In Brief

Positions open on boards, commissions

Park board eliminates park activities director position

Other changes implemented in heated Dec. 20 board meeting

By Jeff Kenney
Citizen editor

What could have been assumed to be a quiet, end-of-year park board meeting to tie up business, instead involved heated exchanges and included, among other actions, dissolving the park activities director position.

At the Dec. 20 special park board meeting, board member Rhonda Reinhold proposed discontinuing the position, held by Donna McKee since she was hired in January, 2013. Board members said they would investigate whether McKee's contract is up at the end of January, as board member Patty Stallings suggested.

Asked for the rationale behind the decision by an audience member, Stallings said she hoped that whoever fills the park superintendent position, which the board will soon be advertising, will include activities planning in the job.

Stallings said training content for Indiana University's parks and recreation degree is about one-third focused on activity planning and execution. Reinhold added the board hoped to learn what sort of endeavors could be included in a full-time park superintendent's duties as opposed to the present superintendent, whom she described as part-time.

She also said the board hoped to have a superintendent in place by summer, though board president Tammy Shaffer said the board could expand its search if it doesn't find who it's seeking by then.

The board also voted to ensure at least one park board member has a full set of keys to the beach lodge, including Young's apartment, as a safety measure "in case something happens." Audience member Russ Mason suggested the board consider a lock box to gain entry, whose key only the EMS and fire and police departments would have access to.

Also approved by the board was capping what the park superintendent can spend at $500 per purchase, something Stallings noted is the case at the Culver Public Library (she added the town clerk has a $1,000 spending limit).

Asked about emergency spending, Reinhold proposed Young could contact two park board members, as is the case with Culver's utilities manager when an emergency takes place, for approval of quick payment over $500 in case of situations such as electrical fires or furnaces going out, as board member John Helphrey described.

An advertisement for the park superintendent position has been created, said Stallings, and will appear in the local newspaper as well as the South Bend newspaper and Indiana parks and recreation website for job postings. Stallings is looking into universities with parks and recreations degrees for venues to list the job, and Reinhold said she contacted the president of the Indiana Parks and Recreation Association for help in promoting the job opening.

Some debate ensued as to whether the park work of current superintendent Kelly Young -- who also works full-time during the school year as a Culver Elementary School special education teacher -- is part or full-time. Young said she spends some 91 hours a week at her post during the summer and around 32 hours per week the rest of the year.

An audience member asked if Young's benefits are derived from the town of Culver or the school. Reinhold said Young has retirement funding from both entities and disability and life insurance through the town, though her health insurance is by way of the school, though Reinhold added that Young's health insurance was derived from the town for the first 20 years of her 27-year employment as park super.

Noting some have suggested Young's residence in the park beach lodge apartment is a benefit of her job, Shaffer asked Young if she had paid taxes on the apartment, which Young said she had not.

Park board attorney Rachel Arndt said she's still researching the matter, but understood Young should have been issued a W2 tax form for use with the apartment.

"I'm not saying it's your fault," Arndt emphasized to Young, "and I'm not a tax expert....I'm just trying to get an idea of the situation with that apartment."

Shaffer said the current park board is trying to correct the failures of past boards in not acting according to statute in matters such as the apartment.

One audience member described the situation inherited by the board as "a hot mess," and suggested the blame is unfairly falling on Young herself.

Shaffer asked if those raising concerns have "been to (park board meetings)" to follow the situation.

Audience member Kathy Montgomery said she has read and heard about current goings-on with the park board, which she described as "bullying" and "shameful." She went on to suggest the park board give Young a chance to implement changes wrongly left undone by the board in the past.

"We did that," replied Reinhold. "We authorized (purchase of) a Point of Sale (cash register) and bought a computer, and it's not used yet. It's the law."

When pressed by Montgomery to "fix" past board mishandling, Arndt said she and the board were in

CCHS welcomes Danish exchange student

By Shakkira Harris,
Culver Comm. High School

Travel and new experiences are what 16-year-old Henrik Bill is all about.

From leaving his homeland in Denmark to landing here in Culver, that sense of adventure is evident. From a city with a population of 40,000 in Silkeborg to a population of 1,380, a new scenery and lifestyle is exactly what foreign exchange student Bill received.

Bill has grown up his whole life knowing he wanted to come to the States. After his two older siblings did the same thing, he wanted this experience from a very young age.

"They (siblings) told me a lot of cool stuff, that made me more interested. When I was 8, my family and I traveled to the U.S. for a month. Even though I don't remember everything about the trip, I still remember that I really liked the States and I wanted to go there, not only on vacation but actually to live there," Bill said.

Bill had no choice in the matter of where he would be residing for his upcoming school year; the destination was handpicked for him. He liked that aspect though, because trying something new is the point of travel and adventure for him.

"Of course there are times when you think, 'Wow, it would be cool to live in New York City or something like that.' But I am happy that I came here," he said.

Bill really likes the people in Culver and says they're very nice and welcoming; he appreciates that friendliness, he says.

Although the common courtesy many of our fellow peers show is not all that common to Danish people.

"Many Danes and Europeans might come across as arrogant when you first meet them, not because they don't like you, but simply because it's the mentality."

He said Danish people may seem standoffish at first to strangers, as it takes time for them to be comfortable with a new person. Although once they are comfortable, a deep friendship can develop and Danish folk are "cool, nice, and friendly."

Another difference from Denmark to America is the prices of things. Bill says that the price of a Big Mac meal at McDonalds is double the amount here, the reason being that Denmark's tax rates are about 200 percent more than ours. Denmark is, if not the number one, one of the most highly taxed countries, although they do have free health care and completely free school systems.

"I didn't really know what to expect, to be honest," Bill said of first learning of his American destination. "I had googled Indiana, and mostly it just showed a bunch of corn fields."

He believes there is a lot more to the town now.

the process of trying to do just that, noting policies like the superintendent spending cap should have been put into place years ago, and are the norm in other municipalities.

Montgomery said she saw "innocent people being railroaded," and audience members Ed and Lora Pinder, and son Ed Jr., suggested during another portion of the meeting that the board was attacking Young.

Board member John Helpfrey, expressing appreciation and respect for Montgomery's opinion, said he had first asked to be on the park board because in the past three or four years he saw a number of things needing to be changed.

"You talk about people being hurt," said Helpfrey. "We had someone die (by drowning last summer) and nothing changed afterwards...There's never a lifeguard at the other end of the park and no one walking at the other end of the beach.

Helpfrey said he'd been going to the park for years and wouldn't feel confident allowing his young grandchildren to swim there alone.

"What happens when we have a death? Nothing," he continued. "Nothing changes. They take out the swimming pier."

Helpfrey went on to mention an incident involving a Hobie Cat sailboat on the beach endangering the safety of children there, referenced the installation of a public pier last April which was unsafe for use but had no purchase contract as a recourse, and said the beach lodge is "a wreck" needing hundreds of thousands of dollars in repairs. He said the engineer from Culver Academies visited the building along with park board members, and suggested it could "blow up today." He also questioned why audience members raising concerns raised none about safety at the park.

"The first 10 years (on the job), you're learning," Helpfrey said. "The second ten you should know what you're doing, but the third ten years, there should be no mistakes. There have been lots of problems in the last five or six years...it's time for a change."

When an audience member suggested the problems were the fault of board decisions, Helpfrey agreed, adding the board pays sizable sums of money for flowers and approves 5k runs and "glamour shows for kids, but how many even show up?"

Shaffer added many decisions should never have been in the hands of the superintendent alone up to now.

"I sat on this board for two terms before this board came on," she said. "I couldn't get any changes because they entrusted a single person with all the decisions and took for granted what she was doing.

"I understand you all know Kelly and she's been in the community. We aren't attacking a person here. We are setting standards; she may 9fulfill) those standards and if not, someone else will."

When questioned by Helpfrey about his response to Shaffer's words, audience member Ed Pinder Jr. described them with an expletive, prompting Helpfrey to suggest Pinder leave if he wished to use "that kind of language."

Pinder, refusing, suggested the police be called towards making him leave.

Reinhold suggested last summer's drowning death would normally result in the termination of a park superintendent, adding the incident opened up the park to litigation.

"Read the DNR report (on the incident), and you'll understand," Reinhold added. "We don't have a choice."

Audience member Tom Kearns, noting there's "a lot of emotion on both sides," suggested the solution may lie in establishing firm policies and procedures. Montgomery called on the board to allow Young to learn the policies and procedures and be given a chance to implement them, and that she "needs your support."

Kearns' report on policies and procedures included his reading of a policy statement developed by the policy committee on which he sits.

Specifically he emphasized the need for the board to approve a policy regarding the ready-to-install skating rink prior to its being opened to the public.

Considerable discussion ensued regarding the rink, which Arndt described as "a lawsuit waiting to happen" without policy and procedures, as well as staff training. It was suggested the town would incur no greater liability leaving the rink unstaffed, provided proper signage was installed there, which Young said she had ready to erect.

Young also said volunteer Chris Chambers asked to delay installation until the weekend of Dec. 28, given the rainy weather forecast for the Dec. 21 weekend.

The board agreed to a Dec. 26 special meeting at 4:45 p.m. in hopes of approving the rink policy and procedures, to facilitate its opening.

Kearns also reported, representing the tree commission, that six trees have been listed as priority to remove, though one -- a popular mulberry tree in the west end of the park -- will be remediated instead of removed. He did explain budgeting funds for removal yet this winter is "critical."

Eleven trees should be pruned in the near future, he added.

Popular Academies military training instructor, counselor killed in traffic accident

Master Sgt. James Smith returned to campus for the 2006 Alumni Reunion Weekend.

A former instructor of military training at Culver Military Academy died in a traffic accident on Dec. 11. Master Sgt. James H. Smith, 76, of Eddyville, Ky., died and his wife, Margie L. Smith, was hospitalized after being involved in a three-vehicle wreck at Ky. 93 and Ky. 293.

Smith worked at Culver from January 1977 to June 1992. He was an instructor of military training and served as the counselor for Company C from 1984-1987 and assistant commandant from 1987-90. He also served as an instructor in Culver Summer Schools & Camps from 1978-1981.

Smith taken to Caldwell Medical Center then airlifted to Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville, Tenn. where he was pronounced dead at 1:43 p.m., Kentucky State Police said. Mrs. Smith was airlifted to Deaconess Hospital in Evansville, Ind. where she was listed in stable condition.

However, Bill would like to see a mall that was significantly closer, saying that South Bend is too far away for a shopping mall.

Moving to the States has made Bill appreciate things he had taken for granted in Denmark. What he misses most are his Danish friends and family.

"I don't think about them every day and I try to focus on my life here in the States rather than hanging on to my life in Denmark, too much," he said.

When asked what his favorite aspect about Culver was, Bill joked, "I don't know, the gas station, maybe?"

But in all seriousness, his favorite aspect is the people of our town.

Bill finds American schools are more strict than Danish schools. He finds it unusual that, here in America, we refer to our teachers by last name, saying that in Denmark, students and teachers are on a first name basis. Also, being 30 seconds or a couple minutes late to class is just normal in Denmark; no discipline is made because of such acts.

Other things he found unusual are the driving and drinking ages. In Denmark you cannot drive until the age of 18, but you can buy alcohol at age 16.

By the sounds of things, Bill is enjoying his year here. "I think people here are very welcoming and nice, and I really appreciate that."

If these walls could talk: 620 Lake Shore Drive

By Jeff Kenney
 In the last installment of our ongoing series of "virtual" walks through the historic buildings of Culver, we began an effort to sort out the mix of buildings and entities which, through the years, occupied the space which is now home to the Lakehouse Grille, which today is numbered 620 Lake Shore Drive.

ABOVE: The building many Culverites will recall as the coffee shop, at 620 Lake Shore Drive, circa 1922.

The businesses at the locale ranged in number from 618 to 620, to 622 in the past, with the one still existant entity from nearly 80 years back being the former Lakeview Tavern (the main subject of our last installment), though today it's connected directly to the Lakehouse by way of a 1999 construction project.

As reported in that last installment (whose title unfortunately misrepresented the 600s as 200s!), part of today's 620 Lake Shore Drive apparently started life as a dry goods store circa 1922, but became best known as a bowling alley until its demise by fire in 1978.

The bowling alley sat east of the Lakeview Tavern and just to the east of the tavern, at 622 Lake Shore Drive, was the popular coffee shop, which was lost to fire the same day.

The large, two-story coffee shop structure (its second floor contained apartments) occupied what was listed as an empty lot on the 1908 Sanborn fire map, though the 1924 map lists some entity existing there -- it just doesn't identify what.

A circa 1922 photograph shows the future coffee shop, albeit with what appears to be block or brick siding in those days. Judi Burns' Maxinkuckee history website suggests the building was, at least for a time, F.G. Solomon's department store, a prominent one in town in the 1920s.

The identity of the old building as a coffee shop was apparently in place by July, 1928, when the Culver Citizen reported that Mrs. E. A. Thessin "purchased the Coffee Shop which is located opposite the depot." Two years later, Thessin would take over management elsewhere of the Home Restaurant from Mrs. Lura Baker, departing the coffee shop at the same time.

In Jan., 1944, the Citizen reported that "Mr. and Mrs. Howard Warner have sold the Coffee Shop to Mary Carrothers and Catherine Kowatch."

In May, 1952, Mrs. Tom Hagle and Mrs. Floyd Triplett became joint proprietors of the business, though in Feb., 1960, Mr. and Mrs. David Laffoon of South Bend purchased the Coffee Shop "from Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Triplett and took over the management of the restaurant."

However, Lavina Triplett and Pearl Onesti (who with husband Pete was long associated with the Lakeside grocery store a few doors east, where Rideon Bicycles is lo-ated today) jointly operated the coffee shop during the 1960s. By the 1970s, Pearl alone managed what was officially by then known as the Lakeside Coffee Shop (she ended her association with the grocery store in Oct., 1975).

The business suffered smoke damage in the early 1970s when a fire, which according to former bowling alley owner Jim DeWitt had started in the coffee shop kitchen, affected the two buildings' shared wall. Neither suffered major damage at the time.

Around that time, Pearl Onesti refurbished the restaurant, adding a brick facade to the lower level.

The Oct. 26, 1978 Culver Citizen described the five-alarm fire which finally destroyed both coffee shop and bowling alley as having been observed by "thousands" of onlookers (some, visible in the accompanying photos, watching from the rooftops of buildings quite nearby!) and burning fiercely for over six hours starting around 1:30 p.m. on Oct. 22.

An Argos fireman was rushed to Parkview hospital in Plymouth for smoke inhalation, and it was briefly feared the massive blaze would devour the buildings to the west, including the Lakeview Tavern, Hansen's, and the El Rancho Theatre.

The flames were fought from the tavern rooftop and Plymouth's snorkel lift, and Culver firemen stayed through the night to keep the blaze from reigniting. Damage was estimated at a quarter of a million dollars.

The coffee shop space remained a vacant lot for around the next twenty years.

In the late 1980s, a small bait shop at part of today's Lakehouse site was opened under the management of former Culver town marshal Richard "Woody" Woodward, by 1990 known as J & B Bait & Tackling.

In his Easterday Construction blog online, Easterday owner Kevin Berger describes the small, block former bait shop building as "a small white building with an orange roof sitting on the site of the former bowling alley (at that time the adjacent Lakeview Tavern was under separate ownership)."

Easterday was tapped by Larry and Joette Surrisi, who had been operating the Edgewater Grille at the site since 1997, to construct the considerably larger building which currently houses the Lakehouse Grille.

In the old bait shop structure, recalls Berger, "The Edgewater Grille sign only partially covered the old sign on the roof that said 'BAIT.' There were only a few tables because of the limited space, but the business was brisk."

Surrisi had operated successful restaurants in Indianapolis and was working in the publishing industry in Chicago when the bug bit him to move to Culver, where he became part of a wave of fine dining options sprouting up in the mid-1990s here.

Construction began in September of 1999 on the new building, and in Dec., 1999, the Surriris took over the old Lakeview tavern, or Lakeview Lodge as it became known.

Berger writes that the greatest challenge in the construction of the new structure was the request to keep the kitchen open as long as possible during the work.

Architect Brent Martin partnered with Berger and Surrisi to design the new, wood-framed structure, whose facade was intended to reflect the community by mirroring the brick in use in the train station - depot across the street. "Mr. Martin," added Berger, "proposed the tower on the (southeast) corner to serve not only as an anchor to the structure, but as a metaphorical See Walls page 7 lighthouse tower since it sits at a

MCCF accepting applications for next grant round

The Marshall County Community Foundation is now accepting applications for the first General Endowment and Ralph C. Vonnegut, Jr. Fund grant cycle of 2014. The General Endowment is the grant making fund of the Marshall County Community Foundation (MCCF) and is the most flexible and responsive of the Foundation's 310 funds. Grants from this endowment fund address needs throughout Marshall County typically focusing on the arts, education, health and human services, recreation and the environment. Members of the community evaluate proposals and conduct site visits during a competitive application process.

Applications are due by 4:30 p.m., Monday, February 3. Applications will then be reviewed by the MCCF Grants Committee and final decisions will be made by the Board of Directors during their March meeting. While applications that target educational needs in Marshall County continue to remain important to the MCCF, all proposed projects will be reviewed on their merits and how they meet a variety of needs in the community.

Applicants must be organizations with 501(c)(3) IRS status or organizations with 501(c) IRS status whose request is charitable in nature for the following: start-up costs for new programs or the expansion of needed programs; one-time projects or needs To be considered for this funding opportunity, use of the application available online at marshallcountycf.org is required as are signatures of the designated officials noted on the form.

Until Dec. 31, a 10 percent match will be given for contributions to all MCCF funds that support nonprofit organizations including MCCF's General Endowment Fund. For more information, contact Jennifer Compton at 574-935-5159 or visit marshallcountycf.org.

bend in Lake Shore Drive."

With phase one complete, the restaurant closed briefly to allow the relocation of some of the kitchen equipment. The old bait shop was torn down to allow phase two, during which the Lakeview was incorporated into the endeavor.

Fountains were added to the corners of the raised dais along the west wall to create a pool and waterfall effect, Berger explains, though the "occasional splatter made them difficult to use when the adjacent seating was occupied."

The restaurant was so popular, Berger noted, "that the owner petitioned the Town to make changes and add a crosswalk to handle the pedestrian traffic from the parking areas across the street."

In June, 2003, the late Ralph Braun took over actual ownership, with Surrisi eventually moving on to launch the also popular City Tavern a few blocks west of the Edgewater. Dan Bickel took on management at the Edgewater in Aug., 2008, though in March, 2012, the business' new (and present) owner, Mark Damore Jr., was announced.

The son of Original Root Beer Stand owner Mark Sr. Damore rechristened the restaurant the Lakehouse Grille, reopening it in May, 2012 with some interior (and relatively minor exterior) changes to reflect its new identity.
