W. E. Hand hopes to be able to return from Howard City, Mich., this week. Mrs. Hand, however, is still under severe treatment and is confined to the bed.

Marvin S. Coffin, wife and child of Chicago, are here on a week's vacation at Mr. Coffin's uncle's, S. C. Shilling. Mr. Coffin has just sold his restaurant business in Chicago.

Miss Esther Wickizer of Argos is here for an extended visit with her father, P. A. Wickizer. She is accompanied by Miss Helen Decker, of Chicago, a sister of Mrs. Wickizer.

Ernest Zechiel leaves this week for Stuttgart, Germany, for a year's study of the piano. The hopes and good wishes of everybody will attend this talented Culver boy in his absence.

Mr. Marion Harcourt of Milroy is here for a visit of indefinite length with his daughter, Mrs. Harry Medbourn. Mr. Harcourt is a victim of asthma and finds the lake air beneficial.

Rural Route Carrier Smith is taking a portion of his vacation in Delavan, Wis., with his brother-in-law, Dave London, who is back from the state of Washington for the first time in 30 years.

Billy Link, the well-known vaudeville performer, accompanied by his wife, Billy Link Jr., and Ed Crawford, late of Dockstader's minstrels, have rooms at Capt. Crook's while spending their vacation at the lake.

Mrs. Noah Wagoner entertained at dinner Sunday Noah H. Wagoner and family of Leiters, Emanuel Wagoner of Rochester, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wagoner, Alfred Gross and family and Herman Krah of Culver.

J. W. Riggins will go to Angola Sunday to attend the annual reunion of the past commissioned officers of the Indiana national guard and the Spanish-American war veterans. The day will be spent at James lake.

Young People's Union Meeting.

There will be a union meeting of the young people's societies of Culver in the Chautauqua tent on Sunday evening, July 19, at 6:30. Topic: "Faithful in Little Things," Luke 16:10-13; leaders, Lester Young, Jennie Keen and Clara Stahl. All young people are urged to attend this service.

Friday Night's Concert.

A most delightful and artistic program of music was enjoyed last Friday evening at the Reformed church by a good sized audience. The entertainment was under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher club and was largely the work of Mrs. C. E. Behmer, chairman of the music committee. In point of talent the program would have been creditable to a town much larger than Culver, and as an amateur production the recital was probably the best ever given here.

Otto Stahl in his two piano selections played with spirit and expression and with a technique which revealed the source of his success as a teacher of piano music in Ann Arbor university.

Clarence Menser gave two bass selections in which his excellent voice displayed itself to advantage.

The choruses by the choir of fourteen ladies were sweetly rendered.

Glenn Behmer's cornet numbers were unexpectedly good to those who were not familiar with the lad's playing. His tones were even and well sustained and possessed a volume that would be looked for in a much older player. The little fellow is a real musician and will in time become a performer of more than ordinary ability.

Mrs. Spray delighted her hearers with her charming solos. Her soprano voice has strength and sweetness and has been cultivated to excellent advantage. Those who knew her singing when she was a girl realize that her talent is genuine and that she has justified their expectations.

Ernest Zechiel was heard for the first time in public here in several years. The word artist can be applied to him in no mere conventional sense. That he has the soul of music and rare technical facility is so apparent that the most indifferent musical perception is impressed with the fact that Mr. Zechiel's work is of a very fine quality.

Mrs. G. B. Eisenhard, president of the Parent-Teacher club, closed the evening with an inspiring talk on the objects and purposes of the club. "It is because we love our own children, and your children that we are in this work," said Mrs. Eisenhard.

The Parent-Teacher club and its music committee have placed us under obligations for an evening of exceptional enjoyment and value.

Death of Libbie VanSchoiack.

Elizabeth VanSchoiack died in the Methodist Memorial Home at Warren, Ind., Sunday night, about midnight, after an invalidism of about two years. She will be brought to her brother William's on Wednesday evening, and the funeral will be held there at 2 o'clock Thursday. The burial will be in Washington cemetery. The service will be conducted by the minister connected with the Home. Elizabeth (or Libbie, as she was best known) was born on the old home place on the east shore of the lake 64 years ago and lived there until the death of her very aged father, L. T. VanSchoiack, seven years ago. After that, and until going to Warren two years ago, she made her home with her brothers and sisters. Her mother died in October, 1898.

Logansport Ladies at Lake.

About 30 members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Order of Railway Conductors of Logansport came to Culver yesterday for their annual picnic. They were entertained by their conductress, Mrs. Frank C. Murphy, at her cottage on the East side where the day was enjoyed most thoroughly. Not one of them fell asleep at the switch or ditched her train. Nor did any of them have to wait for orders from any mere man.

Death of Mrs. Edwards.

Sympathy of many friends will be extended to Captain and Mrs. F. L. Hunt of the academy colony for the death of Mrs. Hunt's mother, Mrs. Anna Mary Edwards, who passed away at 9:45 o'clock Saturday morning. The body was taken to South Charleston, Ohio, for burial, accompanied by Captain and Mrs. Hunt and a sister of Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Frank Noble of Flagstaff, Arizona. Mrs. Edwards was in perfect health to within two weeks of her death when she suffered a stroke of paralysis. Following this her decline was rapid, but her death came more suddenly than was expected. The loss of Mrs. Edwards will be deeply felt among the residents at the academy. She was a most lovable old lady, vivacious and cheerful, possessing a cultivated mind and a high type of christian character. She enjoyed the society of young people and her youthful sympathies greatly endeared her to the younger element associated with the home of the Hunts.

THE WEEK
IN CULVERLittle Items of Local Happenings of Interest to People in Town and Country

—Captain Elliott is driving a new Chandler six.

—Clara Stahl is assisting in the postoffice as a temporary clerk.

—Urias Menser has begun the good work of repainting his business buildings.

—Fisher & Bergman's delivery wagon looks gay and festive with its new lettering.

—An examination for postoffice clerk will be held in Culver Aug. 8. This will give some one a chance to get on the waiting list.

—Simon Hatten has been appointed inspector of road No. 2 in Union township. This will be the first road to be constructed by Contractor Thurman.

—Mrs. Wm. Roesener, wife of the German Lutheran minister at Bremen, dropped dead in a pew at the close of last Sunday morning's service. Her age was 50 years.

—A hay rack party of about 25 young folks called on Miss Naomi Walker of the Poplar Grove neighborhood last Monday night and enjoyed a few hours of farm life.

—The burglar who robbed the Plymouth postoffice on the night of March 7, 1913, has been captured in Chicago. He escaped from the jail at Indianapolis last January.

—The town is putting down a 12-inch drain on Main street between the hardware store and the bank. This will take care of the property in that block and also the property on North Jefferson.

—Silent motors are advertised as the feature of the 1915 auto. Thank heaven! The time is already here—we need not wait for 1915—when the guy who tears the air to flinders with a cutout is put down for a back number.

—Regarding the reported marriage of Lloyd Hawkins and Miss Ruby Lunsford, who was employed in the family of Dr. Norris, in South Bend last week, Mr. Hawkins declines to make a statement. He says: "Let the people guess."

—John Hollett rode his motorcycle to Three Rivers, Mich., and back, 170 miles, in 5 hours the other day. From Laporte to Union City, 14 1/2 miles, his time was 18 minutes. The most exhausting effect of such a ride, he says, is the strain on the eyes.

—Frank Lamson is having the old candy shop of the Palmer House remodeled into an 8 or 9-room cottage. The shop has been moved back to be fitted up as a kitchen, and Al Keen is building a large addition to supply the living and sleeping rooms.

—Plymouth will get its postoffice building eventually. An appropriation of $10,000 for the purchase of a site is practically settled. With diligent effort on the part of the 13th district congressman an appropriation for a building will get through the next congress, and with good luck the building will be completed in about two years.

—There are drawbacks as well as advantages to living on the main traveled street. We can't think just now what the advantages are, but undoubtedly there are some or people would not want to live on the main traveled street. One of the drawbacks is to be awakened at 2 o'clock on a hot summer night by one of those devices of man's devilish ingenuity, a motorcycle, thundering through town, to be followed shortly after by a carload of joy riders singing at the top of their voices, and their cutout wide open, this in turn succeeded by the rattle of some wagon taking an early start for the country.

CULVER, INDIANA, JULY 16, 1914

A Chance for Debate.

William Allen White, in a long history of the development of prohibition in Kansas, after reciting the many good things that have come to the state under the operation of the law, concludes with the rather startling paragraphs here-with quoted:

Culture clubs for women abound. The state could be covered as with a wedding garment by the local newspapers. And yet this population, so abundantly blessed, has not produced one great inventor, one great statesman, one great poet, novelist, artist, philosopher, or leader whose fame is really lasting and national.

We have contributed nothing to the world that our sister state of Nebraska, with her saloons, cannot duplicate, except happiness and prosperity. That happiness and prosperity are worth while from the viewpoint of those striving to be happy and prosperous no one can deny. They are very much worth while. But are they worth while when the world's progress is considered? Are they an end in themselves? When we are all happy and prosperous will the world be finished and wrapped up ready for delivery into whatever heaven or hell to which we are billed?

If happiness and prosperity are ends devoutly to be desired for themselves, then Kansas is nearing a solution of the problem of the ages; but that is an open question which may be honestly debated.

Marshall County Statistics.

D. W. Marks, a member of the late board of review, furnishes the following figures as the result of the work of the board:

Lands.....$6,984,995
Improvements.....1,335,695
Lands and improvements 8,284,690
Average value of lands.. 24.75
Lots.....810,010
Improvements.....1,516,250
Lots and improvements 2,326,260
Personal property.....4,559,266
All property.....15,170,206
Mortgage exemptions.... 645,485

In the Argos Reflector we find the personal property assessment of Union township, as equalized, to be $289,958, and the total $1,217,993; of Culver, the personal at $111,225, and the total at $336,130.

The board of review found it necessary to raise the general average of the entire county, owing to the unequal assessment of the township assessors, some of whom turned in unreasonably low valuations. The work of some of the assessors was also found to be very unequal and inconsistent. One case is cited as an example where an old runabout automobile was assessed at $500 and another, a new 4-cylinder touring car, at $150. In some cases, the writing of the assessors was so poor that the name of the party assessed could only be ascertained by referring to the signature on the blank.

Rat Law Not so Funny.

Senator Ratt's rat law, passed by the last legislature, requires school trustees (including township trustees) to provide for the "illustrative" teaching of the dissemination of diseases by rats, flies and mosquitoes. Township trustees all over the state have neglected to buy the illustrated charts (offered at $15 to $20 per set by supply houses) and one result has been the recent prosecution of several township trustees in Marion county for violation of this law.

Trustees believe supply houses have thus started a campaign to force school authorities of the 30,000 schools in the state to "blow in" about half a million dollars for charts.

The Royal Black Hussars Band

THE ROYAL BLACK HUSSARS BAND.

THE Royal Black Hussars Band is a musical organization which has earned for itself fame through its sterling merit and the consistency of its performance. There is scarcely a summer resort in the middle west that has not heard this famous organization at one time or the other during the past six or seven years.

Charles W. Niles, the director, although yet a comparatively young man, has had a varied and extended musical experience. Born in Germany and in a musical family, he learned to read music before he learned to read letters. As a lad he was looked upon as a musical prodigy, and while yet in his teens he enlisted in the United States army as a musician and later for three years was assistant director of the Fifth United States Cavalry Band, then under the directorship of Professor Frederick Gross, one of the most famous of army bandmasters. The repertoire of the Royal Black Hussars Band is varied and comprehensive, embracing everything from oratorios and grand opera to popular songs and ragtime, and the daily program is always made to fit the day and the occasion. The band is handsomely uniformed, numbers eighteen and is one of the big features of the Lincoln Chautauquas.

The Royal Black Hussars Band will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city on the fourth day, afternoon and evening. In the afternoon it will play the prelude to Senator William E. Mason's address, and in the evening it will give a full concert.

Death of Academy Employee.

Tallis Strom died at his home on Thursday last of pulmonary tuberculosis, after an illness of several months, leaving a wife and a 3-year old child. The funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon at the residence, Rev. Michael officiating. The music was sung by Edna Stahl, Hildred Moss, Otto Stahl and Clarence Menser. The pallbearers were barman of the academy. The procession to the Culver cemetery was under the escort of a detachment of the Black Horse Troop, and at the grave the military salute for the soldier dead was fired.

Those from out of town attending the funeral were Andrew Strom of Chicago, father of the deceased; Mrs. Frank McMillan, a sister, and her husband, Miss Anna Beck, Rudolph Loustrom, Harry Johnson, Joseph Biro and Alfred Peterson, all of South Bend; and Mrs. Chloe McGriff of Argos.

Mr. Strom had been superintendent of the troop stables for four years, and was esteemed by the academy authorities for his ability and faithfulness, and by the cadets for his obliging disposition.

TOM CORWINE.

"We have had Tom Corwine. We are going to have him again. Hear Corwine once and you must have him again," declares Frank Leonard Anderson, pastor Normal Park Baptist Church, Chicago. "This is what some who heard him said: 'He is all right! When can we have him again?' 'The best entertainment we ever had!' 'That was different from any other entertainment I ever attended.' 'Corwine gives us nothing but clean fun.' Those are samples only. Get Corwine. He will make you laugh without being ashamed of yourself. He will make you think without feeling that you are bored by a moralizing tale. He will do the body more good than ten prescriptions. He will rest your tired brain and make your soul cleaner than before. Get Corwine. He is all right. If you have the 'blues' hear him."

Tom Corwine will appear on the Lincoln Chautauqua program in this city the second day in the afternoon only.

CHAPTER XXV.

The House Above the Torrent.

Some one upon the outskirts of the wood whistled softly and the gypsies stood with ears intent listening, alarmed, to the signal. When it had been twice repeated, they appeared to become more confident, and, untying their ponies, or calling, with low, whining voices, those that grazed, they turned to their prisoners and bade them prepare to march.

"To the Castle of Okna, excellency—"

A shout of laughter greeted the saying, and Gavin, had he been credulous until this time, would have remained credulous no more. A philosopher always, he shrugged his shoulders and pointed to the ropes which bound him.

"I am no acrobat," he said; "I cannot ride with a rope about my legs."

"We are about to remove it, excellency. Be careful what you do—my men are hasty. If you are wise, you will be followed by so many laughing angels. If, however, we should find you obstinate, then, excellency—"

He touched the handle of a great knife at his girdle significantly, and some of the others, as though understanding him, closed about the pony significantly while Gavin mounted. A similar attention being paid to Arthur Kenyon was not received so kindly; for no sooner did they attempt to lift him roughly to the saddle than he turned about and dealt the first of them a rousing blow which stretched the fellow full length upon the grass and left him insensible there. The act was within an ace of costing him his life. Knives sprung from sheaths, antique pistols were flourished—there were cries and counter-cries; and then, as though miraculously, a louder voice from some one hidden in the wood commanding them to silence. In that moment, the gypsy chief flung himself before Kenyon and protected him with hands uplifted and curses on his lips.

"Dogs and carrion—do you forget whom you obey?" he almost shrieked, and then to the Englishman, "You are mad, mein herr—be wise or I will kill you."

Kenyon, strangely nonchalant through it all, shrugged his shoulders and clambered upon the back of the pony. Gavin turned deadly pale in spite of himself, breathed a full breath again, and desired nothing more of fate than that they should quit the cursed wood without further loss of time. As though enough evil had not come to him there, he espied, as they rode from the place, the dead body of his servant, the Turk, face downwards with the knife that killed him still protruding from his shoulders. And he doubted if the wretched Greek, so brutally maimed in the fire, still lived or must be numbered a second victim of the night.

Had he been a fool to leave England upon such an errand at all, or did the circumstances of his visit justify him? Of this he did not believe that he was the best judge. That which he had done had been done for the sake of one whose sweet voice seemed to speak of courage even at such an hour—Evelyn, the woman who first had taught him what man's love could be; whose fair image went with him as he rode, the stately figure of his dreams, the gentle Evelyn for whom the supreme adoration and pity of his life were reserved. If ignominy were his ultimate reward, he cared nothing—no danger, no peril of the way, must be set against the happiness, nay, the very soul's salvation, of her who had said to him, "I love you!"

This had been the whole spirit of his journey, and it did not desert him now when the gypsies set out upon the mountain road and he understood that he was a helpless hostage in their hands. As for Arthur Kenyon, he, with English stolidity, still chose to regard the whole scene as a jest and to comment upon it from such a standpoint. To him the picturesque environment of height and valley, forests of pine and sleeping pastures, were less than nothing at all. He did not care a blade of grass for the first rosy glow of dawn in the Eastern sky; for the shimmer of gold upon the majestic landscape, or the jewels sprayed by the stream below them. He had met an adventure and he gloried in it. Begging a cigarette from the nearest gypsy, he thanked the fellow for a light, and so fell to the thirty words of German bequeathed to him by that splendid foundation of one William at Hinchester. There were "haventzies" and "Ich Wimsche's" enough to have served a threepenny manual of traveller's talk here. Neither understood the other and each was lappy.

"The man's a born idiot," Arthur said to Gavin at last. "I ask him where the road leads to and he says 'half-an-hour.'"

"Meaning we are half-an-hour from our destination."

"Then why the deuce can't he say so in plain English?"

Gavin smiled, but his gaze was set upon the ancient ruin his quick eye had observed upon a height of the green mountain above them. He wondered if the path would carry them by it, or pierce the hills and leave the castle, for such it plainly had been, upon their left hands. But for the circumstances in which he approached it, the scene had been wild and strange enough to have awakened all an artist's dormant capacities for admiration. They were well above the pine woods by this time and could look back upon a fertile valley, exquisitely green, and bordered by shining rivers. Villages, churches, farms were so many dolls' houses planted upon mighty fields while midget beasts awakened to the day.

Gavin could not but be sensible of the majesty of this scene; nor did he find the old castle out of harmony with its beauties. The building, which he now perceived that they were approaching, had been built in a cleft of the hills, at a point where the torrent fell in a thunder of silver spray to a deep blue pool far down in the valley below. Clinging, as it were, to the very face of a precipitous cliff, a drawbridge spanned the torrent and gave access to the mountain road upon the further side of the pass; but so narrow was the river and so perpendicular the rocks that it seemed as though men might clasp hands across the abyss or a good horse take it in the stride of a gallop.

"This is the place, by Mahomet," said Arthur dryly . . . and he added, "What a devil of a house for a week-end!"

Gavin bade him listen. A voice across the chasm replied to the gypsy hail.

"Don't you recognize that?" he asked; "It's the voice we heard in the wood. This evidently is where we get down. Well, I'm glad of that anyhow."

It was as he said. The cavalcade had come to its journey's end; and there, picturesquely grouped upon the narrow road, were men and mules and mountain ponies, giving more than a welcome splash of color to the neighboring monotony of rock and shrub, and right glad all to be once more at their ease. It now became plain that none but the gypsy leader was to enter the Castle with the prisoners; and he, when he had addressed some loud words to the others (for the roar of the torrent compelled him to shout), passed first across the bridge, leading Kenyon's pony and calling to the other to follow him. Just a glance the men could turn upon raging waters, here of the deepest blue, there a sour green, or again but a boiling, tumbling mass of writhing foam—just this and the vista of the sheer, cruel rocks and the infernal abyss; then they passed over and the bridge was drawn up and they stood within the courtyard, as securely caged as though the obeliskes prisoned them and gyves of steel were about their wrists.

"Excellents, my master, the Chevalier, would speak with you."

Thus said the guide—and, as he said it, Gavin understood that he had come to the house of Count Odin's father, the man who had loved Dora d'Istran, and for love of her had paid nearly twenty years of his precious liberty.

"And this is the Castle of Okna?" he exclaimed.

The guide smiled.

"No, excellency," he said, "the Castle of Okna lies many miles from here. You must speak to our master of that. That is his step, excellency!"

They listened and heard the tapping of a stick upon a stone pavement. It approached them laboriously; and after that which seemed an interminable interval, an old white-haired man appeared at one of the doors of the quadrangle and raising his voice bade them welcome. The voice was the one they recognized as that of the wood; but the face of the speaker sent a shudder through Gavin's veins which left him unshamed.

"Blind," he muttered, amazed—"the man is blind."

MRS. TALLIS STROM.

FROM THE SUMMER SCHOOL.

For the thirteenth summer the buildings and grounds of the academy and the waters of Lake Maxinkuckee are thronged with the cadets of the Summer schools. Since the morning of June 30, when the first naval cadet went through the mysteries of registration and had been guided to his new quarters, the sound of "stand by" or "Troop, Ho!" has been familiar at every turn. When neither of these greet the ear, a young woodcrafter, with two fingers raised in his mystic salute, is certain to be visible in the landscape.

Lieutenant Commander Fitch and his aides are busily engaged initiating some 280 cadets into the intricacies of naval drill, and already the young strategists of the sea are planning mimic naval wars which shall set all Maxinkuckee a-tremble. In the troop Captain Rossow and a goodly nucleus of former troopers from Summer and Winter schools are cultivating the combination of riding skill and troop spirit which make the 80 cavalry cadets such a factor in Culver life. Out in the Woodcraft camp there are 80 lads who keep Mr. Beard, Captain Beard and their assistants busy early and late to satisfy their desire for knowledge of camp and trail and field and flower.

The officer in charge of the Naval school is Lieutenant-Commander E. O. Fitch, U. S. N., retired. He was a member of the 1904 class at Annapolis and was engaged in the service until the year 1908 when he retired with the title of constructor and the rank of lieutenant-commander. He is at present head of the department of mathematics at Lafayette college. He has introduced several innovations in the school and the work promises to be very successful.

Lieutenant-Commander Fitch is assisted in the naval instruction by Ensign W. E. Malloy and H. C. Mittendorf, U. S. N., both of whom were members of the class of 1914 at Annapolis.

Frederick C. Braden of the Woodcraft school has the distinction of being the first Culver cadet of the second generation to enter the academy. His father, D. C. Braden of Indianapolis, was a cadet in the first year of the academy, '94-'95, and has been an ardent rooter ever since that time. Now that the sons of the old cadets are reaching the age for prep. school, C. M. A. expects that Braden will be the first of an endless line of the younger generations that shall surpass in Culver the deeds of their "Dads".

Under the Big Tent Sunday.

At least four of the local Sunday schools will participate in a grand union Sunday school next Sunday morning in the Chautauqua tent. O. E. Ellis, county president of the Marshall County Sunday School association, has been asked to be presiding superintendent for the occasion, but if he cannot be present Claude Newman, president of our township, will preside. The church bells will ring at 9:30 and at 10 o'clock, and the school bell will ring announcing the hour of opening the school. The school from Poplar Grove expect to be present and will bring their baskets and have dinner before going home. Many no doubt will attend the afternoon session of the Chautauqua. The M. Whereas, It has pleased the Great Spirit in His wisdom to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Lucy Ann Rhoads, reminding us without warning, suddenly and that in the midst of life there is death and that it is but a step from the social to the bedside of sorrow and anguish.

Whereas, Death has entered our circle, broken the chain and removed from our midst one whose membership was beneficial to the virtues of our order. Therefore be

Residence Property Bought Cheap

William Hollett has bought of Dr. Hopper of Gary the Main street residence property known as the Laforee Hessel place, and will move into it this week. The consideration is not made public, but it is under $2,500. The house cost Hessel $4,500, and the lot is worth around $1,000. Mr. Hollett will make some necessary repairs, but at that he is credited with having struck a bargain.

Regimental Reunion.

J. M. Caulfield, commander of the G. A. R. post in South Bend and secretary of the 73d Indiana Regimental association, was here yesterday in company with William Stafford and John Lowry of Argos conferring with Rev. W. A. Walker and other members of the local post relative to the reunion of the 73d which is to be held in Culver Sept. 9 and 10.

A Pleasant Surprise.

About forty friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Marsh about 2 1/2 miles north of Burr Oak Sunday to remind Mrs. Marsh of her birthday. Everyone brought well filled baskets and at noon hour a sumptuous dinner was spread to which all did ample justice. Mrs. Marsh was the recipient of many useful presents. One Who Was There.

TENOR OF MUSICAL NOTE ON BIG PROGRAM

"While Mr. Hamilton has the physique and the voice to be classed emphatically as a dramatic tenor, he yet has such a beautifully lyric quality as to place him also in the list of purely lyric voices," says the Music News, Chicago. "His range is remarkable, and the power of his voice is amazing. At the same time this power in music interferes with quality, and he is able to sing steadily, suavely and with great leeway in modulatory effects. Mr. Hamilton has temperament in abundance, and critical his taste in readings is pronounced and varied absolutely to the requirements of each work given."

Mr. Hamilton will appear in the city on the Lincoln Chautauqua program on the sixth day. He is a member of the National Grand Opera Company, which will sing the prologue to Congressman Fred S. Jackson's address.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Bower of Goshen are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Michael. They will remain through Chautauqua.

Mrs. Harvey McFeeley is visiting relatives in Argos.

To Improve Michigan Road.

There is a plan now on foot—backed by Carl G. Fisher of Indianapolis and having the approval of Governor Ralston—to arrange for a day of work on the Michigan road between Indianapolis and South Bend. The plan is to interest thousands of people along the road to unite and in one day of concerted effort repair the road. The worst stretch is said to be between Loganaspott and South Bend. E. A. Stoll of South Bend is promoting the work in this section. A similar plan was recently tried with marked success on the road between Niles and South Bend.

Rabbits Are Destructive.

The farmers are complaining of great damage done by the hordes of rabbits that infest the country. Since the law prohibiting hunting with ferrets was passed about two years ago by the state legislature, the little animals have multiplied in countless numbers and are proving a great menace to young fruit trees and truck gardens. Several cases have been reported where great fields of cabbage plants have been totally destroyed.—Winamac Republican.
