SELECT THE SEED CORN NOW

Points That Should Be Observed to Insure Best Results.

grows corn will see to it that an ample supply of good seed corn for next year is selected, dried and put away in a safe place this fall and as early as possible. Let us speak of this matter to every farmer we meet and make sure that he does not forget it nor neglect it. away to dry, but the great majority aren't even thinking about it. Hundreds upon hundreds of our farmers know when seed corn should be selected, but, somehow, week after week, until finally the corn is cribbed and no seed has yield and improve the quality of year's crop has been missed.

The best time to select seed corn is as soon as possible after the corn is mature and while the stalks are standing and in a condition to show all their characterselected from the crib, where we have no means of telling under what conditions the ears were produced. The stalk that bears the ear has a number of important self and the other members of the characteristics that help to make family. If the son and father enor mar the crop. leaves. The ear should be borne stances. at a convenient height for husking. The shank should be of medium length and strength, and the ear should hang freely and firmly. The ears selected should be well matured, strong and well developed, with straight rows of regular sized kernels. The kernels should be rather deeply dented. The smoother kernels are generally shallower and will not produce so well. The seed ears should always be a little rougher than the average crop, otherwise the crop will become smoother each year and and the kernels shallower.

As soon as the corn is picked it must be put in a dry, well ventilated place and arranged in such a way that each ear may have a free circulation of air around it. When the amount of corn is not large, the old practice of hanging it by the husks is a good one. With large amounts, specially arranged racks are most convenient, but the rows of ears must be separated by slats and there should always be plenty space in the place of storage, otherwise it will be practically impossible to keep the air dry. Unless one has had experience in the use of artificial heat, natural drying, in an open building, will usually be found best. Great care must be taken during the process of drying, as there is always danger of overheating and moulding. the corn is well matured, as it should be, and is picked early, there need be no difficulty in being rapidly lilled with some of getting it dry before freezing the best horses in this part of the weather.

Every bour spent in selecting seed corn this fall will be worth dollars next year. Take a basket secretary, B. W. Parks. and go into the corn field yourself, or if you are not in working condition, teach the boys what is wanted and send them. Set a certain day for the work and see that it is done.-A. T. The Farmer and His Boy.

Much has been written and said about the farmer boy leaving home Insurance Tax Paid to Auditors because he dislikes the drudgery and lonesomeness of rural life. We hope that every farmer who Oftimes he makes a decided failure in other spheres, whereas he might have been a decided success had he stuck to the farm. It is true, though, that many farmer boys are actually driven from home by their fathers, who do nothing to make farm life attractive or to keep the boys interested. Should Have Gone to Treasurs.

The announcement that evidence had been produced before the grand jury that investigated the Sherrick case, to show that despite a cusrom of fifteen years to the contrary, the law really provides that the taxes paid by the foreign insurance companies doing busithe state treasurer and not to the auditor, came as a surprise, even to those in the auditor's office. Investigation shows that the law passed in 1891 specifically provides that all these taxes shall be paid into the state treasury, the amount so to be paid to be determined by the auditor's office and reported to the companies.

This law had never been followed, as far as can be ascertained, but Warren Bigler, the present auditor, says that it will be followed in the future. "You may ascertain my course with reference to this from the law," said Anditor Bigpayment shall be made to the treasurer, it will be paid to him."

The foreign insurance money which was paid to Sherrick as anditor was the bulk of the money that has passed through his hands since he went into office and he followed the custom of his prodecessors in accepting it. Out of a total amount of about $1,030,000 of the week. that he handled during his incumbas passed through the hands of the auditors of the state in this

With this money paid to the state treasurer, very little money, the hands of the auditor in the future. This money that legally comes into the hands of the auditor is in the form of fees paid for examinations, etc., and does not amount to any considerable sum

Although there seems to be no mestion that Sherrick is responsble for this money paid as taxes from the insurance companies, inasmach as he received it, yet there does seem to be a question as to whether the bonding company would be legally responsible for such meney that Sherrick received and misapplied.

Whisky Blamed for Starting Trouble, Which Results in Both Combatants Being Seriously Wounded - Old Friends in Bad Mix-Up.

Chicago, Ill., dispatch: Firing at each other from behind barricades of express packages, two men fought a desperate revolver duel in the gloom of an express car running across country Wednesday morning. Each received three dangerous wounds as a result of the unique combal, and both now lie in hospitals at Decatur, Ill., their lives in the balance.

The fight, which men who have grown gray in the express service declare to be without a precedent, took place upon a Wabash train running from Chicago to St. Louis, John T. Ryan, a messenger in the employ of the Pacific Express company, and Edward Greene, an ex-messenger, were the combatants. The explanations of the affair given by them differ. Ryan asserting that Greene concealed himsolf in the car with the intention of robbing it, and Greene claiming he boarded it, with Ryan's permission, at Forty-seventh street to ride to Pittsfield, Ill., where his father lives, and that a foolish quarrel, to which liquor contributed arose between himself and the messenger.

Robbery Story Is Scouted.

When employed by the express company Greene was trusted. His father is agent at Pitrafield, and bls brother, Arthur Greene, works with the Wabash railroad in Chicago. The express and railroad companies are, therefore, not inclined to credit the robbery motive.

The battle lasted for twenty miles. It began at Bement, Ill., where the two men came to blows, clinched and fell to the floor of the car. As they arose each drew a revolver and commenced to fire. Ryan, the messenger, ran to the rear of the car and sheltered himself behind a pile of packages. Greene ran forward and did the same. Then they emptied their revolvers at each other several times, each shooting to kill, but failing because of the barricades. Ryan constantly manouvered to get his rifle, which was in a rack at the side of the car. Near Decatur he made a rush. Greene came out to meet him, and each fired six shots at his op-

Both Men Are Wounded.

Ryan sank to the floor unconscious, wounded in the left ear, the left jaw and the left shoulder. Greene suffered even more seriously, bullets, lodging in his breast, his lungs and the fleshy part of his abdomen. But he kept his feet, and as the train slowed down at Decatur opened the door of the car and imped out, Ryan was discovered stretched out on the blood-spattered floor, within a few minutes. One hour later Greene was found lying unconscious by the side of the track.

Greene was employed by the Paeific Express company for thirteen years before he took his present position with F. S. Betz & Co. of Hammond, Ind. He is unmarried, 35 years old, and lives at 5101 State street. He is an old friend of Ryan, who trained him in the messenger service. Ryan is 50 years old, married, and has four children. He lives at 3620 Sixtyfourth place.

Ishpeming, Mich., dispatch: The man suspected of having wrecked tombatones in a number of cemeteries in Wisconsin and northern Michigan in the past two weeks was captured Thursday morning by Marshal John Lehman and Deputy Marshal Mann Trevarrow in the act of breaking one stone after he had damaged a couple of others in the Ishpeming cometery. He is a Hungarlan, 46 years old, and answers the description of the man suspected of having committed similar depredations in Escanaba and Gladstone.

The man is shabbily dressed, apparently half starved and carried a turnip wrapped in a bandana handkerchief, a part of a Catholic prayer book and other devotional emblems, also a package of clothing in another baudana. When asked why he committed the deed he simply replied in poor English that he did it for the good of God. The man gives evidence of slight mental derangement. Is Sure to Lead to Money Stringency.

DOUBT STORY BY MESSENGER NATIONAL BANK CIRCULATION

Federal Official Advocates Additional Issue When Movement of Crops or Other Causes Demand Increased Volume of Money.

Cleveland, O., dispatch: In an address before the convention of the Chio Barkers' association Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, made the assertion that the nonelasticity of the American currency system was a grave menace. He said the country narrowly missed a panic from this cause in 1902 and that eventually it would bring about a disaster which would lead the people to act.

As a solution Secretary Shaw pro posed that the national banks be authorized to float additional eleculation when the movement of crops or other causes demanded a larger volume of money, such circulation to be guaranteed by the government and to be called in just as soon as the crisis had "The fact, and I think it is a fact, that the United States has the best currency system in the world," said Secretary Shaw, "does not imply that the currency system of the United Stales is perfect or that it can not be improved. It is as safe as any system in the world because it is established on the only safe basis known to man -the gold standard. It is the most convenient system in the world because it is constructed on the decimal or metric system. It is not necessary to carry a lightning calculator in order to make change.

Where the System Falls.

"The system is not perfect, largely because it is nonelastic. It falls to respond in volume to the changing needs of seasons and localities. Attention has been called to this many times and by many people. That there will be no further currency legislation until we shall have experienced a panic occasioned by this want of elasticity I am convinced.

"We came near such a panic Sept 20, 1902, than most people appreciate. The fact that we then escaped does not raise a presumption that we will always escape it.

"Annually we have an excess of money during the spring and summer months. Annually we pass through a period of anxlety as we approach the period of crop-moving, for annually the volume of money is relatively insufficient to meet this sudden increase of business.

"We do not need and must not have inflation. The average amount of money is, in my judgment, abundant. The difficulty lies in the fact that the volume remains stationary.

"Now, what shall be the remedy? Shall it be asset currency? In the popular acceptation of that term I answer no! Asset currency, as commonly understood; would mean inflation. and that we must not have. Shall it be emergency currency? In the popular acceptation of the term I answer

Favors Bank Circulation.

"Among the many remedles suggested none appealed to me as strongly as the authorization of an additional bank circulation. This method involves the right of national banks to increase their circulation in an amount perhaps equal to 50 per cent of their outstanding volume of government bond secured circulation, on which the bank should pay a tax of 5 or 6 per cent during the time it is maintained. and the government, in consideration of this tax should guarantee its redemption.

"You may call this, if you please, an emergency provision. So it is, but it injects into our circulation no new form of money as an element of alarm. By eliminating the one statement on the present bank note, "This note is secured by bonds of the Unitcd States,' the additional currency could be made identical with that based on government bonds. The comptroller of the currency and the bank issuing the currency would alone know of its existence.

"It would not advertise its existence or our extremity, and I can searcely conceive of conditions under which it would remain out sixty days."

New Officers Are Elected.

Harvey D. Goulder of Cleveland delivered an address on foreign commerce. Others who spoke were Jaines R. Branch of New York, George Guckenburger of Cincinnati, R. W. Firstone of Lisbon, Ohio, and W. A. Graham of Sidney, Ohio.

The convention elected the following officers: President-T. C. Stevens, Tolcdo.

Vice president-Thomas H. Wilson, Cleveland. Treasurer-H. C. Herbig, Coshoc-

Secretary-S. B. Rankin, South Charleston. Assistant secretary-S. C. Arbuckle, South Charleston.

The executive council will later elect a new chairman to succeed A. B. Vooheis of Cincinnati, who has resigned. The convention voted not to recommend for passage by the next legislature a new banking law providing for the inspection of all banks, both state and private.

THE CULVER CITIZEN. REVOLVER DUEL SECRETARY SHAW SENATOR MORGAN IN EXPRESS CAR PREDICTS PANIC ON CANAL PLANS

Shot at Trip of Advisory Board.

GROWS SARCASTIC IN ANSWER

Declares it is impossible for a Layman to Form Correct Ideas of the Best Way to Build Locks to Control the Waters.

Birmingham, Ala., dispatch: Senator Morgan has harled a thunderbolt at President Shonts of the Panma canal commission in a letter declining an invitation to accompany the expert engineers to the canal zone. The Sonator declares it as his belief that no good can be accomplished by the trip, and "distrusts its advantage to Congress." His letter to Mr. Shonts is as follows:

"Dear Sir: In your telegram of the 22d inst. you speak of a large party who are to sail with the commission and the advisory board to Colon, and are to have comfortable facilities for making tours of inspection and examination of the canal.

"In the matter of sightseeing such facilities will afford much pleasure, which I regret I am not prepared to enjoy; but I do not suppose that such a surface inspection of the appearance and conditions in Panama would give me any data from which I could form any judgment as to the practicability of a lock canal or a sea level canal, or the preference due to either plan, or as to the cost or the time required for the completion of the canal on either plan.

Fires Sarcasm at Board.

"I could not wisely, intelligently, or justly give an opinion to any commissioner or to any member of the advisory board as to the possibility of a dam at Bohio, 168 feet below the level of the sea, that would supply a canal at 90 feet above sea level, or as to a dam at or below Gatun that would supply a canal at thirty feet above the sea level, or as to a dam at Gamboa that would control the waters of the Chagres river, or to a possible tunnel to either ocean to carry off those flood waters.

"I could not inform the able, courageous and distinguished chief of the hygienic service in the canal zone whether, if we should flood all the breeding places of the stegomyla fasciata with great lakes, we would not increase them a thousand-fold along the margins of the great bodies of fresh water in the tropical undergrowth that would spring up around them in a few hours. Indeed, there is no question among the many vital ones that concern this great inquiry upon which any rational mind could give any reliable information or form any correct judgment from what one could see or hear in the tours along he canal that this party of visitors will have the opportunity to make. Distruste Expert's Mission.

"I must say that I distrust the expected advantages to congress or to the country of such an excursion, or the value of any opinions that may be formed on great engineering problems by a body of gentlemen who are nonprofessional and must form their conclusions from surface appearances. Neither of these important committess can derive any legitimate conclusions upon vital facts that must control that vast subject from the onlyions of those who are mere guests of an excursion party, and they will be men of extraordinary self-poise if they are not influenced by what may be a prevailing sentiment among them.

"Since the ratification of the Hay-Varilla treaty, which I opposed, I have done all that I could and much more than I thought could ever be of advantage to the country to sustain the government in its purpose to construct a canal at Panama. Yet I have not believed that success could crown their efforts. You may find the key to unlock the barriers that nature has interposed at Panama. If you should be so fortunate I will appland your genius and courage. I will vote to provide you with every reasonable authority and power to accomplish your task and to meet your tremendous responsibility.

"In the effort to answer your friendly invitation with perfect frankness, if I have sald anything that tars upon your sensibilities I have not so intended it, and would regret it. I beg to assure you of my sincere respect and to say that I will rejoice with you in the successful completion of the great work in your charge."

Streed, the attorney and politician who was found dying from a bullet wound in the head early Tuesday morning, for months before his death was in fear of an assassin was fully established by the developments in the mysterious case which is now generally believed to be murder. A letter was found written by Mr. Streed to his wife Sopt, 2 of this year, in which he related incidents which he considered as warnings against bim.

In this same letter, which had not been mailed to his wife, but remained in his desk, he spoke of sometimes being fearful that he might be killed. It is supposed that he thought best not to alarm his wife by such a leter and after writing it laid it away.

His fears that his life was in danger were again given expression this month, this time verbally. While visiting his cousin, J. E. Peterson of Orlon, two weeks ago he spoke of threats that had been made against him by a young man whose name he did not mention.

Victim Was Not Worried. Mr. Peterson was on the stand at the inquest and said that in telling of the matter Mr. Street did not seem to be at all worried, but took the situation rather lightly.

An autopsy was held by Dr. J. E. Westerland and Dr. J. A. Kirkland, who found the bullet had penetrated the brain from a point an inch back of the right car to the left temple, lodging against the inner wall of the skull. The doctors said a man wounded in this manner might live a number of hours, but that the chances were he would die in a short time.

It was proved by Frank Streed, brother of the dead man, that the attorney had owned two revolvers, and one of these was found in the room, The revolver which was found under the dying man's body when it was discovered at the door of the outhouse back of the postoffice building did not belong to Mr. Streed, from all the evidence now at hand. It has a barrol half an inch longer than that of the revolver in the house, and the two weapons owned by Mr. Streed were alike. It also developed that Streed probably was carried to the building after being shot in the apartments.

The officers are making a determined effort to discover where the revolver found under the body came rom, believing it will bring some light upon the mystery. Mrs. Streed, wife of the lawyer, who had been visiting in Pennsylvania, arrived Wednesday evening, being met at the station by the members of the Eastern Star lodge, of which she is worthy matron. She is prostrated by the death of her husband and says she does not see how he could have committed suicide.

She turns from that theory, but has not as yet given to anyone any reason why her husband was murdored, or made any statement regarding the fears entertained by her husband as to his personal safety. She and Mr. Streed appeared to be most happily married.

State's Attorney in Doubt. State's Attorney Sturtz, after he had finished the examination of witnesses before the jury, said he was not ready to say whether he believes it a case of murder or suicide. The officer admitted there are facts pointing to both theories, and added that he would explore the matter to the ties adhering to the coalition. This fullest exicut, possibly before the reassembling of the coroner's jury.

The people holding to the murder theory declare the absence of Mr. Streed's pocketbook, in which he carried considerable money, and his papers, when the clothes were examined, is one of the facts upon which they base their belief. The gold watch was found, however, in the ves! pocket.

Mr. Streed, in the course of his long and successful practice of law, had appeared against many men facing criminal charges, and may have brought enmity against himself. He also made enomies by his fearlessness in politics. It is declared by many that he was the victim of some political foe.

RESENTS COMPLAINT BY PUBLIC

Rallroad Attorney Says Amount of Profits is Company's Concern.

Springfield, Ill., dispatch: General Counsel William E. Brown of the Chicago & Alton road has filed a reply brief in the shippers' case before the railroad and warehouse commission, in which he denies that the public is in any way interested in either the capitalization or the profits of the railroads so far as the present case is concerned. He denies that the roads are overcapitalized, as charged in the brief of former Attorney General Hamlin, but says that if it were true the argument would have no place in the case. Mr. Brown admits that the publie may complain where there is discrimination, but denies that any such discrimination has been shown.

MANY PERSONS BADLY BRUISED

Fierce Flashes of Lightning Add Picturesqueness to Turbulent Scene, While Mob Attacks Office of Opposition Newspaper.

Budapest cablegram: Between forty and fifty persons were injured in riots here Wednesday evening when Socialits and adherents of the condition parties, including students, clashed, and for two hours there were scenes of tremendous excitement. The students and other supporters of the coalition had arranged for a glgantic torchlight procession, but the Socialists issued inflammatory proclamations calling on all Socialists and others opposed to the coalition to fight for their rights, which they said the coalition was trying to sidetrack. Then it was decided to postpone the torchlight procession.

At 8 o'clock 1,500 Socialists gathared outside the Independence club and announced their intention of entering and tearing down the council room. The rioting followed

Police Beat Back Mob.

The mob made an effort to enter, but was opposed vigorously by the police. A fight ensued and amid the wildest clamor a number of persons were stabbed. But the Socialists were finally scattered.

Fifteen minutes later, however, they gathered again. By this time adherents of the coalition in large numbers came upon the scene, and their appearance resulted in a free fight between the two factions. A dense mass of humanity surged in every direction, shouting and singing the Marsellaise and other songs. Knives, sticks and atones were used vigorously, Meanwhile a thunder storm came up and vivid lightning lit up the square, while the thunder added a note of terror. Rain fell in torrents, and the combatants were finally dispersed by the police.

Eight of the wounded were injured seriously. There were no deaths.

Scattered fights continued in different quarters and crowds of the Socialists marched to a building in which is published a newspaper that supports the coalition. They broke the windows and attempted to gain entrance. The mob was held back by the police, while the printers and editors threw furniture from the windows on the heads of the crowd. Here, too, a number of persons received wounds. Finally quiet was restored.

It was very still; hardly a leaf stlered; the air was hot and heavy. The man at the open gate paused before entering and drew the gate shut. The woman turned at the sound and faced the man. A look of swift recoznition flashed between them, but for some reason it was not openly cusued a strained silence, broken at last by the woman's voice, soft, low hear and not heed,

HOLD VAST UNCLAIMED WEALTH Sums Held by English Banks Run

into the Millions. How many millions of pounds worth of property lies unclaimed to-day in the form of shares, dividends, deposits of money, plate and jewels in the hands of bankers, companies, solicitors, auctioneers and others? This is the fascinating question raised yesterday by the writers of a letter, who urge the Chancellor of the Exchequer to lay hands upon the spoil and devote it to the increase of national revenues. Unclaimed wealth in the hands of the crown and funds in chancery amount to more than £50,000,000. Is It possible that the funds in private hands amount to an equally large sum?

Some of the examples of hidden wealth given by the writers of the letter suggest that the amount must at any rate be a large one. It is not, apparently, the custom of companies to search very far for the owners of unclaimed dividends. Occasionally the chairman of a company refers to unclaimed amounts. In the case of a building society the chairman announced at the annual meeting that certain unclaimed money had been utilized to form a reserve fund. "In fifty-five years," explained the secretary of this society yesterday, we have accumulated £5,000 of unclaimed deposits. At any time we are liable to be asked to refund this and should do so with interest."-London Daily Mall.

PARIS A WELL LIGHTED CITY.

Strange Contrast With Conditions In Most American Cities.

Paris offers a strange contrast to London (and to most American cities) in the mailor of street lighting. London is woefully somber at night, except at certain points where concert halls and "gin mills" are numerous, whereas Paris is brilliantly lighted everywhere. Nothing so astonishes the American visitor as the long lines of brilliant gas lamps (incandesant burners, all of which function perfectly) reaching down each and every street to sparkling perspectives of diamond strings. Do you feel disposed to shrug your shoulders and cry out that it is garish and unrestful? Please don't. It is a grand success and a joy forever. If you doubt it, come over here and see for yourselves. I have carefully observed the placement of lampposts and find that in some places there is one every twenty feet; in less favored localities, one every forty or fifty feet, while the little streets have them at intervals of about 200 feet. In the case of the poor little streets the lighting is, at the worst, admirable not to say magnificent. What does all this cost? It costs too much, from our enlightened (or unlighted) point of view. We are content to grope about in the dark streets. The Parisian abhors darkness (as he should) and is willing to pay for light, even though he may pay pretty dearly for

The Late Mr. Fessenden.

Out in one of the north shore sulurbs there is a negro church which besides doing good work furnishes no end of amusement for a large number of the "white folks" because of some of the eccentricities of a few of its members. One of the latest of these is in the form of a church notice which the colored brothren inserted in a local paper not long ago.

A certain Rev. Mr. Fessonden had been dropped by his flock when they thought they had found a better man. One Sunday the better man was unable to preach, so Rev. Mr. Fessenden, who still resided in the town, was called upon to fill the pulpit for the time.

One of the deacons, wishing to make the change known to the congregation, inserted an advertisement in the local paper, announcing that "owing to Brother Jones' poor health, the pulplt will be filled to-morrow by the fate Mr. Fessenden,"-Chicago Rec ord-Herald.

WHY HOGS ROOT.

A writer on swine says: It is the hog's nature to root, and nature has provided them with not only the propensity, but the implements to indulge it. As the wants of the animal are supplied without rooting, the rooting portion of the hog becomes less suitable to the purpose, as all the improved breeds are shortening up in the nose and snow.

Hogs root for worms and tubers or grass roots. These not only aid as a ration of maintenance, but as a regulator and conditioner of the system. The desire to root at the present time is a symptom usually that the stomach demands something that it is not receiving.

Hogs that are fed on dry corn or grain feed endeavor to secure that which will relieve it. To prevent this condition, we would feed plenty of charcoal or wood ashes, also a little oil meal, to get them late proper con-

An animal that forms the habit of rooting will root regardless of demands. It is as hard to break them of the habit as it is the chewing of tobacco in the human race, and the only preventive is some system of ringing to prevent the use of the snout,

A whole lot of us do not carry out our plans, and largely the fault is wholly our own. We know of forty or fifty farmers who this year fully expected to sow a few rods of alfalfa, but they permitted some very trifling matter to keep them from carrying out their plans. Then we know of a still larger number who were determined to select, ary and store a good lot of their best cars of corn, for seed. Most of these farmers selected from the crib and have a poor or uneven stand, and will not have by a few bushels per acre the average yield they might have produced. Let's not permit these small things to turn us aside from our good intentions.

CLOVER IN FALLING ORCHARDS.

Western prairie lands are generally sufficiently fertile for an orchard growth and need no enriching until the trees bogin to show signs of weak ness in vigor from crop bearing, and, even then, may be invigorated by use of crops of red clover grown among the trees, allowing the crop to fall and decay upon the ground each year. By this treatment a large amount of decaying vegetable matter will accumulate upon the land, rich in plant food, and forming a moist protection from hot summer sun and deep freezing during winter, a condition conducive to health and vigor in trees. All lands lacking in humus can have this element restored to a great extent by such treatment, and orchards which have been treated thus with red clover maintain greater longevity, fruitfulness and greater excellence in fruit produce; besides, such treatment dispenses with the costly necessity of using special fertilizers. As to the indication when a bearing orchard needs stimulating, the eminent pomologist, Dr. Warder, once said: "When the growth of the terminal branches fail to make an annual extension of at least one foot in length, the trees should be stimulated by manuring the land and giving it thorough cultivation."

The scientific fruitman, groping along the path of science, is doing grander work than Solomon eyer did. He is adding beauty to the lily, sweetness to the violet, size to the strawberry, and flavor to the apple.

THE FAMEUSE APPLE.

We are asked by a correspondent if the Fameuse or Snow apple is a seedling, and if so to give its history or origin. I wish I were able to give our correspondent the history of this famous family of apples, but am not. Will say that the bistory of the apple in this country dates back to the 16th contury. It was planted very largely in the Eastern states, especially New England, and our earliest horticulturists have written many descriptions of it. But in Canada its history antidates this time, and was as familiar to the horticulturist of that country as were the Indian wars. No doubt it was an apple introduced in the early time by the French Jesuits. Since its Introduction it has been carried all over the Western hemisphere. In every locality we will have distinct types of the Fameuse apple, oftentimes differing in form and texture of apple. But they all show strong markings of the Famouse. There is no doubt that in the early days that it reproduced it self nearly in seed and in this way we can account for the many types of this variety. We have several wellknown apples that are supposed to he seedlings of this variety, such as the McIntosh, Shlawassee, Scarlet, La Victorie, etc.

Trees, flowers and shrubbery add much to the value of the house, but it is better not to set out plants for ornamentation if they are not to be cared for, as a poglected farm is a vory unsightly spectacle. A farm surrounded with vines and flowers will sell, when a better farm, but not so ornamental, will not find a purchaser. Paint and whitewash also add largely to the attractiveness of a farm.

REASONS FOR PRUNING TREES.

If one were asked for specific directions as to how to prune a fruit tree it would be unsafe for him to make an answer without first having seen the tree. No dogmatic rules can be given, though a generalization might be ventured. Each tree requires different trealment. Each tree presents a new set of problems to be solved by the proner. Different reasons exist as to why a certain tree should receive pecallar treatment or pruning different from that given another of the same age, variety and growth. The chief reasons for pruning are as follows: First-To modify the vigor of the plant. Second-To produce a larger and better fruit. Third-To keep the tree within managoable shape and limits. Fourth-To change the habit of the iree from fruit to wood production, or vice versa. Fifth To remove surplus or lajured parts.

Sixth-To facilitate tillage. Seventh-To train plants to some desired form.

The trained horticulturist no more thinks of neglecting pruning than omitting spraying. He places a high estimate on these operations, for he knows what they mean to him in dollars and cents and in the longerity of his orchard's usefulness.

Many a man loss been hampered for life by buying too large a farm at the start, and still a greater number have condemned themselves to bondage for he remainder of their natural lives by buying more land when the farm upon which they started upon is not quite paid for. Probably the majority of the farms in this country are much only take life more easily, but would also make more money if they would woodland some of the acres that have rule, large crops on small areas pay better than small, or even moderate yields per acre in large fields.

THE TILING OF LAND.

Since the days of Roman agriculture, even before the dawn of the Christian era, the drainage of land by means of removing water through closed instead of open ditches has reshould be taken not to plant a crop | ceived attention from writers on agricultural topics throughout all the conturies during that period. On this subject, Cate, in the second century before the Christian era, wrote:

"In the winter it is necessary that the water be let off from the fields. On a doclivity it is necessary to have many drains. When the first of the autumn is rainy, there is the greatest danger from water; when it begins to rain, the whole of the servants ought to go out with sarcles and other iron tools, open the drains, tern the water into its channels and take care of the corn fields, that it flow from them. Wherever the water stagnates amongst the growing corn, or in other parts of the corn fields, or in the ditches, or where there is anything that obstructs its passage, that should be removed, the ditches opened and the water let away." At the time in which this writer lived covered drains were merely trenches, these being filled with stones or gravel, or in some cases a rope of twigs tied together and fitted in the bottom, after which the drains were filled with earth. Although little progress was made in the nei of drainage until about two conturies ago, yet since that time great advancement has been made, this advancement having to do principally with materials used in conducting water from a soil. Not only has there been an evolution in the shape of the conduit from the old horseshoe shape of tile to the circular form, but radical changes have been made in the direction of improving the character of the material used. At present there is but little tile on the market that has not been burned so hard as to practically last forever, or at least for several generations. This being true, it is singular that there is so much reluctance on the part of men to make the much-needed improvement of tiling out at least part of their land. The heavy loss that has been sustained by farmers of the corn belt during the last two years on account of excessive moisture is stimulating men to action on the matter of tile draining.

SORGHUM-SYRUP MAKING ON THE FARM.

Not longer ago than the early sixties the growing of sorghum was very common on the farms of Illinois, lowaand other Western states. A large portion of the product was made intosyrup upon the farm where grown or at emall neighborhood mills. In acctions where large quantities were grown within a radius of five or ten miles of a good-sized town larger mills run by water or steam power were established and the syrup made by the hundreds or thousands of barrels. Now, aside from a few isolated localities in Illinois, Wisconsin and a few other states, there is but little sorghum grown outside of Kausas and even there growers are getting disheartened.

With the ever-increasing demand for sweets this state of affairs ought not to exist, for there is no healthfor sweet than sorghum syrup and with proper handling the growing of the cane for its production may be made as profitable as any ordinary staple farm crop; its growing also adds to diversified farming another important factor, and to the farmer's source of income a mine susceptible of large development.

There is no denying the fact that farm butter can be most excellent in quality. Generally it is very poor inquality. Farm butler is as poor as it is, because the makers are following what is called "the rule of the thumb. That is, everything is guesswork,

If sown alone, 30 to 40 pounds per acreis none too much; if with some other crop, such as wheat or rye, less seed will do. Most farmers do not sow enough seed nor enough varieties of too large and their owners would not grasses for the best results. We are drawing no morals in this article, yet one is forced at least to think, and think profoundly, when he learns that there are many very wealthy men, including forty-nine millionaires in Russia, and not one in Japan save the mikado himself. The Face That Looked Into Joan's.

The chamber to which the Duchess Joan was conducted by her hostess had evidently been carefully prepared for her reception. It was a large, low room with a vaulted roof of earyen wood. The work was of great merit and evidently old. A table with a little prie-Dieu stood in the corner, screened by a curtain which ran on a brazen rod. A Roman Breviary lay on a volvet covered table before the erucifix. Joan lifted it up and her eyes fell on the words: "By a woman he overcame. By a woman he was overcome. A woman was once his weapon. A woman is now become the instrument of his defent. He findeth that the weak vessel cannot be broken."

"Nor shall it!" said Joan, looking at the cross before her, "by the strength of Mary the Mother, the weak vessel shall not be broken!"

As she stooped to blow out the last candle, a motto on the stem caught her eye. Joan took the candle out of its nocket and read the inscription word by word -

"Da pacem, Domine, in dichus nostris."

It was her own seroll, the motto of the reigning dukes of Hohenstoin-a sirange one, doubtless, to be that of a fighting race, but, nevertheless, her father's and her own.

What did her father's motto, the device of her house, upon this Baltic island, for from the highlands of Kernsherg? Had these wastes once belonged to men of her race? And this woman, who so regally played the mistress of this strange hermitage, who was she?

And as Joan of Hobenstein blew out the candle she mused in her heart concerning those things.

The Duchess Joan slept soundly, her dark, boyish head pillowed on the full rounded curves of an arm thrown behind her. On the little velvetcovered table beside the bed were her belt and its dependent sword, a faithful companion in its sheath of plain black leather. Under her pillow, and within instant reach of her right hand, was her father's dagger.

in their chamber in the wing which looks toward the north the three captains lay wrapped in their mantles. Jorian and Boris answering each other nasally, in alternate trampet blasts, like Alp calling to Alp. Werner you Orseln alone could not sleep, and after he had sworn and kleked his neisy companions in the ribs till he was weary of the task, he rose and went to the window to east open the tattice. The air within felt thick and hol. As Werner set his face to the opening quick flashes of summer lightning flamed alternately white and lilac across the horizon, and he felt the spit of hallstones in his face, driving level like so many musket balls when the infantry fires by platoons. . .

Above, in the vaulted chamber, Joan turned over on her bed, murmuring uneasily in her sleep. A white face, which for a quarter of an hour had been bent down to her dark head as it lay on the pillow, was suddenly retracted into the darkness at the girl's slight movement.

Again, apparently reassured, the shadowy visage approached as the young duchess lay wilhout further motion. Suddenly, and for no apparent reason, Joan's eyes opened, and she found herself looking with bewilderment into a face that bent flown upon her, a white face which somelow seemed to hang suspended

In a moment Joan's right hand had grasped the dagger under her pillow. Her left shooting upward, closed on the arm which held the threatening steel. Almost without rising from her hed she projected herself upon her enemy, and she felt her fingers sink deep in the soft curves of a woman's

Then a shrick, long and terrible, tohuman and threatening, rang through the house. As Joan overbore the Wordless Man stand on the threshold, a candle in one hand and a naked sword in the other.

The terrible cry which had rung in her ears had been his. At sight of him Joan unclasped her fingers from the throat of the woman who had been her hostess and rose slowly to her feet. The old man rushed forward and knell heside the prostrate body of his mistress.

At the same moment there came the sound of quick footsteps running up the stairway. The door flew open and Werner von Orseln burst in, also sword in hand.

"What is the meaning of this." he shouted. "Who has dared to harm my lady?"

"Go down and bring a cop of wine!" commanded Joan as soon as he appeared. And Werner von Orseln departed without a word to do her bid-

Meanwhile the Wordless Man had raised his mistress up from the ground. "Carry your mistress to that couch!" said the young duchess, pointing to the tumbled bed from which a few minutes before she had so hastly launched herself.

Whilst he was thus ergaged Werner came in quickly with a silver cup in his hand.

Joan took it instantly and going forward she put it to the lips of the woman on the bed

Putting out her hands the woman took the cup and drank it slowly. pausing between the draughts to draw long breaths.

The color came slowly back to the woman's pale faco, and, after a little, she raised herself on the pillows. Joan stood motionless and uncompromising by the great Iron dogs of the

She looked at Von Orseln as she

"I have no secrets in my life," said Joan, "there is nothing that I would hide from him. Save one thing!" She added the last words in her heart.

There was an interval of slience in the room, filled up by the hourse. persistent booming of the storm without and the shuddering shocks of the wind on the localy house. Then the woman spoke again in a low, distinct

"It is a lie most foul," she cried, "my father lived unwed for many years - nay, ever since my mother's death, who died in giving me life, he never so much as looked on woman. It is a thing well known in the Duchy!"

The woman did not answer directly. "Max Ulrich, bring the silver casket," she said, taking from her neck a little silver key.

The Wordless Man, seeing her action, came forward and took the key. He went out of the room, and after an interval which seemed interminable he returned with a peculiarly shaped casket. The woman touched a spring with well practiced hand, and a roll of parchment fell upon the bed. With a strange smile she gave it to Joan, beckening her with an apward and to approach.

Joan took the crackling parchment. It had three soals attached to it and the first part was in her father's hand-

"I declare by these presents that I toms of Hobenstein and the laws of the empire, Theresa von Lyonr, daughter of the Count von Lynar of Jutland. To which we subscribe our names as conjointly agreeing thereto in the presence of His High Redinence the Cardinal Adrian, Arch- of watching, a favorable change was bishop of Cologue and Elector of the Holy Roman Empire."

After her first shock of surprise was over Joan noted carefully the date. It was one year after her own birth, and therefore the like period after the death of her mother, the openly acknowldged Duchess of Hohenstein. Joan folded this parchment and banded it back. Then she stood silent waiting for an explanation.

But I, being true to my oath and promise, left my brother and abode here alone with my hushand when he could escape from his dukedom, living like a simple squire and his dame. Then in an evil day I sent my son to my brother to train as his own son in arms and the arts of war. But he, being at enmity with my husband, made ready to carry the lad before the Diet of the Empire, that he might be declared heir to his father. Then in his anger, Henry the Lion rose and swept Castle Lynar with fire and sword, leaving none alive but this boy only, whom he meant to take home and train with his coptains. But on the way home he rocled in the saddle and passed ere he could speak a word, even the name of those he loved. So the boy remained a captive at Kernsberg, called by my brother's name, and knowing even to this day nothing of his father.' Theresa von Lynar sat up and for

A House of Many Tongues. Probably this is the most polyglot assemblage that ever filled a New England hotel since the Pilgrims made that stern and rock-bound landing of theirs. The cavoys and their staffs and the correspondents foot up a total of some ten nationalities, but that isn't all by a long sight. The three hotel cooks are Italians, the steward is a Frenchman. The head porter is a German, his first deputy a negro, and one of his lesser scene shifters, who-juggles trunks, a Swede. The male waiters are mostly Frenchmen and Swiss, with one Englishman assigned to the palm garden. The dining room girls are all either school teachers or college students. Two are Wellesley undergraduates, four are from Smith, and three from Vassar. The rest are scattering. Every bell hop is a negro, and Pokotiloff has a Chinese man servant. ### Cured Her Rheumatism.

Deep Valley, Pa., Oct. 2d .- (Special.)-There is deep interest in Green county over the cure of the little daughter of I. N. Whipkey of Rheumatism. She was a great sufferer for five or six years and nothing seemed to do her any good till she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. She began to improve almost at once and now she is cured and can run and play as other children do. Mr. Whipkey says:

"I am indeed thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for my a cripple perhaps for life."

Dodd's Kldney Pills have proved that Rhenmatism is one of the results of diseased Kidneys. Rheumatism Is Uric Acid in the blood and consequently no Rheumalism. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the Kidneys right.

A Kissing Party.

One doesn't kiss at a kissing party. You just describe kisses, according to your experience and imagination. You write ten adjectives descriptive of a kiss as it seems to you. You also write a 100-word essay about the delirious practice and you still further exhaust your imagination-or relieve your pent-up feelings, as the case may be-by writing a little verselet on kissing.

The scientists say that kissing is dangerous. But nobody can claim there is any danger from microbes in mercly dwelling on the custom in this light, airy and wholly impersonal way. Bosides, it's lots of fun, when all the osculatory efforts are read aloud to a mutually appreciative company and prizes are given for the most realistic effusions.

New York dispatch: The National City bank was recently victimized by a clover forger, the details of whose scheme has just come out. The forger presented a bogus check bearing the name of a well-known stock exchange firm and received in return securities valued at about $360,000.

Pearl & Co., stockbrokers at 27 Williams street, recently negotiated a oneday loan for $300,000 with this institution. On Wednesday a check for the amount of the loan, plus $37.50 for the one day's interest, was presented at the bank by a stranger, who received the secrities deposited by Penrl & Co. for their loan.

"The worst storm of years obtained here Sept. 26, passing during the night. Considerable damage was done by the unroofing of buildings. The post at Malahi is reported totally destroyed. Further reports when facts are known."

The following cablegram also has been received at the navy department from Admiral Reiter, commanding the Asialic ficet:

"The Leyte, which was out of commission, was sunk in the harbor and lost in the hurricane of Sopt. 26."

The Leyte was a gunboat of 150 tons and 125-horsepower. She was one of the vessels belonging to Spain which were taken possession of by the navy at the close of the war. She was in bad condition and it is said at the navy department that she was practically worthless.

The post at Malahi referred to by Gen. Corbin is thirty-one miles from Manila, in La Guna province. The garrison consisted of four companies, E. P. G and H. Sixteenth lufantry. according to the last reports received at the war department. There is also a military prison at Malaht.

Nature punishes every infraction of her laws, and careless habits oasily lead to the condition described by Mr. Wilhinm Browne, of No. 1019 Lincoln street, St. Joseph, Mo. Mr. Browne is an expert tinuer in the employ of the National Biscoit Co. He gives the following account of a trying experience:

"In the spring of 1902," he says, while I was regularly working at my rade, I grew somewhat careless in my habits of eating and drinking, and finally found that my appetite was fickle, a bad taste lingered in my month, my nerves twitched and were beyond my control, my kidneys were out of order and cold sweats would break out over my body at odd times. Perhaps, while I stood talkof the limbs, and profuse sweating, and a severe chill would seize me. I became alarmed at my condition and, having read an endorsement of Dr. Williams Pink Pills, I got a box and began to use there. They helped me at once. After I had used one box the twitching of the nerves, the trouble with the stomach and the cold sweats stopped and have not reappeared, and my appetite is good. I have told all my friends that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cared me and I recommend them to everybody.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cared Mr. Browne because nothing can strengthen the nerves except good rich red bloodand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They don't act on the bowels. They don't bother with mere symptoms. They drive from the blood the cause of antemia, indigestion, nervons disorders, general weakness and the troubles of growing girls and women.

The pills are guaranteed to be free from opiates or harouful drugs. Sold by all druggists, or by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Making an Audience Laugh.

I am glad there is no recipe for muking an audience laugh. We should thank heaven that it is so. There are enough people trying it now, but think of the hordes that would descoud on the unsuspecting public if some one were able to tell 'how' in a few comprehensible lines. Either one is born with the power to make others laugh or he is not; there is no fearning how unless you have the gift. Some one has said that to make audiences really laugh you must feel the laugh yourself-must be moved by the humor of the lines or of the situation. To my mind that is not so, Try saying the same tine and making the same gesture at exactly the same place every pight for six months and see just how much you are moved by the humor. It is easier, far easier, to be moved by a pathetic situation each night than it is to feel like laughing. An American audience naturally likes the American type of humorwhere little is said and a great deal is left to the imagination. So, to my mind, it is best that the lines you speak shall be really humorous, in that they suggest some exceedingly funny situation or thought. But-and here is the secret-hefore you speak them you must really understand there and know what line of thought causes them to be spoken. If you can do this you can communicate their humor.-David Warfield in Success Magazine.

"I have not had an opportunity to study the Anglo-Japanese treaty closely," said the admiral. "Two points I bave observed seem to me to be important. Great Britain has been able to withdraw all her battleships from the far East and concentrate them in English waters and the Mediterraneau. She also has arranged to establish a strong naval base at Singapore. Look at the map and you will see that henceforth the British and Japanese will be able to maintain a strong patrol of the sea from the Mediterranean to the northeasternmost point of the Pacific. We have our base in the Philippines. Of course, we don't want to fight, and our interests will be respected and we will not have to fight if we are ready."

Lesson of Eastern War.

The admiral was asked if any of the later reports received regarding tho naval operations of the later war had revealed any new lessons.

"As I have repeatedly said, the greatest lesson of the war in the far East is the necessity for bigger ships and big guns. In the battle between the fleets of Rojestvensky and Togo the damage was done by the big guns. The twelve-inch guns of the Japanese ships did most of the damage, in my opinion. One Japanese officer said it was a battle of wireless telegraphy. By means of his seouls Togo knew long before he saw any of the Russians-when, in fact, they were a hundred mlies away-the composition of Rojestvensky's fleet, the formation of the vessels, and the course they were

"If you are going to fight, as the Russians and Japanese did, at a range of three miles, anything under a twelve-inch gun won't be of much use against armor. The eight-inch gun la not effective.

Speed Must Be Considered.

"It is said in England that I have not dwelt upon the importance of speed. Speed goes with bigger ships, With a bigger ship than we now have we can install larger engines. In England, where the navy is so vital, anything that touches the navy is of great interest to them. The new Dreadnaught, of 18,000 tons, which is under construction as a result of the lessons learned during the war, will have a speed of twenty-one knots. We ought to have battleships of twenty-one knots, too. "The splendid way in which the Japanese ships were handled may be attributed in part to the number of flag officers which were attached to the ficet. There were a commander in chief, three vice admirals and ten rear admirals. This shows the importance of high ranking and efficient personnel. We must have more flag officers with our fleet." It is the opinion of some statesmon in Washington that the United States must enter into an alliance or build a larger navy. Naval officers generally prefer the latter as more in keeping with American tradition and cheaper i athe end.
