JAPS WIN INNER FORT

Rumors That One of the Main Defenses of Port Arthur Is Lost to the Russians—Heavy Sacrifice of Life.

There is current at Chefoo a Chinese rumor that the Japanese have captured one of the inner forts at Port Arthur, losing 1,000 men in the engagement. It cannot be confirmed, however.

Attack Retreating Foe.

The Japanese continued to press the Russian forces returning from the battle of Vafangow on the night of June 16. They had remained at Vafangow all day, and at night persistently pushed forward and tried to get round the Russian right wing, which had borne the brunt of such heavy fighting the previous day.

A terrific thunderstorm burst at night, rendering the roads almost impassable. They were bad for the Russians and equally so for the Japanese, who were unable to overlap the Russian right. The Russians therefore were enabled to retire gradually to the north.

flag, and that the Japanese artillery, deceived by this flag, ceased firing upon that particular body of Russians.

The Japanese attacking force was divided into right and left columns and began the advance along both sides of the railroad. They encountered the Russians east of Vafangtjen and drove them back. At a late hour in the afternoon the Russians held a line between Lung-Wang-Tiao and Ta-Fang-Shen. The Japanese artillery opened on this line and the Russians responded.

The shelling continued for two hours and it was followed by the advance of the Japanese line to a position extending from Lung-Chia-Tung to Yu-Hotun. Darkness put an end to the fighting. The Japanese dispatched a column to the westward toward Fuchow for the purpose of covering the Russian right wing and to protect the Japanese left and rear. During the night it became apparent that the Rus-

from Gen. Kouropatkin:

"I have received the following dispatch from Lieut. Gen. Baron Stakelberg, dated June 16: 'Yesterday I had intended to attack the enemy's right flank, but just as our troops had been assigned for the purpose and were beginning to successfully envelop the enemy's right flank, the Japanese in their turn attacked my right flank with superior forces, and I was compelled to retreat by three roads to the north. Our losses are heavy, but they are not yet completely known. During the engagement the third and fourth batteries of the first artillery brigade were literally cut to pieces by the Japanese shells. Of sixteen guns, thirteen were rendered useless and were abandoned. The conduct of the troops was excellent, a large proportion of them refusing to retire until after they had been repeatedly ordered to do so.'"

The Russian losses in killed on June 14 include Col. Khoastonnov, commanding the first regiment of Eastern Siberian rifles, and Second Lieut. Dragoslav Nadochinsky, adjutant of the regiment. The wounded include Maj. Gen. Geringross and Capt. Krintsky of the general staff. Twenty officers, whose names are at present unknown, were also killed or wounded, besides 311 soldiers, of which the first regiment of Siberian rifles lost twelve officers and 200 men and the first brigade or artillery six officers and fifty men.

May Aim at Togo.

Rear Admiral Ingles, writing in the London Daily Telegraph of the probable movements of the Vladivostok squadron, suggests that the Russians may be pressing on to the bay of Korea, which is paroled by Admiral Togo's scouts, with the idea of sacrificing themselves and their ships in order to deal a crippling blow at the main Japanese fleet.

Gains for Japanese.

Gen. Kouropatkin moved to the south only to march to disaster. The Vladivostok squadron's daring raid into the Straits of Korea resulted in two large transports being intercepted and torpedoed by the Vladivostok squadron with the loss of at least 1,000 Japanese troops, but this bold stroke in its influence upon the war is as chaff in the scale by comparison with the catastrophe on land.

Such in brief is the view taken in London of the latest events in the far East. The Daily Mail, however, points out that as yet the Japanese success on land has not gone to the extent of surrounding and destroying Gen. Stakelberg's army, as many British observers had confidently expected.

"After two days' hard fighting," it says, "in which the force engaged on the Japanese side appears to have been about three divisions of over 60,000 men, the Russian army under Stakelberg—which the Japanese describe as two divisions strong, and which should therefore have numbered between 30,000 and 40,000—has been dislodged from a strong position on the Port Arthur Railway in the neighborhood of Wafangtjen."

"As at Yalu and Kinchow, the Japanese made a considerable capture of Russian artillery. Fourteen guns in all were taken, and if the Japanese cavalry had been stronger the defeated army must have lost far more heavily in guns and prisoners, since it appears from the Japanese report to have retreated in some confusion."

"The Japanese success was only a partial victory, not annihilation, because the flank turned by the Japanese troops was the Russian right and not the left, which would have cut off Stakelberg's retreat."

"The Japanese forces at Siyen may make an immediate advance so as to come in upon the Russian line of retreat and convert this defeat into disaster."

Two Japanese Transports Sunk.

The Japanese transports Hitachi and Sado have been sunk by the Russian Vladivostok fleet, causing the loss of nearly 1,000 lives. The transports carried about 1,400 men and only about 500 survivors have been accounted for. The vessels carried also many horses and large quantities of supplies.

Details obtained from the survivors show that the Hitachi and the Sado met three Russian war ships near Iki Island at 10 o'clock on the morning of June 15. The Russians fired on the Japanese ships and stopped them and soon after they torpedoed and sank the helpless transports.

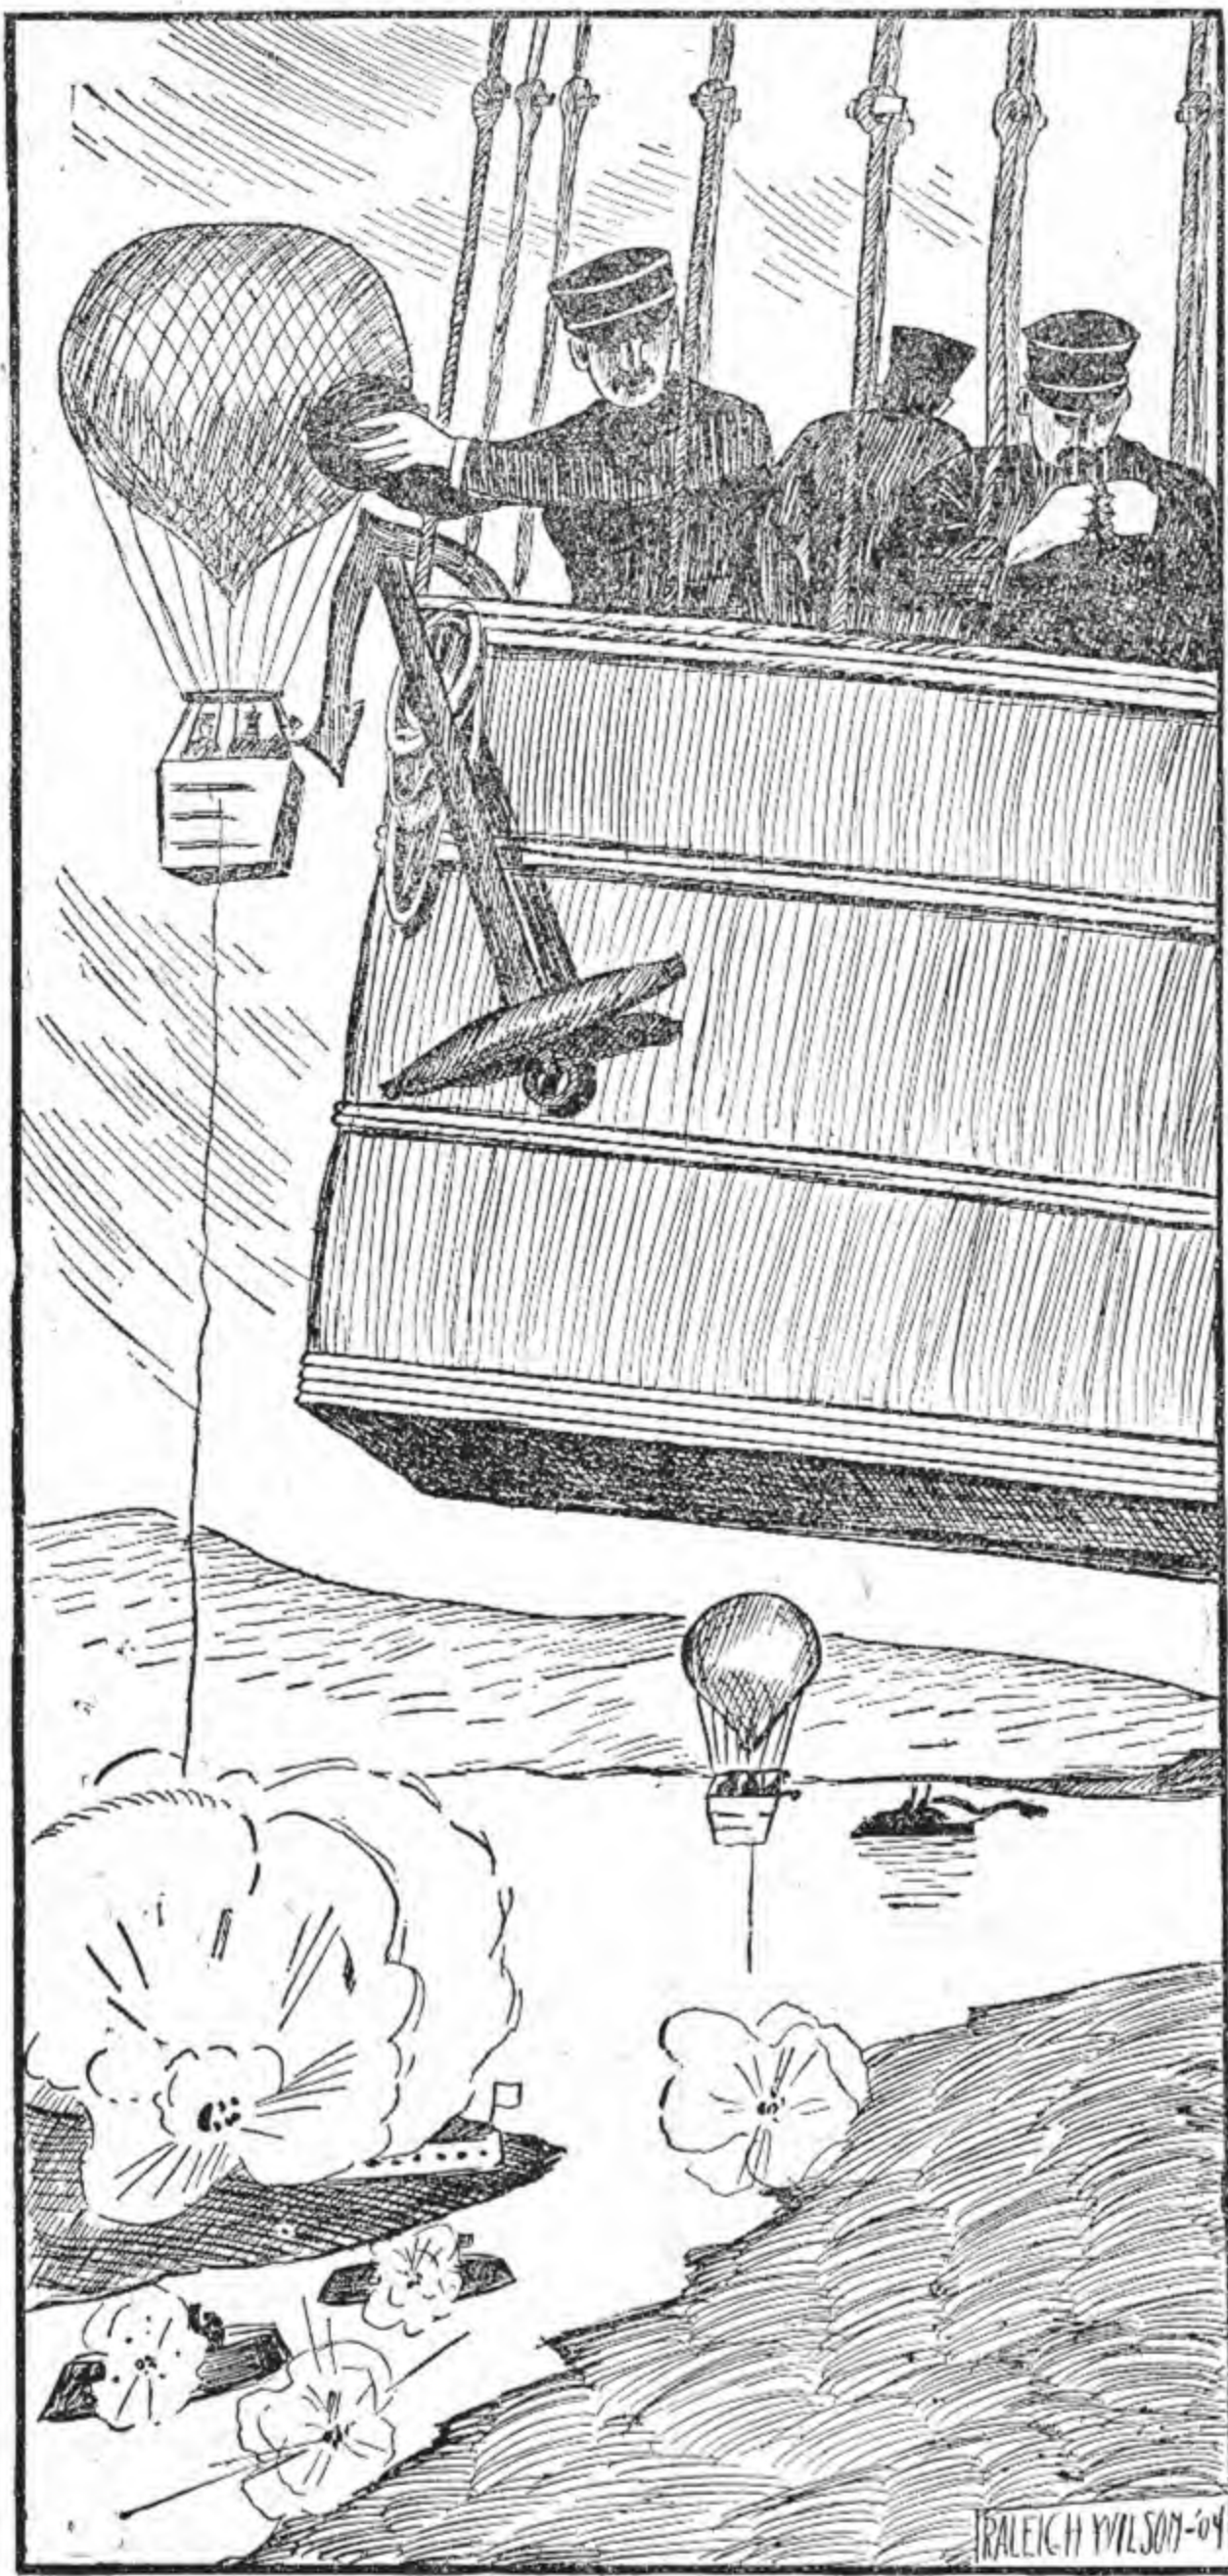

The captain of the Sado and several other men were captured. Over 100 men escaped in the boats and landed at Kokura.

The Russian squadron is commanded by Vice Admiral Bezobrazoff and not by Vice Admiral Skrydloff, as was reported. The squadron is reported to have returned to Vladivostok, but this has not been confirmed.

The captain of the transport Hino, which has arrived at Moji, reports that he saw the Hitachi being attacked by a Russian war ship. The Russian was on the starboard side of the Japanese transport, which changed her course and steered for the enemy with the intention of ramming her. The Russian vessel, however, crossed Kouropatkin Tells of Disaster.

USE OF BALLOONS IN WAR.

This picture shows what may be expected in warfare after the prohibition imposed by The Hague conference on the use of aerial torpedoes and bombs from balloons expires by limitation. It is expected that both the Japanese and the Russians will engage extensively in aerial offensive operations.

It is stated here that Gen. Kuroki, with the main force of the Japanese, is at Siyen. It is believed he intends uniting with the force advancing from the south and to make a combined attack on Hai-Cheng.

Russian Fleet in Safety.

Vice Admiral Kamimura has returned to his base without having discovered the Russian Vladivostok fleet. The weather has been foggy, and thus conditions have been against the Japanese.

Russian Army Crushed.

The Russian hope of relieving the pressure on Port Arthur by threatening the rear of General Oku, the commander of the Japanese forces investing the Russian stronghold, came to an end June 15 at Telissu, a point on the railroad fifty miles north of Kinchow and twenty-five miles north of Vafangow, when the Russians were outmaneuvered, enveloped and sweepingly defeated by Gen. Nodzu's forces. The Russians left over 500 dead on the field, and the Japanese captured 300 prisoners and fourteen quick-firing field guns. The Russians retreated hastily to the northward. The Japanese lost 1,000 men, killed or wounded.

The Japanese charge that the Russians violated the Japanese flag. Official dispatches from officers say that sians were being re-enforced and it was decided to make a general attack in the morning and force the Russians into a defile back of Telissu.

When morning came it was discovered that the Russians held a line extending from Ta-Fang-Shen to Cheng-Tsu-Shan with a force estimated at over two divisions.

The Japanese planned to envelop the Russians near Telissu and succeeded admirably. While the main Japanese force was moving north along the railroad, columns were swung to the left and to the right and finally converged at noon on the main Russian position. The Russians in this position were at a disadvantage, but they held it with determination until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. At this hour they were routed. The Japanese cavalry continued to pursue the enemy and probably inflicted considerable punishment.

The Japanese commander makes no estimate of the Russian losses, but says they probably were great.

Among the Russian officers captured by the Japanese is the colonel of the Fourth Regiment of rifles.

It is rumored in St. Petersburg that the battles of Vafangow and Telissu resulted in great losses, the number being given at 4,000 men.

GOV. LA FOLLETTE LOSES

Republican National Committee Settles Factional Fight in Wisconsin by Seating "Stalwart" Delegates.

Chicago special: Gov. La Follette met his Waterloo when the Republican national committee, in session at the Coliseum Annex, settled the fight among the Republicans in Wisconsin by seating in the national convention the stalwart delegates at large.

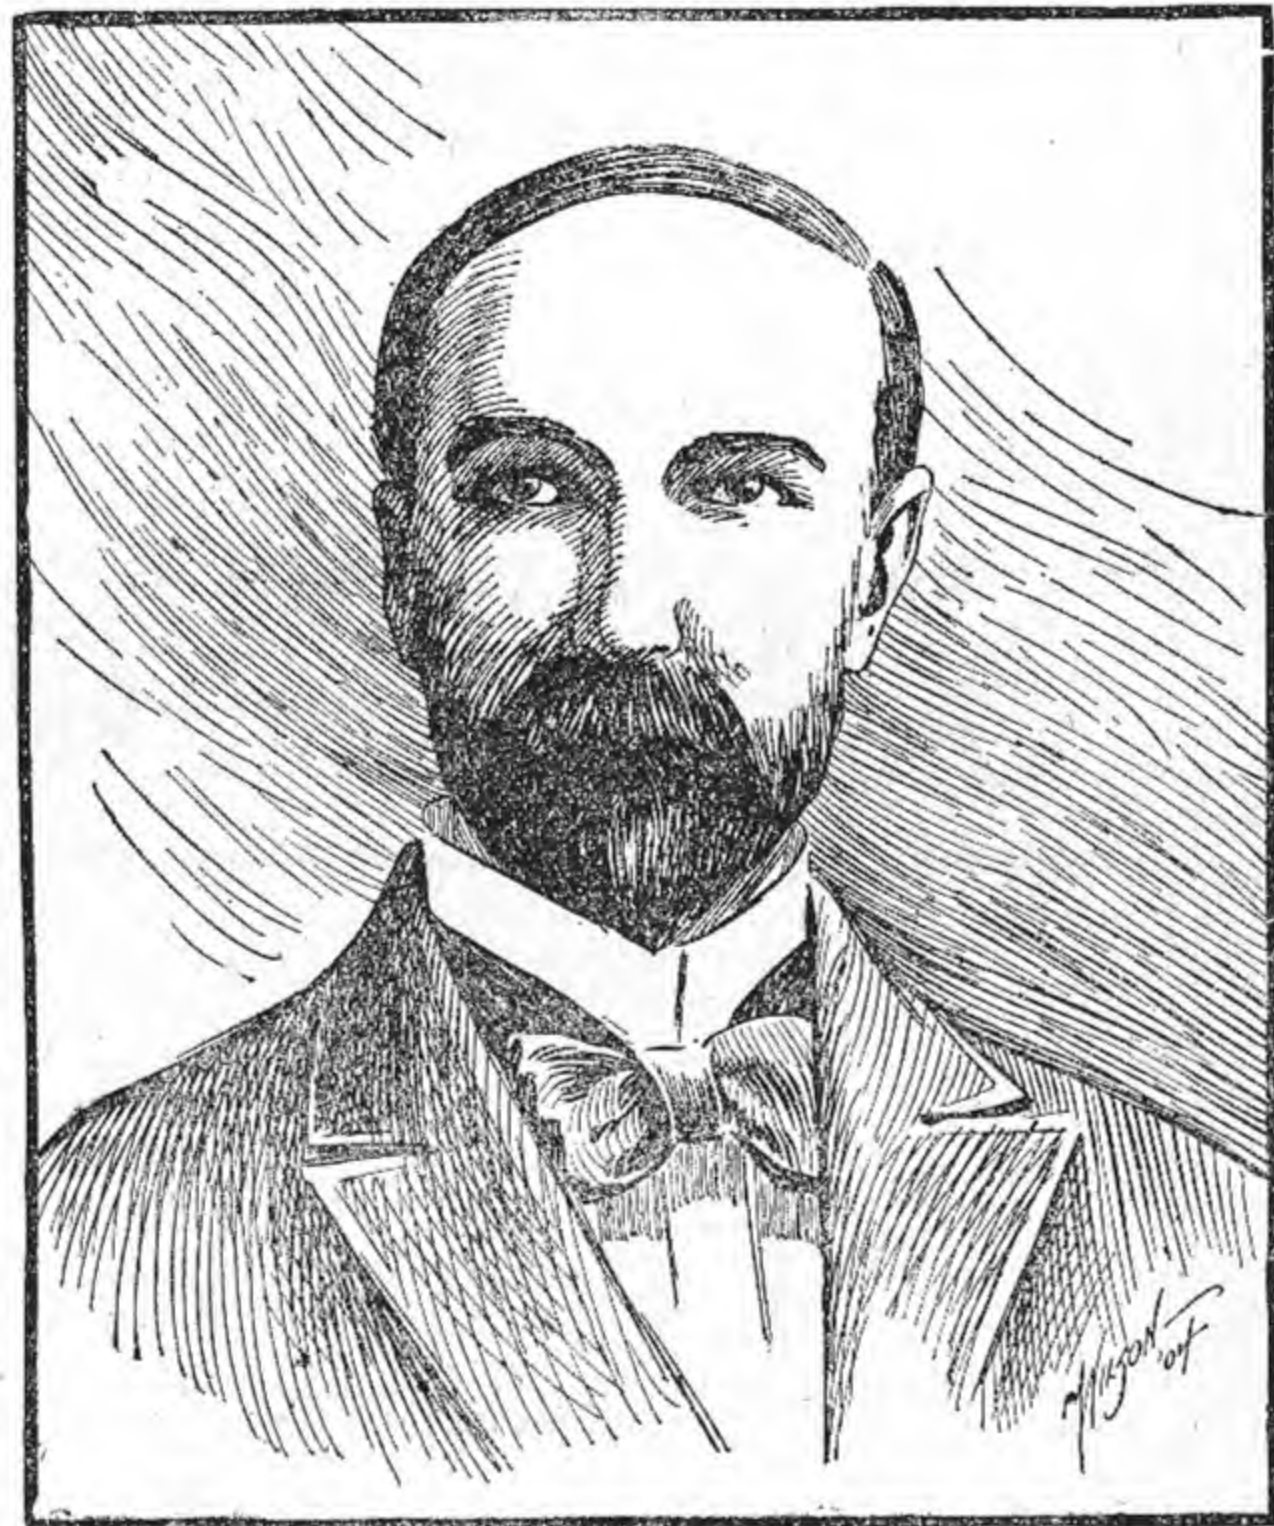

The decision of the committee was unanimous that the proceedings of the convention which chose Isaac Stephenson, Robert M. La Follette, James H. Stout and W. D. Connor as delegates at large were illegal and in violation of Republican precedent in Wisconsin. Nearly six hours were allowed the representatives of the contestants to present their arguments, it being recognized that the war among Senator Joseph V. Quarles, the Republicans of the badger state was one of grave import to the whole party.

La Follette Declares War.

Gov. La Follette left the committee room in high dudgeon when he found that his rivals—Senator Spooner, Senator Quarles, Joseph W. Babcock and Emil Baensch—had been declared the regularly chosen delegates. The plan of the defeated faction is to carry the fight into the Wisconsin supreme court. This plan has the approval of the stalwarts, as they are confident a precedent has been established by the national committee, which will make the question an easy one to settle. The committee is also of the belief that its decision will be upheld by the supreme court and the state ticket headed by S. A. Cook will be pronounced the regular Republican ticket.

Two decisions have been rendered recently by Western state supreme courts recognizing the national committee as the highest tribunal in questions of regularity in convention proceedings. Knowledge of these decrees strongly influenced the committee members when they began the hearing of the case.

Both Sides Are Heard.

The contest was called for a hearing at the opening of the session on June 17, and J. M. Olin of Madison began the presentation of Mr. Cook's side of the controversy, a voluminous printed brief accompanying his argument. The gist of the argument was that no authority existed for the throwing out of the majority of the Cook delegates by the state central committee. It was his claim that the merits of the credentials of these delegates should have been passed on by the convention instead of by the central committee.

Senator Spooner, Senator Quarles and M. J. Jeffris made arguments reinforcing the position taken by Mr. Olin. They were followed by George E. Roe, a New York attorney, and H. W. Chynoweth of Madison, who represented the La Follette faction. It was contended by Mr. Roe that, had the state central committee not acted as a committee on credentials, a committee from the convention being appointed and only those delegates seated who were properly certified, as required by the call of the state central committee, the result would have

The committee arrived at its decision within five minutes after the arguments were over. The roll call was required, as not a single dissenting voice was raised on the viva voce vote.

Ohio Contests Are Settled.

Three contests from congressional districts in Ohio came before the committee. One from the fourth district resulted in the seating of O. E. Harrison and W. L. Russell over Charles S. Stolzenbach and Roswell Speelman. The contest was over the regularity of the call for the congressional convention and basis of representation. It was discovered by the committee that the result would have been the same regardless of the change in the ratio of representation in the convention, and the decision was made in recognition of this fact.

United States Senator Foraker appeared before the committee when the case of the sixth Ohio district was called and stated that the delegates had agreed on dividing their strength in half, giving each one-half vote. This arrangement did not meet with the approval of the committee, as the notice of contest was not filed until ten days after the time set for submitting contests. The case was referred to the committee on contests.

In the twentieth Ohio district J. B. Zerbe and A. T. Spitzer were seated over Ferdinand H. Eggers and Mr. Spitzer, the last named being on both delegations. The only question involved in this contest was whether the chairman of the congressional committee had the right to name the temporary chairman of the convention. It was decided that the convention was supreme in the matter of choosing its officers.

The contest in the twenty-first district of Illinois resulted in a defeat for the friends of Gov. Yates, who instituted the fight to unseat H. N. Schuyler and Theodore Koch. A. G. Murray, a Yates partisan, sought to take Schuyler's seat, and when the committee inquired into the contest it was discovered that the only notice of a contest it had received was a telegram dated June 9. The vote to throw out the case was unanimous.

Three contests in Texas were quickly settled. One, in which the regularity of the call for the state convention was attacked, resulted in the seating of Cecil A. Lyon, R. B. Hawley, C. M. Ferguson and M. M. Rogers as delegates-at-large over George W. Burkett, A. J. M. McCauley and J. W. McKinney. In the second Texas congressional district J. H. Kurth and B. F. Wallace were seated over Dr. A. C. Porter and Col. A. J. Huston. In the seventh congressional district recognition was given to A. J. Rosenthal and H. L. Price, whose seats were claimed by Edward McCarthy and T. W. Ellis. Both of these contests were based on the question of regularity in the call for the conventions.

There was no discussion over the contest in the fifth Mississippi district, the delegates having settled the dispute by agreeing on one-half vote each.

Temporary Officers Named.

The subcommittee's report on temporary officers of the convention was adopted as follows: Temporary chairman—Elihu Root. Secretary—Charles W. Johnson of Minnesota.

Sergeant-at-arms—William F. Stone of Maryland.

First assistant sergeant-at-arms—David C. Owen of Wisconsin.

Three Chicago pastors were chosen for chaplains of the convention. On the first day Rev. Timothy P. Frost will be on duty. On the second day Rev. Thomas E. Cox, pastor of St. Jarlath's church, will deliver the prayer, and on the third day Rev. Thaddeus A. Snively will officiate. The chief doorkeeper will be C. S. Mortell of

CHILDREN BURN OR DROWN

Over One Thousand Sunday School Excursionists Meet Death on Flaming Steamer in Hell Gate, New York

Over 1,000 persons, according to the coroner's estimate, lost their lives June 15 by the burning of the excursion steamer Gen. Slocum in Long Island sound while off Ricker's Island and in plain view of New York city and Long Island shores.

The disaster was appalling in its immensity, dramatic in its episodes, and deeply pathetic in the tender age of most of its victims.

The scenes during and after the catastrophe were the kind that make the heart sick. Mothers hugging their children to their breasts in love and terror were forced to choose between certain death in the flames and almost equally certain death in the water.

Some, made frantic by their sudden peril, threw their babes into the whirling waters of Hell Gate, hoping doubtless for improbable rescue, while many were not allowed the poor privilege of choosing, but were forced overboard by the mad rush of the panic stricken passengers in their efforts to get away from the flames.

The Slocum, with the annual Sunday school excursion of St. Mark's German Lutheran church on board, was proceeding up the river to one of the many resorts of Long Island sound. When near One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street persons on shore saw smoke and flames spring from the upper part of the crowded steam-doomed steamer were children, and there was little hope for them after they had gone overboard. The current in the East river at this point is very strong, and scores of little ones were sucked in by the whirlpools at Hell Gate.

One man who went out in a row boat said that he saw at least fifty children perish in these whirlpools before he could reach them.

By the time the Slocum reached One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street the excursionists, driven to the rail, many of them with their clothing on fire, began to jump overboard by twos and threes. When One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street had been reached the heat from the fire had become so intense that men, women and children plunged overboard by the score. There was a terrific crash when the boat was beached.

It is said the fire started in the lunch counter in the forward part of the boat. When the alarm spread among the passengers the hurricane deck was crowded and when off One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street this deck collapsed.

A tug of the New York Central railroad saved nearly a score through the heroism of some unknown man. This man stood on the paddle wheel box of the Slocum and passed women and children to the tug until he was driven back by the flames. He then jumped into the tug himself.

THE BURNING BOAT DRIFTING DOWN THE RIVER.

Hurried sketch of scene by a New York newspaper artist.

er. A panic ensued on the boat almost instantly.

Owing to the rocks on either side of the channel at this point, it had been impossible to beach the vessel.

The captain stuck to his post at the wheel and headed the vessel straight up the river for North Brother Island, where she was put aground in shallow water.

Several hundred feet of open water still lay between the burning steamer and the shore and many persons perished either in the water or on the burning vessel after she had been beached. It was estimated that the steamer carried more than 2,000 persons.

She was the largest excursion steamer in these waters and could carry 4,000 passengers.

The boat caught fire in Hell Gate and the flames had complete control before any move could be made to check them.

Frightful scenes of panic followed. It was impossible to run the boat ashore, because of the Hell Gate rocks on either side, and the captain kept her headed for North Brother Island.

Nothing could be done in the way of launching boats, and as the flames advanced the passengers began to jump overboard. They went into the river by hundreds.

Many were rescued by tugs and other vessels, which promptly came to the rescue when the flames were seen.

An eyewitness said that the greatest loss of life was due to the collapsing of the heavy upper deck. It fell with a crash soon after the fire started, crushing hundreds of persons who had gathered on the lower deck. It was then that the greatest panic ensued amid the living stream of persons going over the rail into the water.

Three Types in Clubs.

The frequenters of the clubs may be divided into three classes. The billiard and bowling room crowd, who pass all their time in the club playing their favorite game or watching others when the tables and alleys are occupied; the card-room set, who only come to the club for the purpose of a game of poker or a rubber of whist; and finally, the window coterie, which embraces all the loiterers and habitués, who naturally frequent the windows as the pleasant

Making Fake Jewels.

"The making of fake jewels," a lapidary said, "is an interesting study. Do you know what the best fake pearls are made of? They are made of fish scales—silvery and iridescent fish scales pasted on the inside of balls of glass. The fish scales come from is called in France the ablette, and in England the bleak. It is smaller than a minnow. Its scales must be picked off by hand, and only a small portion of them can be used. It takes 10,000 ablettes or bleaks to yield one

PATHETIC SCENES AT MORGUE

Frantic Mothers Search for Child Victims of the General Slocum Disaster—Many Crazed by Grief

With its limited space the New York morgue could not begin to accommodate the silent forms which came to its doors as a result of the appalling disaster to the steamer General Slocum, June 15, and it extended its grim jurisdiction to the long pier at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street, along which there are now two long lines of plain plank coffins, with an aisle between, down and up which the sobbing fathers, mothers and children walk in their search for their dead.

Mothers with their infants so tightly clasped to their breasts that they could hardly be taken away; little girls, their holiday finery bedraggled by the cruel waters of the river and scorched by the flames, still holding to their breasts their little dolls; one especially, a curly-headed little boy, whose dead hands still fondly held a little tin horse, the leash string of which dangled pathetically over the edge of the rude coffin; strong men, too, whose torn hands and bruised faces show well that they did their whole duty—all these were lying silent.

Upon these looked the living with the lad, uttered in no gentle tones, rang discordantly on ears trained all night and day to sobs and shrieks of misery, but it was soon understood. One look at Troell showed him to be a madman, and he was gently taken away by a policeman.

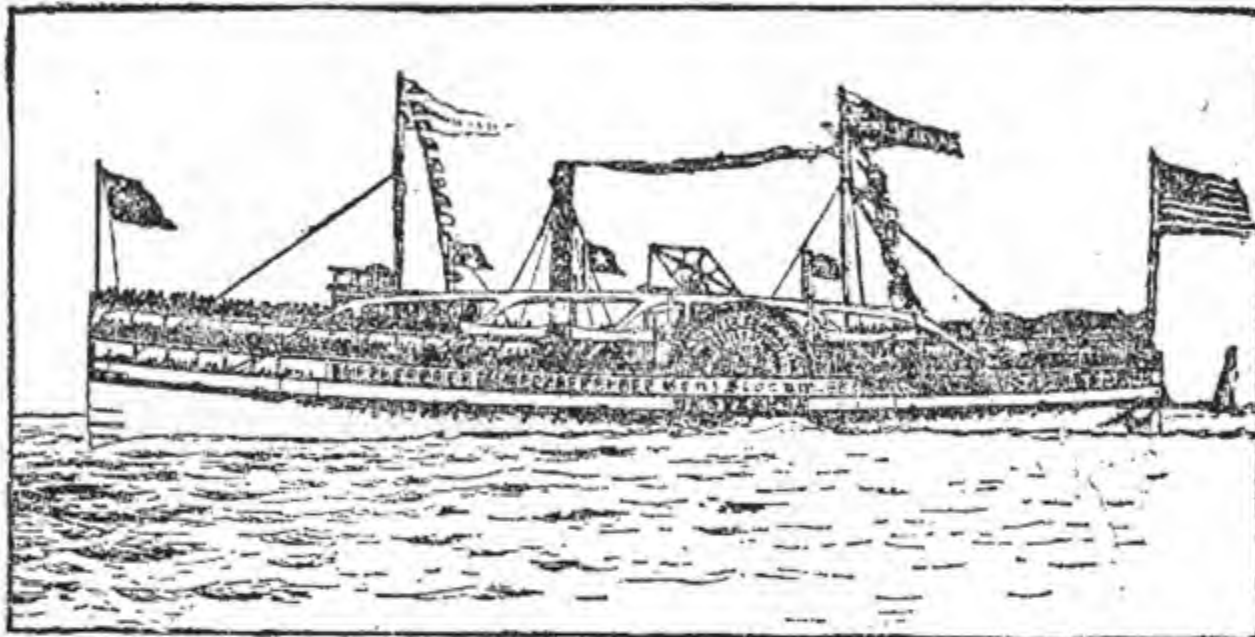

In a box near the head of the pier was a woman of middle age. A younger woman looked for a second on the dead, then leaped to the open door at the head of the pier and made a dash for the river. A policeman clutched her skirts, and she was hauled back to safety. She was Mrs. Kate Diamond, and the woman in the coffin was her mother, Mrs. Kate Birmingham, who had lost her life vainly trying to save her two young grandchildren.

Such scenes were by no means uncommon. Many in a moment of uncontrollable grief saw a speedy relief in the river which had cost them so much.

Women Display Heroism.

Prominent among the heroic victims of the General Slocum was Mrs. Kate Birmingham, 72 years old. With her in death are her two little grand-distress on their faces that it was not good to see. They peered into the coffins with almost insane eyes; a shriek, a moan, the sound of a falling woman or a hoarse shout of a man announced that some one had found his dead.

Policemen with wet eyes but firmly set teeth stood guard. Time and again they saved women, who, crazed with grief, made a plunge for the river. Attempts at suicide were so frequent at the long death pier that they ceased to be a novelty.

Amid these scenes of agony the undertakers developed a shameless rivalry for business, which even the police were unable to curb. Like "shyster" lawyers, they had their runners and ambulance chasers, and there were actual squabbles at times over the dead.

Henry Hardincamp found his little sister Mary among the dead. June 16 a score of this child's friends were to have gathered at her home to celebrate her eleventh birthday, and the child had talked all the week of the unusual happiness of the two days of pleasure; a picnic one day and a birthday party the next. Henry found the child in her little pine box and, throwing himself across the body, refused to leave and fiercely fought the men who tried to tear him away.

Albert Troell went through the line with his wife Anna, looking for Bert, their 13-year-old boy. They found him at last, and while the mother fell fainting on the floor the father's eyes took a queer look. He knelt beside the box, chafed the boy's ears, and in a stern tone ordered him to get up. His peremptory commands to children, a boy of 7 and a girl of 5. The devoted grandmother lost her life in trying to save the children of her son.

The grandmother gathered the two little ones in her arms at the first alarm of fire. As the flames swept aft the aged woman dropped to her knees on the deck and wrapped her skirts about the children in an effort to shield them from the flames.

"Never mind me," she cried to the rescuers. "It doesn't make any difference about me. Come and get the children."

At that moment there was a mad-dened rush to the stern of the boat on the upper deck. The weight was more than the deck would stand, and it fell with a crash. Mrs. Birmingham was struck by a piece of the wreckage and crushed to death, and the two little ones met the same fate.

Among those who merit praise for heroism in the work of rescue is Mary McCann, aged 17 years, who recently landed here from Ireland and who is employed as a waitress on North Brother Island. Four times she swam out from the shore to the side of the burning boat and each time she returned with a little child in her arms. She was going out the fifth time when one of the doctors caught her and ordered her to go up on the grass and lie down. The girl was so exhausted she could hardly stand.

"It made me crazy," she said, "to see those little ones in the water. I never knew I could swim so well before. I am sure I could have gone out again and brought one of those babies back if the doctor had not stopped me."

One Left in Family of Ten.

Only one person remains alive of a family party of ten on the General Slocum. It included Henry C. Schnude, receiving teller for Komtitz Brothers, his wife and two children, and his father and mother, the wife and two children of Mr. Tonipert, an employee of the Chase National Bank, and a relative of Mr. Schnude. All these are dead. The only one of the party saved was Miss Nettie Kasbaum, a sister of Mrs. Schnude. She is in the Hudson hospital suffering

ANTE-CONVENTION PROCEEDINGS

Delegates in Consultation Working for Their Favorite Candidates—Planks of the Platform Are Pretty Well Understood.

Chicago special: That Charles W. Fairbanks, senator from Indiana, will be the Republican nominee for vice-president is now the consensus of opinion among the delegates gathering in this city for the party's national convention. The boom for Speaker Cannon started by Senator Depew and Gov. Odell of New York was given a decided set-back when Mr. Cannon arrived Sunday afternoon and his friends passed around his word that his decision to reject the nomination, even if given to him, is unalterable. The Illinois delegates will obey state convention instructions and vote for Congressman Hitt, Nebraska will champion John L. Webster, Missouri will support Former Mayor Walbridge of St. Louis, and other states may have favorite sons, but the trend of sentiment is decidedly in favor of Senator Fairbanks.

"Stand Pat," the Keynote.

After submittal to and indorsement by President Roosevelt, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts brought to Chicago the draft of the convention platform as approved at a conference of Republican leaders in Washington recently. The platform is decidedly of the "stand pat" order, but it declares that no particular tariff schedule is sacred or immutable, and that any rate can be altered should changed conditions make such a course advisable. The record of the national administration for the last four years is reviewed and its course indorsed in all particulars.

The opposition to the election of Secretary Cortelyou as the chairman of the national committee, as desired by President Roosevelt, abated somewhat when Cornelius N. Bliss of New York, who first suggested Mr. Cortelyou's name, arrived and told all in-

He is planning to make a whirlwind campaign, and expects to be on the stump almost constantly from the first of next month until the day of election. The decision of the national convention regarding the contest for the four seats of delegates-at-large will not materially affect the Governor's plans.

It is not expected that either side can get a court ruling on the regularity of its ticket until September, as the Supreme court has adjourned for its summer vacation.

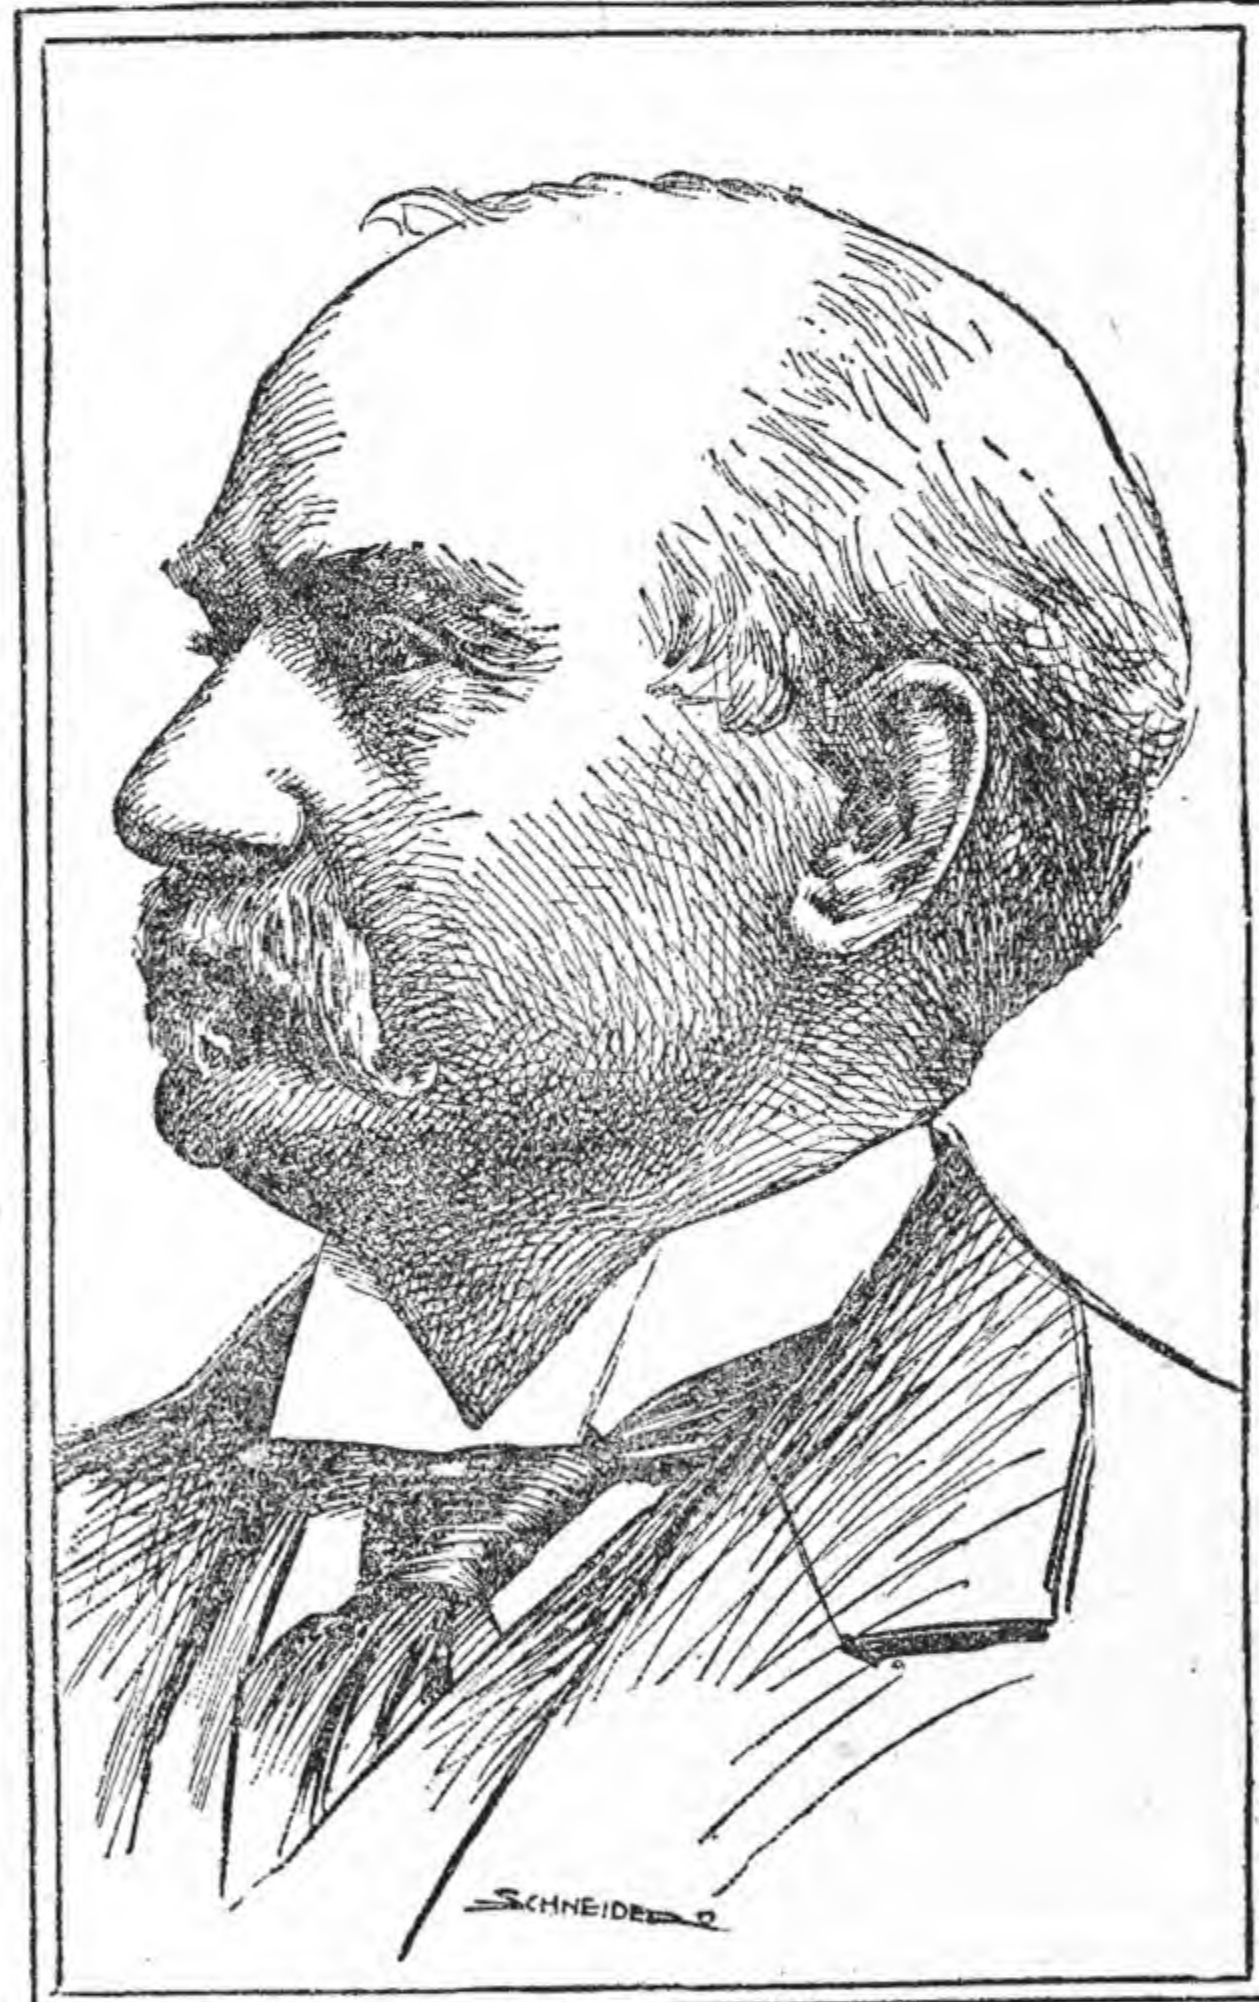

HITT IS TO MISS CONVENTION

Physician Advises Illinois Congressman to Remain Quiet.

Washington special: Congressman Hitt of Illinois, who is suffering from the effects of an attack of acute indigestion and a severe cold, is better. He is still confined to his room and, in obedience to the advice of his physician, is keeping very quiet. There seems no probability that he will be able to attend the Republican convention at Chicago.

Contest in Washington.

Chicago dispatch: A lively fight over the national committee has developed in the Washington state delegation. Senator Levi Aukeny and John S. McMillen, president of the Tacoma and Roche Harbor Lime company, Roche, Wash., are the candidates. McMillen's friends accused the Senator of bad faith in becoming a candidate for the place after he had encouraged Mr. McMillen's candidacy. A round-up of the delegates in the city showed a tie on the question, it is said, with two delegates absent. McMillen was proposed for the place as quiers that the wishes of the president should be followed.

Contest in Illinois.

Whether there will be a contest over chairman at the meeting of the Illinois delegation is still undecided. If so, it will probably be along state versus federal lines. For national committeemen the Cullom men favor Samuel B. Raymond, while the organization followers are uniting upon H. J. Hamlin. There is also much talk of Charles G. Dawes, who may be elected as a compromise.

The Massachusetts delegates were the first to elect their officers and committeemen. Former Governor W. Murray Crane being the member of the national committee.

LA FOLLETTE IS BUSY.

Wisconsin's Executive Prepares Appeal From Committee Decision.

Madison, Wis., special: Gov. La Follette spent Sunday in carefully reviewing the points of his side of the factional fight for recognition by the national Republican convention in consulting close friends regarding the probable outcome. He steadfastly refuses to say anything for publication.

One of the La Follette leaders said that no matter how the convention decides, the question at issue between the two factions would be fought out at the polls next November. The Governor, this man said, is confident that he can defeat both the candidates of the other faction and the Demo-a compromise between the different factions, but Senator Aukeny's candidacy is said to have upset the harmony plans and caused a bitter factional fight, which McMillen's friends say will cut a figure in the future Republican politics in the state.

Memorials for the Dead.

The adoption of memorial resolutions on the death of Senator Hanna, chairman of the committee, and Senator Quay, for many years one of its most active members, and the adoption of rules and distribution of badges comprised practically all that was done at the first gathering of the Republican national committee, June 7. A note from Postmaster General Payne, acting chairman, stated that he was not feeling as well as usual, and asked that Senator Scott take his place in the chair.

Mr. Payne apparently had recovered Wednesday night from his illness, and was as active as any other member of the committee.

Missouri Factions Unite.

Chicago special: The contest in the Missouri delegation over the choice of a national committeeman has resolved into a combination of all factions on T. J. Akins and his election is practically conceded. There is also a contest in the Fifth district of Missouri over the seats claimed by J. H. Harris and Wallace Love of Kansas City. Little difficulty is expected over this contest, however, as the regular organization claim the

An exchange says if the average girl doesn't play the harp in the other world any better than she does the piano in this, there is going to be trouble.

The normal human eye can read letters seven-twentieths of an inch at a distance of 20 feet. Inability to do this shows a defective sight, which should be corrected by glasses.

An old farmer was in a Logan-sport drug store the other day and noticed an electric fan buzzing inside of a wire screen. He watched it a few minutes and then stepping over to the druggist, said: "Mister, I don't want to be givin' you no advice about runnin' yer business, but if you don't stop that damn squirrel in that cage he'll run his fool self to death."

The newspaper reading public nowadays looks for something more than mere "news" in its journals. The purchase and sale of commodities are among the most important events of everyday life. Therefore the wise merchant tells the public what he wants to sell, and there is no better way to convey this information than by daily advertising. To be sure his "news" does not come by cable, wire, or over the editor's desk, but is very important news all the same.—Ex.

What an Education Does for a Man

The average educated man gets a salary of $1000 per year. He works 40 years, making him a total of $40,000 in a life time. The average day laborer gets $1.50 per day, 300 days in the year or $452 per year. In 40 years he earns $18,000. The difference between $40,000 and $18,000, or $22,000, equals the value of an education in dollars. To acquire this earning capacity requires 12 years at school of 180 days each or a total of 2,160 days. Divide $22,000 of an education by 2,160, number of days required in getting it, and we find that each day at school is worth a little more than $10 to the pupil.

Improvements at Winona.

Winona is having a good growth, no boom, but a natural growth that is justified by the increase in patronage to this popular summer resort. Judge Beemen, of Knox, has completed an apartment house containing four flats of four rooms each, beautifully located on the banks of the lake. He is conducting a well supplied restaurant in the building, which will add much to the convenience and comfort of those who engage rooms with him. Many new cottages are under construction, all being built upon a plan that bespeaks ease and comfort for the occupants. Captain Peterson has a fine boat livery, and a few steamers that reflect credit upon the captain as a boat builder as well as upon the many patrons who make such an extensive business profitable. The captain has under construction a new steamer having a carrying capacity of about thirty people. The boat is of a new type being built upon the torpedo plan of boats, and is a beauty to look upon. It is rumored that arrangements are being perfected for a yacht race to be held some time during the summer between Bass Lake and Maxinkuckee parties. A race of this kind would be quite an attraction and should meet with encouragement from all who are interested in the reputation of the two already famous resorts.

Good Advice to Graduates.

In a sensibly practical address to the graduates of the Bloomington, Ill., High school recently, former Vice-President Adlai E. Stevenson gave the students excellent advice on good citizenship in general in these words:

"Let me suggest to you the importance studying thoroughly the history of your own country. It is far more instructive and entertaining than the fabled story of Greece or Rome; infinitely more profitable than the perusal of libraries of what often passes for the literature of the day. Let me say to you, young gentleman, it is high privilege and high honor to be a citizen of this great republic. It is in very truth a government of the people; in an important sense a government standing separate and apart; its foundations the morality, the intelligence, the patriotism of the people. Never forget that citizenship in such a government carries with it high responsibility; a responsibility that is personal, and that you cannot evade. Study thoroughly the history of your country, how our liberties were achieved and the benefits of stable government secured by the great compact which for more than a century has held states and people in indissoluble union. And how during the great civil conflict—the most stupendous the world has known—human liberty, through baptism of blood, attained a new and grander meaning and the union established by our fathers made, as we humbly trust, enduring for all time."

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a desolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine. Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Restlessness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity. Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to leave his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

ANTHONY NIAGO.

Hon. Daniel McDonald Writes of the Last of the Pottawattomies.

Editor of the Culver Citizen:

I read in your paper last week the first of your articles on the sixtieth anniversary of the laying out of the town of Culver, then called Union Town, and was much interested in it, especially the brief mention you made of the last Indian that remained in the county after the removal of the Pottawattomie Indians in 1828—Anthony Niago. I knew this Indian personally very well, and saw him frequently, almost daily for two or three years after he moved to Plymouth prior to his death in 1878. From him and other sources I learned the story of his life which may be of sufficient interest to your readers to justify its publication in connection with the sketches you are writing.

It is only by comparison that we comprehend and appreciate the marvelous advancement our county has made in sixty years, and especially that part of it around the beautiful lake—Maxinkuckee about which you are writing, it is well that you are carrying your readers back to the pioneer days, just as civilization began to dawn, that they may see the marvelous evolution that has taken place during the more than half a century since then. But to our story:

The real name of Anthony Niago as we now know him originally, Otowanago, but in the evolution of civilization it was corrupted into Niago, and by that name he will always be known. He was the last of the numerous Indians that inhabited this region of country prior to the coming of the whites, and as such was an important landmark in the early history of Marshall county.

He was borne somewhere in the territory of what is now Kosciusko county, but made his home in this county from about 1828, locating in the region where Tippecanoe Township now is at that time. His father was of the Pottawattomie tribe, and his mother of the Miami tribe. He claimed to have belonged to the Miami tribe in accordance with an Indian custom of designating the tribe, the papooses should belong to from the squaws side of the house. He was married at the Indian Chapel on the Menominee Reserve, near Twin Lakes, he said, in the year of 1828 to Miss Ashnuc in the Indian language signifying Miss Angeline. She was what is known as half breed, one of her parents being French and the other Indian. It was also in this same chapel that he was baptized into the catholic faith, by a missionary of that denomination probably Father DeSille, and lived and died an upright Christian life, being a member of the Catholic Church at Plymouth at the time of his death.

When the Indians were forcibly removed from Marshall county in 1838 Niago was corralled along with the other 850 at Twin Lakes. The treaty stipulated only for the removal of the Pottawattomie Indians, and as Niago was a Miami, he laid his case before Gen. Tipton who was convinced that he had no authority to take Niago with him. He informed Niago, however, that it would be dangerous for him to leave the camp at that time, as the Pottawattomies were in a very bad humor and they could not be made to see why Niago should be allowed to go free while they were compelled to be driven at the point of the bayonet. So Gen. Tipton told him to go peaceably with them the first day out, and when he had established his headquarters for the night, after the Indians had gone to sleep, to come to his quarters and he would arrange some way for his escape without being discovered. Gen. Tipton's headquarters happened to be in a log cabin on the north bank of the Tippecanoe river where the Michigan road crosses that stream. About midnight Niago slipped quietly in to the General's quarters. Gen. Tipton directed him to go up into the garret and remain there until the Indians had taken up their line of march and were out of sight early in the morning. Niago did as directed and an hour after they were gone he climbed down the improvised ladder and was looking around in every direction to see that there were no Indians or white men in sight, he hastily took off through the woods in the direction of Tippecanoe town. Later he found his wife waiting for him, and having purchased a tract of land north of Bourbon, near Panama, he built him a cabin and settled down to peaceful pursuits. While living there in the early 50's a Miami Indian by the name of Marshall, a great big quarrelsome fellow, who was generally drunk, went to Niago's cabin and day and offered an insult to Niago's wife. Niago had driven Marshall away many times, telling him never to return again, but this time his offense was so exasperating that Niago could not stand it any longer, so taking his rifle from over the fire place he drew the trigger killing Marshall instantly. Niago gave him self up and an inquest was held, and verdict rendered of justifiable killing. Niago was kind hearted, upright and honorable citizen, and the regret of his life was the necessity that compelled him to take the life of even so worthless a fellow as Marshall.

County Health Organization.

After an unusual year of contagious diseases in Marshall county, principally scarlet fever, small-pox and measles, in which many people have suffered from sickness in their families, inconvenienced by quarantine, disturbed in business, all attended by public and private expense, with health officers overburdened with labor and concern, there is now a period of entire rest and not a case existing in the county at present, known to the health officer.

We now have as perfect a county health organization as can be found in the state. Dr. C. A. Brown, of Plymouth, Dr. E. D. Wilson, of Argos, Dr. W. R. Cunningham, of Bourbon, Dr. C. E. Nusbaum, of Bremen, Dr. S. A. Johnson, of Tippecanoe, and Mr. Medbourn, of Culver, have been long tried and have done excellent work in the various municipalities where they have been appointed. A specially deputized health officer has been appointed in each school district of the county, and so far as we have had experience with these men they have proven greatly interested in the work and highly useful. We feel now that we are masters of the situation, for no person with the power of conveying any of these contagious diseases, whether having an attending physician or not to report his case will escape our notice and be isolated.

Next week we will furnish the various newspapers of the county a list of these school district officers who have been appointed.

Wheat Crop Below Average.

According to B. F. Johnson, state statistician, Indiana's wheat crop this year will be between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000 bushels less than in 1903. The crop last year approximated 40,000,000 bushels. "It will do exceedingly well to total 25,000,000 bushels this year," said Mr. Johnson. "Twenty million bushels will be considered good."

THIRTEENTH REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

National Gathering at Chicago to Nominate Its Standard Bearers and Make Declaration of Principles—Sessions Not to Be Protracted.

Postmaster General Henry C. Payne of the Republican national committee, will call the thirteenth Republican national convention to order at noon June 21 in the Coliseum at Chicago. By that hour the big convention hall will be filled to its capacity and every one of the 8,270 seats will contain an occupant, for there is a clamor for seats. The chairman will address 992 delegates from the states and territories at large and from congressional districts. With the strike of the committee chairman's gavel the three days' convention will be opened.

Every detail of a national gathering has been completed under the direction of William F. Stone of Maryland, sergeant at arms of the convention, who has spent weeks with a corps of assistants making ready for the big event. That there will be no complaint as to the arrangements with the exception of the seating capacity of the convention hall is granted. While the hall will not accommodate as many as the Philadelphia convention hall four years ago, those who have been fortunate enough to get tickets will be able to hear every word uttered by speakers.

The first day will be given over force until a permanent organization is effected.

A resolution will be adopted ordering that the roll of states and territories be called and the chairman of each delegation instructed to announce the names of the persons selected to serve on the several committees, including permanent organization, rules and order of business, credentials and resolutions. The various delegations will send in the names of the persons who are to serve on the committees and after they have been read the temporary chairman will announce the location of the meeting places of the various committees. Most of the committees will meet in the annex of Coliseum building. After the committees are named the convention probably will adjourn until 12 o'clock June 22, in order to give the committees an opportunity to meet and arrange for the permanent organization of the convention.

The convention will be adjourned in honor of the memory of the late Senator M. A. Hanna, who died while occupying the chairmanship of the national committee. A suitable resolution will be presented to the convention and it is on the tentative and each delegation will announce the name of the member of the committee selected by it.

This probably will conclude the second day's session and, according to the present program, an adjournment will be taken until 10 o'clock next morning. The concluding session will be given over to the nomination of the national ticket. The first order will be the nomination of a candidate for president. On the roll call of states it is expected that Alabama will yield to New York for the purpose of bringing the name of President Roosevelt before the convention at once. The nominating and seconding speeches will consume considerable time, after which the roll will be called.

The next order of business will be the nomination of a candidate for vice president. Upon a call of the roll the candidates will be placed in nomination and the usual seconding speeches heard. This being concluded, the reading clerk will call the roll on the nomination of a vice presidential candidate. This will practically conclude the work of the convention, which will adjourn without delay after the customary resolutions are adopted requesting the secretary to Improving Cigar by Putting It Out.

Lighting a new Havana, a downtown professional man, after taking a few whiffs, blew into his cigar and forced a lot of smoke out of the fiery end. Then he laid it aside and permitted the spark to die out.

When asked for an explanation he said: "Well, I learned that habit some years ago, and I find that a cigar which has been lighted and then allowed to go out makes a much better smoke. I take several vigorous draws in order to bring the heat well through the weed. If a cigar becomes cold while it is saturated with smoke it has a musty odor; consequently, it is necessary to blow steadily and quite hard before extinguishing the spark, in order to clear out all the smoke that has been drawn in between the layers of tobacco. After permitting the cigar to lie ten or fifteen minutes, or even a half hour, I find on re-lighting it that the flavor has greatly improved. The why and wherefore I am not philosophical enough to explain, but I know it makes a cigar better. It also improves a toby. Try it and you'll agree with me."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Strong Language.

Fredericksburg, Ind., June 20.—Rev. Enoch P. Stevens of this place uses strong language in speaking of Dodd's Kidney Pills and he gives good reasons for what he says:

"I can't praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too much," says Mr. Stevens. "They have done me so much good. I was troubled with my kidneys so much that I had to get up two or three times in the night and sometimes in the day when starting to the waterhouse the water would come from me before getting there. Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me entirely."

"I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to many people and have never yet heard of a failure. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the things for kidney disease and rheumatism."

Elliott Crayton McCant's novel "In the Red Hills" published by Doubleday, Page & Co., deals with the younger generation south of the Mason and Dixon line. Mr. McCant himself was born in South Carolina, near the village of Ninety-Six. After a military education at Charleston the author returned to the "red hills" to teach school for a number of years. The new novel finds many dramatic situations in the disturbed conditions and the troubles that speedily arise between the "poor white" renters and the negroes.

THREE HUNDRED HURT ON BUNKER HILL DAY

Explosives Inflict Injury on Many Persons Who Aid in Patriotic Celebration at Boston.

Boston, Mass., dispatch: "Sane Fourth" ideas did not prevail in Boston Bunker Hill day, and the consequence is that more than 300 persons are suffering from more or less severe wounds from toy pistols, firecrackers and other explosives.

Many of the victims are seriously injured, and some of them fatally. It is safe to say that when the Fourth of July arrives Boston will adopt the measures which were recently killed in Chicago, and have the day observed in a manner which will prevent the maiming of her citizens.

The most serious accident of the day resulted in the severe injuring of Miss Helen Fahey of Brookline and Miss Elizabeth Scott, who was with Miss Fahey. The two young women were riding on a Huntington avenue car when some boys placed a torpedo on the tracks. When the wheels crushed the torpedo the explosion lifted the car from the rails and turned it nearly on its side.

Flying wood and iron struck Miss Fahey, nearly blinding her and injuring her severely about the head. It is doubtful if she will recover. Miss Scott was more fortunate, but nevertheless her wounds were very painful and she was taken to a hospital, where she still remains.

Holes shot through small boys' hands and bullet holes in other parts of their anatomy are so frequent as to cease to cause comment.

Many fires also resulted from the celebration, and the damage to property will reach a total of nearly $1,000,000.

BUNGLING EXECUTION IN THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

Five Applications of the Current Are Necessary to Extinguish Life of Condemned Man in Ohio.

Columbus, O., special: The electrocution of Moses Johnson, the negro murderer of Portsmouth, O., in the annex at the Ohio penitentiary Saturday morning was almost as harrowing as that of Michael Schiller, the Youngstown murderer, Friday morning. Johnson was strapped in the chair at 12:02 and the first shock was administered at 12:05. This was 1,750 volts, but it failed to extinguish life.

Five shocks in all were administered before the condemned man was pronounced dead at 12:20. After each shock, except the last, the attending physicians found evidence of heart action. The prison authorities are mystified at the failure of the electric current to do its work quickly. There does not appear to be any weakness or disarrangement in the machinery. In both the Schiller and Johnson electrocutions the current showed the required voltage and the electrodes were apparently properly adjusted.

Robert Shackleton's new novel, "The Great Adventurer," published by Doubleday, Page & Co., is said to be a remarkable and daringly conceived novel. Newbury Linn, the "great adventurer," carries the idea of combination to its logical conclusion and forms the colossal Trust of Trusts—besides which the Standard Oil or Steel combinations are merely beginnings. The love of this strong man for the woman who is unjustly bound to one of his business associates is drawn with powerful strokes, yet with real sentiment and romantic feeling. The surprising culmination of the overshadowing and menacing organization which his genius has built up is one of the most ingenious, yet simple and inevitable, portions of the tale.

to organizing the convention. After the call to order Chairman Payne will ask that the call for the convention be read. Elmer Dover of Ohio, secretary of the national committee, will read the call as issued at Washington, Jan. 16, 1904, by the national committee. This being concluded, it will be in order for Mr. Payne to address the convention as the head of the national organization, concluding by presenting the temporary chairman selected by the national committee.

Elihu Root of New York, former secretary of war, will be presented as the temporary chairman and in taking the chair will make an address after the usual custom. Following the remarks of the temporary presiding officer the convention will elect the other temporary officers, including secretary, assistant secretaries, reading clerks, clerk at chairman's desk, official reporter, tally clerks, messenger to chairman and messenger to the secretary. The names of these officers will be handed in on a "slate" prepared by the national committee and it will be in order for the convention to ratify the selections of the committee.

Charles W. Johnson of Minnesota, who acted as secretary of the last three Republican national conventions has been selected to fill that office at the Chicago convention. In order that there may be rules under which the convention may work until a permanent organization is perfected a resolution will be adopted providing for the election of a permanent organization.

program to adjourn the first day's session in memory of the late senator.

With the temporary chairman in the chair the convention will open the second day's proceedings and the first order of business will be the presentation of the report of the committee on credentials. The committee will report its action on the twenty-two contests which were disposed of for the temporary organization by the national committee. The credentials committee will report the roll of delegates and alternates as adopted by it. Unless the report of the committee is agreed to without debate a time limit will be placed upon the speakers. Having disposed of the seating of the delegates the convention will then hear the report of the committee on permanent organization.

Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, speaker of the national house of representatives, being selected as the permanent chairman will head the list of officers to be presented by the committee on permanent organization.

After the report of the committee is adopted the temporary chairman will name a committee to escort the permanent chairman to the platform, who upon being presented will address the convention.

Having adopted the rules and order of business, the convention will be ready to hear the report of the committee on resolutions and adopt the Republican national platform of 1904. The next business will be the nomination of members of the national Republican committee. The roll of Chairman Cannon will likely be named as the chairman of the committee to notify President Roosevelt of his nomination and Temporary Chairman Root will probably be selected to head the committee to be named to notify the vice presidential nominee of his selection. The chairman will ask the chairman of each delegation to submit in writing the name of the member of the committee to notify the president of his nomination and the name of the member of the committee to notify the vice presidential candidate. From present calculations it is expected that the convention will adjourn sine die at about 2 o'clock June 23.

Illinois and New York will occupy the front seats in the delegates' platform. Back of Illinois will be seated the Indiana delegation and just behind New York will be the delegation from Iowa. The members of the national convention will be the only guests on the platform. The chairman will be seated a little to the south of the middle of the platform, which is located in the center of the east side of the convention hall.

To the right of Chairman Cannon will be seated Sergeant-at-Arms Stone, who will have a telephone at his elbow, by which he will be able to communicate with his assistants without interrupting the proceedings

CHAPTER I.

The Fall of the House of Frode.

As the blackness of the midsummer night paled, the broken towers and wrecked walls of the monastery loomed up dim and stark in the gray light.

Through a breach in the moss-grown wall, the first sunbeam stole in and pointed a bright finger across the cloister garth at the charred spot in the center, where missals and parchment rolls had made a roaring fire to warm the invaders' blood-stained hands.

As the lark rose through the brightening air to greet the coming day, a woman in the tunic and cowl of a nun opened what was left of the wicket-gate in the one unbattered wall. She struck a note in perfect harmony with her surroundings, as she stood under the crumbling arch, peering out into the flowering lane.

Like the straggling hedges that were half buried under a net of wild roses, red and white, the path was half effaced by grass; but beyond, her eye could follow the straight line of the great Roman road over marsh and meadow and hill-top.

Between the dark walls of oak and beech, it gleamed as white as the Milky Way. The nun was able to trace its course up the slope of the tall hill. Just beyond the crest, a pall of smoke was spread over a burning village. Shivering the nun turned her face back to the desolate peace of the ruins.

"Now is it clear to all men why a bloody cloud was hung over the land in the year that Ethelred came to the throne," she said. "I feel as the blessed dead might feel should they be forced to leave the shelter of their graves and look out upon the world."

Rising from its knees beside a bed of herbs, a second figure in faded robes approached the gate. Sister Sexberga was very old, much older happened. See! He is shaking off his swoon. After he has swallowed some of your wine, he will be able to speak and tell us."

It was muscle-breaking work for women's backs, for though he tried instinctively to obey their directions, the man was scarcely conscious; his arms were like lead yokes upon his supporters' shoulders. Just within the gate their strength gave out, and they were forced to put him down among the spicy herbs. There, as one was pulling off her threadbare cloak to make him a pillow, and the other was starting after her cordial, he opened his eyes.

"Master!" he muttered. "Master? Have they gone?"

In an instant Sister Wynfreda was on her knees beside him. "Is it the English you mean? Did they beset the castle?"

Slowly the man's clouded eyes cleared. "The Sisters—" he murmured. "I had the intention—to get to you—but I fell—" His words died away in a whisper, and his eyelids drooped. Sister Sexberga turned again to seek her restorative. Sister Wynfreda leaned over and shook him.

"Answer me, first. Where is your master? And young Fridtjof? And your mistress?"

He shrank from her touch with a gasp of pain. "Dead," he muttered. "Dead—at the gate—Frode and the boy—the raven-starvers cut them down like saplings."

"And Randalin?"

"I heard her scream as the Englishman seized her—Leofwinsson had her round the waist—they knocked me on the head, then—I—I—" Again his voice died away.

Sister Wynfreda made no attempt to recall him. Mechanically she held his head so that her companion might pour the liquid down his throat. That done, she brought water and bandages, and stood by, absent-eyed and other way could one account for those locks, and for her eyes that were of the grayish blue of iris petals.

The eyes were a little staring this morning, as though still stretched wide with the horror of the things they had looked upon; and all the glowing red blood had ebbed away from the brown cheeks.

She said in a low voice. "My father . . . Fridtjof . . ." then stopped to draw a long hard breath through her set teeth.

Sister Wynfreda ran to the girl and caught her trembling by the hands. "Praise the Lord that you are delivered whole to me!" she breathed. "Gram told us—that they had taken you."

Gazing at her out of horror-filled eyes, Randalin stood quite still in her embrace. Her story came from her in jerks, and each fragment seemed to leave her breathless, though she spoke slowly.

"I broke away," she said. "They stood around me in a ring. Norman Leofwinsson said he would carry me before a priest and marry me, so that Avalcomb might be his lawfully, whichever king got the victory. I said by no means would I wed him; sooner would I slay him. All thought that a great jest and laughed. While they were shouting I slipped between them and got up the stairs into a chamber, where I bolted the door and would not open to them, though they pounded their fists sore and cursed at me. At last they began to laugh and jeer, and called to me they would go down and drink my wedding toast before they broke in the door and fetched me; and then they betook themselves to feasting."

Sister Wynfreda bent her head to murmur a prayer: "God forgive me if I have lacked charity in my judgment on the Pagans! If they who have seen the light can do such deeds, what can be expected of those who yet labor under the curse of darkness?"

"I do not understand you," Randalin said wearily, sinking on the grass and passing her hands over her strained eyes. "When a man looks with eyes of longing upon another man's property, it is to be expected that he will do as much evil as luck allows him. Though he has got Baddeby, Norman was covetous of Avalcomb. When his lord, Edric Jarl, was still King Edmund's man, he twice beset the castle, and my father twice held it against him. And his greed was such that he could not stay away even after Edric had become the man of Canute."

It was the nun's turn for bewilderment. "The man of Canute? Edric of Mercia, who is married to the King's sister? It cannot be that you know what you say!"

"Certainly I know what I say," the girl returned a little impatiently. "All English lords are fraudulent; men can see that by the state of the country. Though he be thrice kinsman to the English King, Edric Jarl has joined the host of Canute of Denmark; and all his men have followed him. But even that agreement could not hold Norman back from Avalcomb. He lay hidden near the gate till he saw my father come, in the dusk, from hunting, when he fell upon him and slew him, and forced an entrance—the nothing! When he had five-and-fifty men and my father but twelve!"

She paused, with set lips and head flung high. The nun got down stiffly beside her and laid a gentle hand upon her knee.

"Think not of it, my daughter," she urged. "Think of your present need and of what it behooves us to do. Tell me how you escaped from the chamber, and why you wear these clothes." (To be continued.)

How Success Succeeds.

Col. Weis was once at Carlsbad with the treasurer of a Cincinnati brewery. There is a system of "Kur tax" in Carlsbad. You pay from $5 to $10 if you stay over a week, the fund going to defray music and improvement expenses. It is plain robbery, but can't be avoided. The tax is graded according to your wealth or income, and the wily Bohemians generally know who's who. They came to Weis and asked his occupation.

"I'm in the express business."

"Vat's dat?"

"Oh, we deliver packages, you know."

So they put Weis down as a wagon driver and assessed him the very lowest, although he draws $36,000 a year. The brewery employe gave his occupation and was hit for the highest tax, although his salary was but $5,000 a year.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Improve the Canals.

A movement has been started in several centers in Europe to improve the canals, which have been neglected through the influence of the railroads, just as they have in many American states.

There are in France 3,000 miles of canals. Belgium has 1,242 miles of canals and other waterways. In Holland the canals are put to more general use than they are in other countries.

In England there are 3,907 miles of canals, and it has been pointed out that the railway companies own 1,376 miles of these canals. The railroad companies keep the canal rates so high that there is no competition between the canals and the railroads. There are few canals in any country that are not fifty years behind the times.

Double Vision.

"See here," exclaimed Benedick's friend, "you'll have to give up your old ideas of seeing life. You're not single any more."

"That's all right," gurgled Benedick.
