OSBORN BLOCK. Culver. 105 MICHIGAN ST., Plymouth.

THE EVANGELICAL CHURCH.

TO BE DEDICATED SEPTEMBER 17TH.

An Ornament to the City and a Credit to its Builders.

Culver can now, and will boast of having as fine churches as any town of its size in the state, or in fact in any town double its size when the church edifices now in course of construction are completed. The Evangelical church, which is about completed, and which stands about three blocks south of the postoffice, is a model of architectural beauty and speaks volumes in favor of the mechanics who constructed and planned the building. The church is veneered with brick, the work being performed by D.H. Smith & Co. of this city, which fully demonstrates that this company is no novice at the business, and can compare its work with that of any other contractors in the county. The carpenter work is under the immediate charge of that master mechanic, J. H. Zechiel, who can without fear of contradiction, point with pride to this modern structure, and ask "Who can find fault with the work?"

The dimensions of the church are 33x56, with 20 foot ceiling, and has a gallery 15x82, and an ante-room 15x22. The main auditorium is separated from the ante-room by sliding doors, which in case of necessity can be opened, thus throwing both rooms into one, which, with the gallery, adds greatly to the seating capacity of the church. The building contains nine windows, the casings etc., being finished with block trimmings. The inclined floor is laid with white pine—oil finish.

The white coating performed by master artist, S. G. Buswell, (who is proud of the fact that he is a Culverite,) and it is truly an excellent job. The church will be dedicated Sept. 17th. A week's meeting will be held before the dedicatory services, the first service being held on morning of the 10th inst. Sunday school will convene at 9:30 and arrange as it was organized in the old church last New Year. There will also be preaching services morning and evening by Rev. Newman. The church will be dedicated by Rev. N. Shupp of Oregon, who will be here on a visit. During the week's service, Rev. Newman will aim to have preaching by different ministers every evening.

"Flew the Coop."

Wednesday the citizens of this usually serene city were somewhat startled at the announcement that Pittman, manager of the Colonade hotel the past four months, had quietly shoved down all the cash and skipped for parts unknown, taking his family with him. It is also said that he leaves many local creditors who mourn his departure and will not be comforted. We hear it rumored that the owner of the house will make an effort to have this "slick knave" brought to justice, if he can be located. We await developments.

A Profound and Highly Interesting Sermon.

Last Sunday evening, Rev. Barber preached the best sermon it has been our pleasure to hear him deliver. His theme was founded upon the three texts. "Enoch walked with God." "Before his translation Enoch had the assurance that he pleased God." "Where art thou?"

The Reverend gentleman pointed out the great love of God for his people and for all humanity, and of man's duty to God. He showed by scripture the various ways in which man could sin against God, and of the large number of people who by virtue of their sins were under condemnation, and were thereby excluded from the joys of the life to come.

He asserted that in the matter of evil that there is no middle or neutral ground, and that no man can stand on both sides. "No man can serve two masters." "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

To more clearly show his thought, he considered one of the greatest evils, that of drunkenness, quoting numerous passages of scripture unequivocal in its condemnation. He condemned the traffic as seeking and accomplishing the demoralization and utter degradation of its servitors, and stated that the two most appropriate mottoes that could be placed over the door of every saloon should be "Ruin and damnation." He branded the saloon's calling as disreputable, and vividly portrayed the responsibility resting upon those engaged in it for the destruction of souls in countless numbers, who through it have gone to perdition, and quoted the text, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and maketh him drunken also." He stated that one of the arguments most frequently used in support of the traffic in Culver was that it was necessary to the building up of the business interests of the town, and against that doctrine placed the text "Woe unto him that buildeth a town with blood, and establishes a city by iniquity." He stated that a town built up at the expense of its morality and intellectuality was unworthy of any prominence or condition it enjoyed. He likewise stated that any individual, who by the traffic or its prevalence was reaping profit, was doing so in violation of the will of God and the welfare of his fellowman. In speaking of the responsibilities of the christian in combating the evil and of the rebuffs and resistance met with, he would have borne in mind that the enemy of the saloon was the true friend of the saloonist and the drinker, that he who aided the saloon was the real enemy of the saloonist and the drinker. He quoted the argument of a certain church member to a drinker that the traffic was necessary to the business interests of the town, and stated that by virtue of his profession he was a powerful enemy of the saloonist and drinker and that such a man was in sore need of conversion. In conclusion, he asked his congregation where it stood upon the question and clearly pointed out where to be true to their profession they should stand upon the side of the right.

Throughout his discourse, his manner was earnest and impetuous, and he sent a thrill through his congregation which gave evidence that his mouth spake from the depths of his heart.

While playing near the new Evangelical church last Wednesday evening, Master Arlie Cromley had the misfortune to fall and break his left arm, just below the elbow. Dr. Wiseman reduced the fracture, and he is now doing as well as could be expected.

Mrs. John Osborn and daughter Pearl of Logansport are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Morris. Mrs. Osborn has been very sick for some time past, and will remain here until she is convalescent.

The Fish-Food of Lake Maxinkuckee.

One of the most interesting and important lines of investigation which the U. S. Commission is carrying on at its station at Lake Maxinkuckee is a study of the microscopic life of the lake.

Everyone who is at all observing has noticed that the surface of the lake occasionally becomes covered with a coating of "green scum", and some have thought this indicated that the water is impure. But this "green scum" is simply millions of individuals of one or more species of small plants which, instead of rendering the water impure, do much to purify it.

The water of the lake is well supplied with many kinds of minute or microscopic animals and plants. The plants are usually unicellular and are called algae. The animals are usually just large enough to be seen with the naked eye, and consist chiefly of various species of crustaceans. These small animals and plants are carried about more or less by the currents and the waves, and do not have the freedom of movement possessed by the larger animals. These minute animals and plants constitute what is known as "the Plankton" of the lake.

To collect the plankton it is necessary to have special apparatus. The plankton net used by Professor Juday, who is conducting the plankton studies, is a large funnel-shaped net made of the finest bolting cloth. This net is let down to any desired depth and then hauled up vertically. The net being open at the top and closed at the bottom, there will be a strain through it of a column of water equal in length to the depth through which it is hauled, and 10 inches in diameter, which is the diameter of the opening at the top of the net; and there will be strained from this water and retained in the net all of the minute animals and plants which it contained. This "catch" is transferred to a bottle and, by methods too technical to describe in this place, is then accurately measured, so that the actual amount of the catch can be determined. Mr. Juday is using this net regularly every morning in the deepest part of the lake and is also making tests in various other places. The net is hauled at different depths in order to determine the vertical distribution of the plankton; and by using it in different places the distribution throughout the lake can be determined. By taking many tests of this kind in different parts of the lake and at different hours, and by knowing the volume of water in the lake, the total amount of plankton can be determined. Mr. Juday has found this sort of life very abundant in Lake Maxinkuckee, which indicates an abundant food supply for young fish. Most of this life is found near the surface, scarcely any occurring below 40 feet.

Hundreds of bottles of plankton have been collected and preserved in alcohol so that the species represented may be determined.

SONGS THAT TOUCH.

Not from the grand old masters,
Not from the bards sublime,
Whose distant footsteps echo
Down the corridors of time.

Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start.

And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away.

—Longfellow.

HAPPY EVER AFTER

UNTIL we met face to face in a crowded street I had not known of Ben being in London.

His manner seemed a little nervous, but I attributed it to our unexpected meeting.

We had been friends until our walks in life widened apart. He became an architect and decorator and I had chosen medicine.

When the cab stopped before a handsome house and Ben sprang out, I was silent with amazement. He led me through halls and rooms that seemed old and grand to my American eyes, and then closed the door of a cozy den and we were alone.

"Why, Ben, old fellow, you must have struck it rich," I ventured, and he looked at me, paling a little.

"Haven't you heard?" he asked.

"Not a word since the old man was cut up in the wreck, and Dan Ward, being the next of kin, came in for the fortune that should have been yours," I replied, hesitatingly, knowing what a blow all this had been to Ben.

He laughed softly, and his hands moved in the old, restless way I had so often noticed when he had something important to tell me.

"You came away before I took the contract to restore the old place?" he said.

"Yes," I answered, with something like a gasp. Had they added insult to injury? Had they dared—

"At first the offer hurt me, and then the man in me gave way to what you used to call the artistic instinct. Hadn't I been thinking of its possibilities all these years?"

"But to do it for another man—for him, Ben!" I interrupted.

"Well, he really couldn't help it, you know, though it was not until later that I was able to take that philosophical view of it. It was only that I loved Lakewood too well to have it spoiled, and—and I wanted to get away from the city, for Dolly's father—well, he liked Lakewood and all that goes with it, and so Dan, and not I, was in high favor with him."

"It was hard when you had every reason to expect it for your own," I persisted.

"Yes, but there was the bigger trouble using me up," he said, smiling softly.

He sat still then; still, except those restless hands; slender and white as a woman's they were, and I knew by their moving that Ben's story was a hard one for him to tell.

"You don't believe in ghosts—in the return of the disembodied spirit, do you, Dick?"

"Well, no, Ben. I suppose I am material. My profession—"

"But you'll believe my story." He looked up with his sweet, calm smile.

"Certainly I will. Am I to hear it now?"

He glanced at the clock. "Yes, I'll tell you now, before Dolly comes—"

"Dolly?"

"You have the last of the story first. The 'married and happy ever after,' you know. Well, you see, we went down to Lakewood, and the men lived at the village hotel. But I put up at the old place, with Gaston and Hannah to take care of me. Poor old things! Over and over they described the horrible scene to me. I had only reached home in time for the funeral, you know, and for the—the will, which could not be found.

"For a year, a whole year, I worked, never once growing tired of the exquisite woods, metals and fabrics. A year, and the anniversary of my adopted father's death was at hand. Ah! the place was a wonder of beauty now!

"It happened that I was at work in the old man's room, the long one along the south wing. It was midnight, and I was busy with my drawings. Now and then a splash of rain came with the wind through the window, and the light, the only one in the room, flickered and cast strange shadows on my papers.

"I had measured the wall and was turning away when something on the pillow caught my eye, and I stood still. My blood froze as the horror of it came upon me, and my feet were like lead.

"On the pillow lay the head of Mr. Guthrie. The fine, grim old face, with its inscrutable eyes and thin lips, the brow and shining white hair—all this, but the head only—the head severed from a body that I did not see.

"I heard a voice, a low, sobbing voice, but my soul was faint with sickening fear, and I did not hear the

MUD PIES

Down in the little back garden,
Under the summer sky
We made mud pies to-peelher,
Little sweetheart and I.
Stained was the little pink apron,
Muddy the jacket blue.
As we stirred and mixed and tasted
Out in the sun and the dew.

Why do I dream of the garden,
Who am I old and wise?
Why am I longing, longing
For one of those old mud pies?
O, for the little pink apron,
O, for the jacket blue,
For the sunny path of childhood
When my beliefs are true!

words. I staggered to a chair, my fascinated eyes on the face that lay upon the white pillow. But only my eyes were alive. I could not hear if there were words. The light on the table flickered and went out and I was alone with that.

"Hannah came with the coffee I always have at midnight when I am at work. She relighted my lamp and moved it out of the draft. I glanced at the bed. There was nothing on the pillow. Hannah looked sharply at me and went away. I swallowed the black coffee, and went over to the table where my work lay.

"Presently, as I sat listening, I heard a slow, halting step. I knew the sound. A hesitating, heavy step—the step of an old man whose feet are tired of earth's ways. I turned my head, and I saw crossing the room the lower limbs of a man—the feet and legs to the knees. They were going from me.

"Near the wall, at the side of the bed they stopped. A flash of lightning dazzled me, and when I looked again they were gone, but turned toward me were a pair of arms, long, shaking arms and slender yellow hands, floating slowly across me. I felt them on my face, the cold, clammy fingers, the icy palms. I felt them draw me from my seat and on to the wall at the side of the bed.

"And then I saw them move doubtfully, carefully over the dark panels with the hesitating, uncertain motion that belongs to old people when sensation has grown dull.

"I was dumb with horror, but I stood there quaking like a dying thing, and I felt my own hands lifted and saw them move over the panels, guided by those other hands. And a panel moved, and I heard a rustle as of old papers, and a thud, and then I sank down and down to—

"For days I was dead to things of earth. But at last I began to be able to trace Dolly's face in the darkness that enveloped me, and her voice was the first I heard. It was she who held my hands one day when I was better, and told me that in my work I had somehow found the will and old papers that proved—that proved the secret I had always suspected. I told you long ago." He left off; a sort of breathless look came to his face.

"I know. You are Mr. Guthrie's son," I said quietly.

"Yes. But they can't find the place where the papers were hidden. It is strange, Dick. I have had the walls searched again and again. The old room has been ruined in the search. I cannot go back, and so we are here. Dolly and I, and Lakewood waits for us. Ah, she is coming!"

"Ben, are you hiding from me here in the firelight?" And Dolly, laughing, light-hearted Dolly, fluttered in.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Line of England's Rulers.

First William the Norman, then William his son, Henry, Stephen, and Henry, then Richard and John.
Next Henry the Third, Edwards one, two and three.
And again after Richard three Henrys we see.
Two Edwards, third Richard, if rightly I guess,
Two Henrys, sixth Edward, Queen Mary, Queen Bess;
Then Jamie the Scotsman, then Charles whom they slew.
But received after Cromwell another Charles, too.
Then James the second ascended the throne.
And good William and Mary together came on,
Till Anne, Georges four, and fourth William all past,
God sent England Victoria; may she long be the last!

With all the gold we are sending abroad just now we are sending people who know how to distribute it.

TWO YOUNGSTERS WHO HAVE WON FAME.

The hero of the moment in England is a 14-year-old boy named A. E. F. Collins, of Clifton College, who recently made the record cricket score of 628 not out. He batted for seven hours. The next biggest score was that of A. E. Stoddart, who in 1883 scored 485. The biggest score the great Dr. W. G.

Grace ever made was 400, in 1876. Another boy who is winning fame in England is little Johnny Reiff, the jockey. Reiff is also 14 years of age, yet he is earning $15,000 a year, and is now mentioned as a dangerous rival to Tod Sloan. Less than three years ago Reiff was a schoolboy in Cincinnati.

REBELS FULL OF FIGHT.

Repeated Drubbings by American Soldiers Not Effective.

A press dispatch from Manila sent by way of Hong Kong gives views and statements not appearing in the official cables. It is stated that the Filipino rebels appear to retain much more of a fighting spirit than might be expected after their recent San Fernando experiences and General Lawton's drubbings in the south. After giving up San Fernando with a feeble struggle they entrenched themselves at Angeles, working for several days, and impressing non-combatants into the work, thus saving the armed men for fighting. They engaged Lieutenant Colonel Smith's regiment and the artillery warmly for four hours, making one of the most stubborn resistances of the campaign. But the Americans are indebted to the usual poor marksmanship of the Filipinos as well as to their own strategy for their small losses.

In the Province of Cavite, where it was supposed the rebels had been scattered and demoralized beyond recuperation, they have assembled an army of several thousand men, distributed among the important towns from the lake to the bay.

After the San Fernando engagement the rebels attempted to deter the Americans from a further advance northward by menacing the railroad communications. Several hundred of General Pio del Pilar's men crossed the Rio Grande between the American outpost towns and threatened Baliuag, Quingua and other places with small American garrisons, while during Sunday and Monday nights smaller bands tried to tear up the railroad tracks at several points between Bigaa and Malolos. Re-enforcements of American troops, however, were sent along the railroad from Manila to San Fernando, while the forces at Baliuag and Quingua sallied out against General Pio del Pilar's men and the rebels were easily driven away. In brushes between these Filipinos and the Americans during three days the Americans lost several men, while the Filipinos' loss was heavy.

Of these operations the press correspondent was permitted to send only an inadequate dispatch, dictated verbatim by Major General Otis. The censor writes stereotyped official phrases and adjectives into the dispatches, tending to magnify the opposition. General Otis says newspapers are not public institutions, but private enterprises, and the correspondents are only here on sufferance.

The American troops have been withdrawn from all that part of the country which was half cleared of rebels in the expedition of the Americans in June last. The rebels have returned to San Mateo, which was abandoned for the third time after its recent capture.

CURRENT COMMENT

Admiral Dewey has a double in New York, who, strangely enough, is a Spaniard. When the war with Spain broke out Senator A. B. Planas sympathized with his mother country. At that time the battle of Manila had not been fought, and his likeness to Admiral Dewey was not generally noticed. After the defeat of the Spanish fleet, however, when Senator Planas had enough, as he thought, to mourn about the men of his acquaintance began to twit him with his resemblance to the man who had destroyed the sea power of his country. That worried the Spaniard to such an extent that he shaved off his mustache and thus escaped persecution. Now his mustache is growing once more, and Senator Planas finds life again a burden.

Farmers in North Dakota, who report 250,000 acres of standing wheat destroyed by hail, met with a similar loss thirteen years ago. On July 24, 1886, a great hailstorm swept over Minnesota and North Dakota, wiping out nearly 3,000 acres of wheat and doing immense damage in other ways. Some of the hail stones were as big as hen's eggs. The biggest hail stones on record, however, fell at Whitehall, Ill., in 1881. They were as big as goose eggs and drifts ten and twelve inches deep were found the day after the storm. In August, 1883, hailstones measuring thirteen inches in circumference fell and at Dubuque, Iowa, in 1882, monster hail stones weighing two pounds were picked up.

The West Indies, which have been devastated by a cyclone, are peculiarly liable to such visitations. In 1880 nearly the whole island of Jamaica was devastated, hundreds of buildings being destroyed and twelve lives lost. In October, 1882, a hurricane crossed Cuba, killing forty people and thousands of cattle. In 1888 a cyclone killed 1,000 people in Cuba. Three years later a hurricane struck Martinique, wrecking all the shipping in port and killing 340 people, in addition to a property loss estimated at $10,000,000.

August is the month of the dog days and of falling stars. Venus is now a morning star, rising only three-quarters of an hour before the sun. Mercury is an evening star, but he will begin to get up in the morning on Aug. 19. Jupiter may be noticed at sunset, far down in the western heavens. Mars and Uranus are both evening stars. The moon was new on the 6th, and will be full on Aug. 20.

Yellow fever is distinctively an American pestilence. It first appeared in Philadelphia in 1669. Again in 1762 it ravaged the City of Brotherly Love and in 1791 broke out in New York. During this century it has appeared many times in New Orleans and other Southern cities. During the great epidemic of 1878 there were 65,000 cases and 15,000 deaths in the United States.

The following detailed tabulation of the Senate complexion at the present writing, and as it will be when Congress next convenes (barring deaths), will be worth preserving for future reference:

The monthly statement of the Government receipts and expenditures shows total receipts during July of $48,054,258, as against $43,847,108 for July, 1898. The expenditures during last month were $56,561,090, as against $74,263,475 for July, 1898. The receipts last month from customs were $16,971,454; internal revenue, $28,322,574; miscellaneous, $2,760,220. This is an increase as compared with July, 1898, of about $1,800,000 from customs, $2,200,000 from internal revenue, and about $254,000 from miscellaneous sources. The expenditures on account of the War Department last month were $19,291,080, against $34,774,153 for July, 1898, and for the navy, $5,090,245, against $8,514,279 for July, 1898.

The monthly statement of the comptroller of the currency shows that at the close of business July 31 the total circulation of national bank notes was $241,541,878, an increase for the month of $273,192 and for the year of $18,845,008. The circulation based on United States bonds amounted to $205,768,304, an increase for the month of $504,210 and for the year of $10,075,619. The circulation secured by lawful money aggregated $35,773,574, a decrease for the month of $224,828, but an increase for the year of $4,769,389. The amount of United States registered bonds on deposit to secure circulating notes was $230,464,110, and to secure public deposits $69,849,940.

Lack of target practice among the troops in Cuba, which lessens the efficiency of the army, is to be remedied. Books for preserving the records of the various commands and individuals in small arms practice are being distributed by the officers of the Department of Havana. Under the present system of training a soldier must first be able to tell how many steps are necessary in going from 200 to 1,000 yards, and he must be able to judge with his eye within 5 per cent of the exact distance of an object within those limits before being permitted to fire a ball from his rifle. When able to do this a soldier is then drilled in firing at what are called lying, kneeling and standing figures at distances varying from 200 to 1,000 yards. He is trained in firing not only at moving objects, but while he himself is walking or running. Company volley firing is also a part of the drill.

United States Treasurer Roberts, in his official compilations, will not make a separate account of the new gold certificates issued under the recent order of Secretary Gage, but will simply add new issues to the amount of certificates previously outstanding. The total gold certificates outstanding July 31, which is the last official statement given to the public by the department, was $34,251,520. The count of new certificates will therefore be from that as a base line. According to the report referred to this $34,000,000 in gold certificates includes $4,476,860 in denominations of $20, $2,533,250 in denominations of $50, $3,473,900 in denominations of $100, $3,277,500 in denominations of $500, $5,361,000 in denominations of $1,000, $4,770,000 in denominations of $5,000 and $10,360,000 in denominations of $10,000. Treasurer Roberts reports that the banks are not making as heavy demands as was anticipated for "to order" certificates of $5,000 and $10,000, but he supposes this is because they do not care to be in the early rush.

THE DREYFUS TRIAL

Some Dramatic and Sensational Features of the Evidence.

Dramatic and sensational as was Thursday's session of the Dreyfus court-martial, it yielded less substantial advantage to the defense than the friends of truth and justice anticipated. The political character of the trial was strongly emphasized. For the first time the court itself directly intervened to shield and protect the military witnesses. The refrain so familiar at the Zola trial, "this question will not be put," was frequently heard during Labori's attempt to cross-examine Mercier, the chief of the conspirators. Besides, many of the questions which counsel did put and which the court could not decently rule out as irrelevant Mercier simply declined to answer, being sustained by the presiding officer in his refusal.

All that Labori succeeded in showing was that Mercier was intriguing with Paty de Clam on the very eve of the present trial, that he inserted an alleged incriminating document in the secret dossier which he had illegally held and that he had tried to prevent the defense from knowing its contents. This document Col. Jouaust was forced to rule out. All the rest of the scathing cross-examination related to the trial of 1894, now known to have been flagrantly lawless and unfair, and had no bearing on the question under inquiry except as tending to prove the existence of prejudice and conspiracy.

At the opening of Friday's session of the court-martial, a doctor's certificate to the effect that it was impossible for Du Paty de Clam to be present was read. M. Labori asked the court that an official physician be sent to examine De Clam, but Col. Jouaust refused.

M. Gobert, handwriting expert of the Bank of France, was called. Gobert told how he was originally called by the war office to examine the bordereau. After comparing it with specimens of Dreyfus' handwriting he declared that from first to last it was not the work of accused.

Gen. Gonse was called to confront the witness. Gonse said that Gobert was wrong in the details of his testimony, whereupon the expert earnestly demonstrated the correctness of all he had said. Gonse retired discomfited, but insinuated that Dreyfus had known the witness in the bank. Dreyfus denied emphatically that he had ever known Gobert.

The rest of the day's session was given over to the testimony of M. Bertillon, head of the anthropometric department of the Paris police, and who maintains that he has proved Dreyfus was the author of the bordereau.

Bertillon came into court accompanied by four soldiers carrying charts, portfolios, compasses, logarithm tables, photographs, etc., which looked like the properties in a comic opera. The audience burst into laughter at the sight. The judges themselves looked dismayed as the procession approached the platform, and all those in the court who did not have to be there fled from the room. The rush for the doors was noted by Bertillon, who remarked that it took intelligent people to understand what he was going to demonstrate.

After arranging his paraphernalia about him on tables and chairs, the witness began by stating that the bordereau had been produced by the forces of nature, but that somebody must have written it. This was given in the manner of a man announcing a great discovery. M. Bertillon continued by declaring that the bordereau had been traced by Dreyfus, who had cleverly imitated his own handwriting. Then Bertillon proceeded to give the exact measurement of each pen stroke, and showed the court a large diagram resembling the plan of a fortress.

This he claimed proved mathematically that Dreyfus was guilty. The witness stopped constantly to untie packages and surround himself with a mysterious apparatus to the increased bewilderment of his auditors. Bertillon proceeded to demonstrate his whole system, which, with its ratios and angles, was understood by no one in the court. The table in front of the witness was filled with charts which came inexhaustively from numerous pouches. Bertillon's exhibition discredited the whole expert system. His reasoning was based on taking as a fact some charge against Dreyfus which was unsupported by evidence and then arguing in a circle.

WILL HOLD THE PHILIPPINES.

McKinley Outlines His Policy Regarding the Islands.

President McKinley made an address at the Methodist stronghold at Ocean Grove, N. J., in which he outlined his policy regarding Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. The chief interest centered in his remarks regarding the Philippines, which he declared must after the establishment of peace be under the control of the United States. The President said:

"I believe that there is more love for our country and that more people love the flag than ever before. Wherever that flag is raised it stands not for despotism and oppression, but for liberty, opportunity and humanity and what that flag has done for us we want it to do for all people and all lands, which by the fortunes of war have come within its jurisdiction.

"That flag does not stand for one thing in the United States and another in Porto Rico and the Philippines. There has been some doubt in some quarters respecting the policy of the Government in the Philippines. I see no harm in stating it in this presence. Peace first, then with charity for all establish a government of law and order, protecting life and property and occupation for the well-being of the people who will participate in it under the Stars and Stripes."

WORK OF THE HURRICANE.

Almost 2,000 Persons Killed and 22,000 Rendered Homeless.

The reports of the Board of Health up to last Friday give the following statistics of the ruin caused by the Porto Rico hurricane:

Killed 1,973
Missing 1,000
Houses destroyed 6,421
Persons homeless 22,046

Cities in need of physicians, drugs and hospitals:

Caguas, Yabucoa.
Mannabo, Utuado.
Coamo, Corosal.

The Board of Charity at San Juan is sending out supplies by land and water daily, but petitions keep coming in from all over the country demanding food, medicines and money. There are no means of raising funds in the different localities. At Maunabo an effort was made to start a popular subscription, but only ten pesos was contributed.

In consequence of the putrefaction of bodies typhus fever has developed at Aroyo. The captains of coastwise vessels complain that the bad odors at the various ports have caused them more suffering than the hurricane.

BOERS DEFY BRITAIN.

Military Is to Rule Johannesburg in the Case of Hostilities.

Pretoria advises say that the volksraad, by a vote of 18 to 9, adopted the report of the majority of the dynamite commission continuing the monopoly. Commandant General P. J. Joubert issued a circular to all field cornets cautioning them against any act tending to bring on a conflict with another power. He declares that not a single stranger who does not volunteer is to be coerced into bearing arms.

Commandant Viljoen has given notice in the volksraad that he will ask the Government if in case of war it is prepared to confiscate the property of inhabitants who take up arms against the Government. In the course of an interview after the session Commandant Viljoen said that if war broke out military government would be established at Johannesburg and all British subjects would be compelled to leave.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 67,164]

"I cannot express my gratitude to you for the good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I have taken five bottles of the Compound and two boxes of Liver Pills and feel better in every respect. I had suffered for years with dropsy; the veins in my limbs burst, caused from the pressure of the water. I had the worst kind of kidney troubles, fainting spells, and I could not stand long at a time. I also had female weakness and the doctor said there was a tumor in my left side. The pains I had to stand were something dreadful. A friend handed me a little book of yours, so I got your medicine and it has saved my life. I felt better from the first bottle. The bloating and the tumors have all gone and I do not suffer any pain. I am still using the Vegetable Compound and hope others may find relief as I have done from its use."

Labor-Saving Shears.
A German who believes in labor-saving devices has patented a pair of shears with a spring attachment. When a cut has been made and the shears are closed, the spring opens the blades slightly. When they are wide open, ready for cutting, the arrangement acts in the reverse way and assists in closing them. Both actions lighten the work of the cutter.

The Tide Ran Away.

The humorist had been tied hand and foot and lashed to a pile that projected a dozen or more feet above the water at low tide.

He had dared to perpetrate an original joke, and the Paragaphers' Amalgamated union had decreed his death.

In vain he wriggled. The cruel waters were rising beneath him. The tide was coming in.

"I'm afraid," he murmured as he looked down and noticed that the little waves were lapping at his shoe—"I'm afraid that one tied will not affect the other." And he laughed harshly. "Anyway," he added a moment later, "I'll stick to my post."

The tide rose faster. It was at his knee, his waist, his elbow, his neck!

Just as it reached his chin he gave one final glance across the sparkling waves and muttered:

"Well, it seems to be up to me now." Whereupon the tide turned and ran out.

He was saved.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Flowers Under Artificial Light.

Nearly all flowers in which there is a notable proportion of blue are unattractive when seen under artificial light. Hence purple and lilac flowers do not usually look well at night, though there are exceptions owing to the intensity of the red in some purples, which comes out well at night and causes them to appear as crimson. Yellows invariably lose brilliancy, and pale yellows become bad whites under gaslights, but reds and crimsons and all shades of pink and white retain their beauty, and, as a rule, green leaves are pleasing under any light.

On a rainy afternoon not long ago one of the pretty young matrons of Connecticut avenue left the car from which she had ridden up town and darted through the drizzle toward her home, a few doors from the corner. She had no umbrella. A Willie of the characteristic type, who was riding in the same car, noticed that she had no umbrella. He was right after her with his own umbrella up and extended.

"May I see you home, miss?" he inquired languishingly, stepping up alongside of her.

She turned to him with a dazzling smile.

"Certainly," she replied. "Watch me." And she ran up the steps of her home and entered the vestibule door without looking back.

"The rude thing!" muttered the Willie, blushing to the roots of its wavy hair, as Laura Jean would say, and then it took the next car.—Washington Post.

THE BIRD'S PETITION.

Deep in leafy woodland bowers,
Bright with undergrowth of flowers,
O'er the dappled mead and pool
And in tangled lanes most cool,
Pipe the thrush, the finch and lark
From the dewy dawn to dark,
And they pipe and never tire
Songs as sweet as love's desire.

Off to me they seem to sing,
On the branch or on the wing:
"If you leave us space and sky,
Room to nest and sing and fly,
We will pipe for your delight,
Pipe and make the days more bright,
But in narrow cage confined
Song is slain by joy unkind.

"Honor, then, our wide domain,
Break not little hearts with pain;
God who made the merry day
Gave to us our roundelay,
And like honey laden bee,
Or like wild winds made us free,
Leave, then, leave us to our song,
Woods and meads and flowers among."
—Charles Lusted in Gentleman's Magazine.

HENRY RANG OFF.

But When He Got Home That Night There Was Trouble.

Appropos of nothing in particular—unless it be electricity—I heard a druggist tell of a little occurrence in his shop the other day.

He was alone and putting up a prescription behind his large partition screen when a stylishly dressed woman entered and asked with some excitement for the telephone.

He ensconced her in front of it and returned to his work.

She took off her gloves, rang up "central" and began:

"2179 — street. Yes, yes. Mr. Henry Wecker. Yes, yes. He's at No. — Beekman street. Yes. Oh, is that Mr. Wecker?"

Then her voice hardened.

"Henry, why did you tell me you went to Philadelphia Thursday? What? No, you did not. I know better. Don't you stand there and lie to me like that! No, I won't! What do I care for the girl in the telephone office! You just attend to me and let her alone! I'm in a drug store. They're not listening at all. I want an explanation. No, indeed, I will not wait till you come home tonight! By that time you'll have hatched up a fine story and brought up a couple of brutes to swear to it. Mrs. Wallace says her husband saw you at the club Thursday night and that you were going out to play poker all night. Oh, no, he isn't! He's a very nice man, and I am much obliged to him. You wouldn't dare do anything of the kind! What? You won't, eh? Well, you'll talk when you get home! Here, wait a moment. Don't shut off!"

But the seance was over, and she paid her 15 cents and stalked out with flashing eyes that boded ill for the lively Henry.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What Solomon's Temple Cost.

"A Biblical student in this city," says our Washington correspondent, "declares that if the descriptions of Solomon's Temple are accurately given in the Bible and by secular authorities, the total value of that edifice and its contents must have exceeded $50,000,000,000. In the first place, the value of the materials in the rough is estimated at $12,500,000,000, and the labor at $2,000,000,000. According to Villalpanda 10,000 men were engaged in dressing cedar lumber, 80,000 in dressing cedar stone and 60,000 in bearing burdens for a period of seven years, who, in addition to their wages, received 50 cents a day for food. According to the same authority, which is corroborated by Josephus, the vessels of gold were valued at 140,000 talents, which, reduced to American money, is equal to $2,326,481,015. The vessels of silver are calculated at $3,231,715,000, the vestments of the priests and the robes of the singers at $10,050,000, and the value of the trumpets of gold was $1,000,000."—Chicago Record.

Outsped the Swallow.

A swallow is considered one of the swiftest of flying birds, and it was thought until a short time ago that no insect could escape it.

A naturalist tells of an exciting chase he saw between a swallow and a dragon fly, which is among the swiftest of insects.

The insect flew with incredible speed and wheeled and dodged with such ease that the swallow, despite its utmost efforts, completely failed to overtake and capture it.

Glove Cutting.

The cutters of the great glove houses at Brussels and in France earn even higher wages than the cutters of the most fashionable tailors in London and New York. So difficult is this art of cutting gloves that most of the principal cutters are known to the trade by name and by fame, and the peculiar knives which they use in the business are so highly prized that they are handed down from generation to generation as heirlooms.

The Long Lived Elephant.

According to Aristotle, Buffon and Cuvier, the elephant may live for two centuries. After his victory over Borus, Alexander consecrated to the sun an elephant that had fought for the Indian monarch and gave it the name of Ajax. Then, having attached an inscription, he set it at liberty. The animal was found 350 years later, making its age easily somewhere between three and four centuries.

HEAVY ARCHES FALL.

COLLAPSE OF CHICAGO'S NEW COLISEUM STRUCTURE.

Crash Comes Without Warning to Workmen, and Many Are Caught Beneath Heavy Ruins—In Addition to Nine Killed, Thirteen Are Injured.

Iron girders creaked; there was a shout, "Look out! It's falling!" a wild rush of men on the ground; the agonized cry of thirty-five workmen as they were hurled sixty-five feet through the air; and the framework of the new Coliseum, Wabash avenue and Fifteenth street, Chicago, Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock was a wreck, and under its ruins nine men lay dead, thirteen injured, many of them fatally, and five were missing.

Workmen of the Pittsburg Bridge Company, the firm which did the iron work, were tearing down the traveler used in building the twelve great arches. During the lowering of the first section the structure was noticed to tremble, and complaint was made by several of the men.

Then came the taking down of the massive beams that formed the second section. A rope thrown over the third arch from the south wall was used to steady the pieces of lumber as they descended. One was poised in the air and Engineer McCabe waited below for the signal to lower. Suddenly the engine gave a snort, the arch trembled, began to sway. Then came the shout of alarm, the race for safety and the collapse of the building.

Men on the ground ran through the arches, now beginning to creak like breaking laths, and most of them had time to reach the street or the alley, but their unfortunate companions on the arches came slowly down to injury and death.

The movement of the arches was at first so slow it seemed as if minutes were consumed before they swayed far enough to touch each other. When they came together there was the sound of rattling iron girders and braces, the breaking of rivets and trusses, and the whole structure came down with a crash, while the doomed men shrieked out their last prayers as they were dashed against piles of twisted braces or fell under portions of the broken arches.

One of the falling columns overturned the boiler and the escaping steam covered the wreck with a blinding veil, white clouds of dust rose from the earth to baffle the search for the wounded, some of whom called out piteously.

Columns and arches lay piled on one another, broken and shattered as though they were staff; heavy timbers, two feet square, were twisted and splintered as if they were twigs, and beneath the mass of iron and wood and stone human beings were writhing in pain or were lying cold in death in pain or were lying ed engines krip the horror, the overturn them, but kindling the woodwork near them, but these incipient blazes were soon extinguished and the whole attention of firemen, policemen and citizens was given to rescuing the victims and taking out the bodies of the dead. There were hundreds of willing hands to help drag the iron beams from the crushed and battered fragments of men and to carry the bodies tenderly to the ambulances.

The living were first taken from the ruins, but at times the rescuers found it difficult to determine whether or not the mangled forms they carried so tenderly still retained the spark of life. Nine men were dead. Their bodies were taken out mutilated almost beyond human semblance by the blunt edges of the ponderous metal beams. Twelve other unfortunates, still alive, but shrieking and writhing with the pain of cruel injuries, some of them legless, others making piteous appeals with the stumps of what were once arms, were removed, and more deaths may follow.

It has not yet been decided where the loss, which may reach $30,000, will fall. The work of the Pittsburg Bridge Company was just finished, the last arch having been placed Saturday. The men were placing the bolts and rivets Monday and removing the traveler and scaffolding used in doing the work. Members of the firm were congratulating themselves that they had had no accident, and the work was done. But the work had not been accepted by the Coliseum company and the question of responsibility for the loss on the building rests unsettled.

The exact cause for the collapse seems to be unknown, at least those supposed to know hesitate to put themselves on record. Many theories are advanced, but it may require an official investigation to bring out the truth and properly place the responsibility.

"May I see you home, miss?" he inquired languishingly, stepping up alongside of her.

She turned to him with a dazzling smile.

"Certainly," she replied. "Watch me." And she ran up the steps of her home and entered the vestibule door without looking back.

"The rude thing!" muttered the Willie, blushing to the roots of his wavy hair, as Laura Jean would say, and then it took the next car.—Washington Post.

Snake Eat Snake.

A sight was witnessed one day at the Zoo that has been the talk of the people managing the animals of the garden ever since. Keeper Myers, who has charge of the snake cages, was about to feed the reptiles, when, to his horror, he saw one blacksnake measuring six feet devouring its mate, which was about the same length and size of itself. The reptile had swallowed its fellow head first, and only a foot and a half still remained outside its mouth. It was lying quietly, and about once every 30 seconds a swallowing motion would seize it, when as much as two inches of its meal would disappear. Myers opened the cage and, grabbing the powerless snake by the tail, began tugging away to release it. This proved to be no easy task, as the cannibalistically inclined monster had a firm hold on its breakfast. After several minutes of pulling that brought the perspiration out on the keeper the snake was set at liberty. For a time it seemed paralyzed, but gradually regained its strength.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Easterday and family, Daisy, Ola, Dela and Austin Romig, Catherine Kaye and Mr. and Mrs. Watson Romig.

Lincoln and the Hair Restorer.

Here is a story of President Lincoln from the late Judge Carter, who was a member of congress from Cleveland during the war and one of Mr. Lincoln's most intimate friends. It relates to a Quaker philanthropist from Philadelphia who did not have a hair on his head, but took a great interest in public affairs and was constantly calling at the White House in behalf of somebody or other who happened to be in trouble and took up a great deal of Mr. Lincoln's time. The president treated him with great courtesy, although his patience was frequently tried. One day when the philanthropist was particularly verbose and persistent and refused to depart, although he knew that important delegations were waiting, Mr. Lincoln suddenly rose, walked over to a wardrobe in the corner of the cabinet chamber and took a bottle from a shelf. Handing it to his visitor, he remarked: "Did you ever use this stuff on your head?" "No, sir; I never did." "Well," remarked Mr. Lincoln, "I advise you to try it, and if at first you don't succeed, keep it up. They say it's a good thing to make the hair grow. Take this bottle with you and come back in six months and tell me how it works."

The astonished philanthropist covered his polished pate with his broad brimmed hat and left the room, while Judge Carter, coming in with the next delegation, found the president over in the corner doubled up with laughter at the success of his strategy, and before he could proceed to business the story had to be told.—Chicago Record.

IS IT RIGHT

For an Editor to Recommend Patent Medicines?

(From Sylvan Valley News, Brevard, N.C.) It may be a question whether the editor of a newspaper has the right to publicly recommend any of the various proprietary medicines which flood the market, yet as a preventative of suffering we feel it a duty to say a good word for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. We have known and used this medicine in our family for twenty years and have always found it reliable. In many cases a dose of this remedy would save hours of suffering while a physician is awaited. We do not believe in depending implicitly on any medicine for a cure, but we do believe that if a bottle of Chamberlain's Diarrhoea Remedy were kept on hand and administered at the inception of an attack much suffering might be avoided and in many cases the presence of a physician would not be avoided and in very many cases the presence of a physician would not be required. At least this has been our experience during the past twenty years. For sale by T. E. Slattery, druggist.

BOER WAR IMMINENT.

BRITISH OFFICIALS BELIEVE A CONFLICT AT HAND.

Kruger's Answer Taken as a Defiance of England—Counter Proposal from Transvaal Will Be Ignored—Back-down of Afrikaners Only Way Out.

The action of President Kruger of the Transvaal in refusing to accept the court of inquiry proposed by Secretary Chamberlain has caused officials of the Colonial Department to believe that war with the Boers is now inevitable.

London advices say that just what Oom Paul's reply to Mr. Chamberlain contained in the way of rejecting his plan for settling the dispute is not known, as the colonial office is noncommittal, but it has been admitted, however, that in place of accepting the suggested court of inquiry, Kruger submitted a number of new proposals, that are taken to mean an open defiance to England.

The British officials, however, would far rather have received a curt, defiant reply from the Boers than the temporizing and "soft word" answer, which it is feared will require considerable explanation to justify any aggressive action in the eyes of the world and English minority, which still declares that war would be an outrage.

It has developed that the war office has been aware of the nature of the Transvaal's reply for several days, hence it is believed that Great Britain will delay the denouncement as little as possible, and if Mr. Chamberlain has his way the counter proposals of President Kruger will meet with scant attention, thus forcing the Boers into a position where the only way to avoid war will be by a complete back-down, which is not at all probable.

All England is talking war. Even the man in the street who knows nothing of what is going on behind the scenes is confident that an appeal to arms is now the only solution left for the Transvaal problem, which has reached an ugly stage. That the Boers will yield all is not believed, and this idea is strengthened by the feverish preparations which both sides have been making for hostilities within the last month.

The Transvaal dispute has been hanging fire for fifty years, and now that it bids fair to come to a crisis where it must be settled for all time the government seems annoyed at the apparent indifference of the public in the question. Throughout the Orange Free State and Cape Colony Sunday was observed with prayer and humiliation by the populace advocating a peaceful settlement of the Transvaal dispute. A dispatch from Pretoria says: "President Kruger, while personally conducting a public church service, prayed that if war was unavoidable God might find right and truth on the side of the Afrikaners."

DEMOCRATS TO ACT EARLY.

May Hold National Convention in February or March, 1900.

The next Democratic convention may be held as early as February and not later than March, 1900. A Chicago dispatch says that sentiment among party leaders has been crystallizing in favor of an early convention, and it may find expression at a meeting of the national committee, which will be held in Washington very soon after Congress convenes in December. Ex-Governor Stone of Missouri, as acting chairman of the committee and probable manager of the campaign of 1900, is the originator of the plan for holding the convention in February or March.

The underlying motive for holding an early convention is to enable the men who will have to shoulder the responsibility of conducting next year's battle, to raise money. By holding the conclave in February or March, nominating Mr. Bryan for President, selecting a running mate for him and adopting a platform, ex-Governor Stone is convinced that the intervening time until September, when the actual campaign will be begun, can be profitably employed raising a fund big enough to enable the national committee to make a handsome showing. Mr. Bryan, it is understood, favors the plan. Mr. Bryan is regarded as the nominee now. The choice of his running mate will be largely a matter of expediency.

CITY RUINED BY FIRE.

Flames Destroy the Business Portion of Victor, Col.

Fire has destroyed the business portion of the city of Victor, Colo., causing a loss estimated at $2,500,000. Beginning shortly after noon Monday the fire raged until evening, consuming everything in its way. It had its origin, it is thought, in the Merchants' cafe, adjoining the Bank of Victor, 3d street and Victor avenue. A strong wind from the south fanned the flames, and in a few minutes all the surrounding houses were afire.

Help was summoned from Cripple Creek, but the town had been built in the early days of the camp, and was of pine timber, for the most part, and burned like paper. Efforts were made to stop the progress of the flames by blowing up buildings in their path, and all afternoon the hills have roared with the explosions, but the effort was in vain.

The scenes of the great Cripple Creek fire were duplicated. Hurrying before the roaring flames went men, women and children, carrying what they could snatch from the fire, racing for their lives. The crash of buildings torn asunder by dynamite and the crackle of the flames as they consumed the dry timbers hastened their flight, and the pall of smoke added a terror to the spectacle. The residence portion of the city is paralyzed, and suffering is bound to follow.

SCENE OF G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT AT FAIRMOUNT PARK, PHILADELPHIA.

CHILDREN PERISH BY FIRE.

Six Lives Lost in Burning of St. Agnes' Convent, Sparkill, N. Y.

Six lives were lost by the burning of the St. Agnes' convent at Sparkill, five miles south of Nyack, N. Y., early Monday morning. Four persons were burned to death and two others died after being rescued from the burning buildings. Four sisters jumped from windows, receiving serious injuries. Two will probably die.

St. Agnes' Home is conducted by the sisters of St. Dominic. Sister N. Peter is the superior, and under her are thirty-six professed nuns and three novices and three postulants. Rev. Philip Ahearn is the chaplain. The convent was used as a home for homeless children. Several hundred waifs were in the building when the fire broke out.

When the flames were discovered the sisters and Chaplain Ahearn hurried through the dormitories awaking the 300 boys and fifty girls who were sleeping there. The startled, half-awake children, as soon as they appreciated the cause of the excitement and realized that their home was burning, fled in all directions like frightened sheep. The sisters heroically endeavored to restrain them, but to no avail. They rushed down the stairs in a panic. Some fell and were trampled upon by others. The sisters and chaplain remained behind alarming the children until driven from the rooms by flames and smoke. The four sisters who jumped from the windows remained too long, and the flames cut off their escape by way of the stairs.

The home was composed of six frame buildings. The three main structures, where the fire originated, are joined. A stiff breeze was blowing at the time, and the flames spread through the building with great rapidity. The three buildings comprising the main structure and one of the detached buildings were burned to the ground. The hospital building and one small outbuilding were saved.

The scenes outside of the burning institution were heartrending. The children, many of whom were waifs of New York, were huddled together on the hillside just north of the burning convent. Some eighty sisters, who also made the convent their home, stood by, dressed only in their night garments, comforting and quieting their frantic charges. In the midnight darkness the white-robed figures presented a strange spectacle.

As day dawned the news of the fire spread to the surrounding country and scores of farmers drove to the scene. The children and sisters were loaded into wagons and driven to Blauvelt Convent, which is situated about one mile away.

The fire was the third that has occurred in St. Agnes' Convent within a short time. Whether or not they were of incendiary origin has never been determined, but the fact that Monday night's fire started in three separate places convinces the authorities that the circumstances are suspicious. The property loss is estimated at $100,000.

"BLOODY TENTH" AT HOME.

Pennsylvania Volunteers Back from the Philippines.

The Tenth Pennsylvania volunteers passed through Chicago Sunday afternoon on their way home from the Philippines. Bronzed by the tropical sun and injured to war by service first in Cuba against the Spaniards and later in the far away Philippines against the wily forces of Aguinaldo, the boys of the "Bloody Tenth," Pennsylvania's pride, were cheered at every station as their train sped on its way to Pittsburg.

Col. Sanborn had extended the Pennsylvanians an invitation to stop over in Chicago as guests of the First Illinois infantry, but Col. Barnett found this impossible, and the three sections of the troop train were delayed only long enough to make the transfer from the Chicago and Northwestern to the Pennsylvania line.

The regiment roll contained 756 names—733 privates and twenty-three officers. It lost twenty-one men in the Orient, fifteen being killed in battle and six dying of fever.

The occasion of the Tenth regiment's home-coming was made a holiday throughout a big section of western Pennsylvania. Pittsburg and Allegheny were thronged with hundreds of thousands of persons who came to welcome the heroes home. President McKinley was there, as was Maj. Gens. Merritt and Greene. Gov. Stone delivered the formal address at Schenley Park, and the countless-throng then singled out the soldiers and proceeded to make an idol of each, irrespective of rank. The President reviewed the regiment and made a speech. More than $50,000 was spent to make the welcome a royal one.

BUSINESS SITUATION.

Chicago Correspondence:

The underlying features of the business situation are still of a promising character. The few changes that have taken place lately have been for the better, and the result of this is that the feeling of confidence in the future is gaining strength. There is no longer any apprehension felt in regard to the money market, borrowers and lenders alike being now pretty well satisfied that nothing approaching a tight market can be brought about. The West seems abundantly supplied with funds and apparently able to provide for the moving of the crops this fall without any great amount of assistance from the Eastern financial centers. Furthermore, the present condition of the foreign exchange markets makes it certain that any important advance in interest rates in this country would at once start a gold-importing movement of considerable proportions.

The stock markets this week have continued to gain strength. Efforts on the part of the professional bear element to depress prices for the standard railroad shares have been defeated simply because of the fact that the actual business position of the country is hostile to such operations. In some of the purely speculative stocks shake-outs have occurred, but the investment properties have not only stood their ground, but many of them have made further advances. London has been quite a heavy buyer of American specialties, and commission houses have also been much more active, indicating that public interest in the market is steadily increasing.

Activity characterized the week's speculative business in grain, and the volume of dealings in provisions was quite up to the average. Prices did not vary much from those prevailing at the close of the previous week. Estimates of the amount of wheat raised this year displayed a tendency to agree upon a crop of about 525,000,000 bushels. Almost equal concurrence in the requirements of the importing countries was shown in the estimates of foreign statisticians, which did not vary much from 345,000,000 bushels. Of that total they calculate 220,000,000 bushels will be needed from this country, or a weekly supply throughout the season of about 4,150,000 bushels. Allowing for the surplus left over from the previous season's most abundant crop, the indications are there is less wheat this year than last year by at least 100,000,000 bushels to supply equal requirements. If these calculations prove approximately correct prices should rule higher this year than last.

The corn crop still gladdens the hearts of its cultivators by its splendid promise, and two weeks more of favorable weather should put the bulk of it beyond harm's reach. The deficiencies of last season's corn crop are beginning to be demonstrated to the discomfort of a party in the market that sold for delivery at an earlier date than new crop supplies can be available.

been issued to guard against similar occurrences in the future. Secretary Root accepts the situation as another proof of the fact that more troops are needed in the Philippines.

It is believed that these reports will have a tendency to make the policy of the Americans much less lenient.
