drinks a gallon of butter milk for supper and then goes to bed and dreams of his girl and heaven."

MR. EDITOR.—In behalf of the Maxinkuckee Association which I have the honor of representing, I desire to take exceptions to your recent item, entitled "Tax Assessor" in which you imply that the cottage owners are asking for more than they are justly entitled to, as it refers to the adjustment of taxes.

We are in position to prove that the property along the lake front has never been assessed equally, although the conditions where discriminations have been made are identical. In many instances nothing but a fence dividing the property which has been assessed at $25.00 and $1000.00 per acre respectively. In other words, farmland—possibly but recently tilled, when disposed of for the purpose of erecting a dwelling thereon, immediately increases in value with the assessor, about 400 per cent, as shown by the example cited.

This injustice, in connection with the fact that the cottage owners around the lake annually pay about $3000.00 into the the county treasury, aggregating about $30,000.00 for the past ten years, for which we have up to this time received absolutely nothing, not even protection to our property, certainly entitles us to a respectful hearing by the proper authorities, and which we propose having.

We are obliged at a great expense to employ a patrolman, to prevent our cottages from being robbed and vandalism being perpetrated which certainly does not look well for the boasted protection to which we are entitled to by virtue of the taxes which we pay.

Our Association has been organized for the purpose of promoting the interest of Lake Maxinkuckee and whatever we undertake is in this direction only and we would be pleased to have you shape your comments accordingly, believing that our interests in this respect are identical. Yours truly, OTTO STECHHAN, President of Max. Association.

A FOLLOWER OF MEASLES.—In many instances a persistent cough follows an attack of measles. In speaking of this Mr. Walter B. Beel, editor of the Elkin (N. C.) Times, says: "Three weeks ago I had an attack of measles which left me with a bad cough. I took several doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the cough has entirely disappeared. I considered Chamberlain's medicines the best on the market." For sale by T. E. Slattery, 461m
