The Board stressed that these special pickup points were temporary solutions, disigned to give homeowners time to construct sidewalks. We sincerely hope that those involved use this time to construct those walks. After all, many of the children who must be bussed in this way come from families living in homes without sidewalks. A long term program of bussing puts a larger tax burden on all residents in the system, rather than on just those families involved.

TIE DOWN YOUR MOBILE HOME!

If you think the wind blows only in Kansas or during Florida hurricanes, you're wrong. Hoosiers have some windy weather, too. In have some winds weather, too. In fact, wind velocity can reach as high as 90 miles per hour. And that can mean real trouble if you happen to live in a mobile home. Sandra Shank, Extension housing specialist at Purdue University, points out that high winds can toss mobile homes around, causing great damage. But there are several things you can do to help protect your mobile home, she adds.

For example, you can position your home so less surface is exposed to the wind. Mrs. Shank says you can do so by placing your mobile home with the narrow end facing the prevailing wind. "A 12- by 60-foot mobile home positioned correctly presents only 20 per cent as much wall area to the prevailing winds as it would if the long side were facing the wind," she says.

But, she cautions, proper positioning is not enough to protect mobile homes from wind damage. She also suggests that you plan windbreaks around your home.

'Natural barriers, such as trees, provide excellent windbreaks," provine excellent windbreaks," she says. "The protection of trees far outweighs the danger of falling tree limbs. Two or more trees are more effective than a single row, she adds. Windbreaks of 80 per cent density are generally effective. Trees 30 feet high are most effective effective

In addition, Mrs. Shank emphasizes that mobile homes should be anchored with tiedowns, "Tiedown systems are easy to install on existing units," she says, "Costs generally don't exceed $150. And if you're buying a new mobile home. you should buy one that has built-in you should buy one that has built-in ticdown straps. The specialist notes that tie-downs are the most effective safeguard against wind damage. You need two types of ties, she says. The over-the-top tie keeps the unit from overturning, and the frame tie keeps the mobile home on the survey black. Interview. the support blocks. Installing only one type of tiedown is insufficient for 10-. 12- and 14-foot wide homes.

"The over-the-top tie is secured to an anchor on each side of the mobile home." Mrs. Shank says, adding that frame ties connect the support beam and the rs. "The ties are made of steel anchors. wire rope or rust-resistant steel strap," Mrs. Shank says, "The ties actually tie the mobile home and its steel frame to anchors embedded in the ground. The cable or strap is secured to the anchor with a yoke-type fastener and tensioning device, or with clamps and turnbuckles.

Commercially available ties of galvanized steel strapping with a minimum breaking strength of more than 4.750 pounds or galvanized steel cable with a breaking strength of more than 4.800 pounds are acceptable, she adds. adds.

Where should the ties be located? The specialist says that you should put over-the-top ties within two feet of each end of the mobile home. Others are needed at stud locations in between. Commercially available adapters or wooden blocks should be used with over-the-top tiedowns to prevent sharp bends in the ties or cuts in the unit, she continues.

The specialist stresses that all mobile home owners should install tiedown systems. If your neighbor doesn't have his home anchored, it could blow into your home, causing severe damage. For detailed information, mobile home owners should write for publication TR-75, "Protecting Mobile Homes from High Winds." Published by the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency, the booklet gives specific information about tiedowns. A Salute

The remaining positions in the 33-car lineup for the annual Indianapolis 500-mile race on May 26 will be filled during the final seven hours of official time trials Saturday, beginning at 11 o'clock (EST)

Gates to the grounds will be opened at 7 o'clock to accommodate the huge crowd which is expected to watch the high speed action. Admission will be $2 with all seats available on a firstcome first-served basis. Practice will start at 9 o'clock and time trials at 11.

As was the case last week. the program will be divided into two three-and-a-half hour periods with prize money of $3,500 at stake during each period to stimulate track action during the entire seven hours. An additional amount totalling $5,500 also will be paid to the overall ten fastest qualifiers for both time trial days.

The Race Day purse again is expected to top the million dol-lar mark, as it has for the last four years in a row, and even the first driver eliminated in the May 26 event probably will earn more than $13,000. The winner's share may exceed $250,000. That is the reason for the keen competition for starting positions.

The traditional "bumping" pro-cess will start as soon as 33 drivhave completed their fourlap qualification runs, because only the 33 fastest will be eligible for positions behind the Hurst Olds pace car when Speedway President Tony Hulman gives the electrifying command "Ge men, Start Your Engines." "Gentle-

Swirly-Top Restaurant Opens This Week

Will Feature Drive-Up Window

Culver's new Swirly-Top Drive In opened for business Wednesday, May 15th, and brings a combina-tion of features to area residents and visitors.

A big feature of the Swirly-Top A big feature of the swirty-top will be a drive-up window, reports Ken Crowel. The window will insure speedy, quality service, which is the general goal of the operators of the restaurant.

But there are plenty of reasons to go indoors, too. A spacious interior features seating at booths for sixty people, and an expanse of windows at the front of the building gives diners a great view of the lake into the bargain. The interior of the building is paneled, and an antique motif is accented by a dozen Tiffany-style lighting fixtures. A red quarry tile floor adds to the rustic effect of the decor. The exterior of the building has

The exterior of the building has been faced in colonial-style brick. Parking space is ample in the paved lot. The Swirly-Top will feature a menu of sandwiches and "bas-kets," as well as a complete selection of fountain delicacies. The building is fully air condi-tioned, and is available for year-round use, if the area can support such an operation.

support such an operation. Mr. Crowel also thinks that parking lots are good for more than just parking cars. He plans to make the lot available to high school band students for use as a carwash area, and feels that the sidewalks along the parking lot would make ideal places to set up "flea markets" during the summer months, where talented members of the community could display their crafts, or local organizations sponsor various displays or sales. Ken feels that the many talented and able-bodied members of our community need a place where they can display their work, and he hopes he can provide such a place.
