

Timber Tests in Indiana.

Washington, September, 13.—Good progress has been reported in the work going on at the Forest Service timber testing station at Purdue university, Lafayette, Indiana, to determine the strength of shortleaf pine.

These timber tests which are expected to prove of much benefit to lumbermen and lumber users are practical and will show the exact strength of timber of this species. The object is to substitute accurate data on the qualities of this valuable timber for the unreliable information which largely governs the users of certain kinds of timber at present.

The beams are placed in the testing machine in the same manner as they would be in a bridge, building, or other piece of construction work, and are loaded to the breaking point. Records are accurately kept of the loads they will safely bear, and the strength tables are compiled from these records. These strength tables will be of great value to builders.

The material in these tests was cut in the vicinity of Malvern, Ark., and was contributed by twelve lumber companies of that state, members of the Yellow Pine Manufacturers' association. The shipment was composed of 90 pieces of timber of select and merchantable grades, fifteen feet in length and ranging in section from five by eight inches to eight by sixteen inches.

Upon the arrival of the beams at the testing station a number were laid aside under shelter to air-dry, and will be tested later. The remainder were tested in their green state, and that portion of the work has been completed. Results are now being calculated from the data.

During the past few years the forest service has made tests on both longleaf and loblolly pine, and the results of these additional tests upon shortleaf pine will be valuable for comparison with the strength values of the other two species.

One Business Man's Policy.

In a certain town a much envied advertiser was asked to explain the secret of his popularity and success. Said he: "I figure my advertising is going to cost me so much a year, most of which is accomplished through the columns of our local paper. When I have a good customer and feel that their trade warrants a rebate I ask them if they are taking the town paper; if not, I pay for the paper for one year to be sent to their address. It is the best rebate ever given. It helps to support the paper and gives encouragement to the editor to do his best to bring the town to the front. It helps to make our town the main trading center. Is it not worth the price of the paper to know my customers are reading the advertisements I am paying to have put in that paper? I get a great many to take the paper by praising it to the people who come in to my store. I consider every time I gain a subscriber to our town paper it is another customer to read my advertisements and come to my place of business to trade."

Brewers to Close Saloons and Put No More Where Not Wanted.

The Indianapolis Star of recent date says the Indianapolis breweries, and others which do a large business in the city and state, with the exception of the Capital City Brewing Co., have decided not to open any more saloons in this city, or the state of Indiana for the next two years; also to close saloons which people in the districts where they are located deem objectionable as soon as the licenses expire. It is estimated that 2,400 saloons will be closed in the state, including some seventy in Indianapolis.

"This policy was decided upon at a meeting held in this city yesterday which was attended by Albert Lieber, representing the Indianapolis Brewing company; Crawford Fairbanks, representing the Terra Haute Brewing company, and representatives from the American Home Brewing company, Anheuser-Busch Brewing association, the Schlitz, Pabst, Jung and other companies doing business in Indiana.

First of all, the brewing interests see a saving of $500,000 per year in the elimination of competition such as has marked the business in recent years; again, with fewer saloons and better regulated saloons it is their belief that there will be less agitation for a $1,000 license when the legislature convenes in 1909.

In addition to the agreement not to erect any more saloons within the state during the next two years, the representatives of the breweries agreed that protests against objectionable brewery saloons in places where saloons are already too numerous would not be contested and the licenses allowed to expire, as far as the breweries are concerned.

Souvenir Postal a Good Thing.

The picture post card is both a joy and a time saver to the average traveler and his friends. The fact that it is replacing the long, laborious travel-letter is in its favor; for although a few travel-letters have really been a distinct blessing, it is easy to recall plenty more that were not. To receive a long, closely written epistle crowded with detailed description down to exact statistics is not a boon to the person who is too busy to take a vacation. On the other hand the receipt of a card decorated with a picture of the place of sojourn is a pleasant reminder of the absent friends and gives one quite enough information about the place. It also saves the traveler a vast amount of time and gives quite as much relief and satisfaction as if he had written a volume of his travels.
